"Section 127. In cases where members * * * enlist for active service in time of war, or members of the national guard who may be ordered to war, their situations may be filled by the foreman: Provided, That upon reporting for duty the situations formerly held by these members shall be restored to them."

Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Newspaper Publishers' Association approves that action and recommends that all members of the association propose to local unions with which they have contracts that a similar course be taken respecting said agreements.

It will be noted that the above recommendation is made to all members of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association having contracts with typographical unions, whether parties to International Arbitration Agreements or not.

It must be understood, however, that in order to make this recommendation effective a memorandum covering its acceptance must be agreed to by employers, and signed and attached to existing local contracts.

Complying with the instructions of the International Board of Arbitration, President Scott and Chairman Kellogg issued a joint circular recommending that the following memorandum be attached to all contracts between employers and typographical unions made prior to May 1, 1917, and be included in contracts entered into subsequent to that date:

It is agreed between the employer (or employers) and the union, parties to this contract, that the situations of employes who enlist or are enrolled for service in time of war may be filled during their absence by the foreman of the department in which they are employed. Provided, That upon reporting for duty the situations formerly held by these employes shall be restored to them.

This provision shall not be construed as requiring the employer to restore a situation which may have been abolished through a reduction in the force, as provided in section 121 of the general laws of the International Typographical Union for 1916, the understanding being that employes covered by this provision shall suffer no loss of priority rights or standing during their absence.

If in restoring apprentices to their situations the total number employed shall exceed the number allowed by the local contract, the parties to this agreement will exert every reasonable effort to make provision for any apprentices who may be displaced.

The above provisions are not intended to require a foreman to fill the situation of an employe who is absent for the reason above given or to compel the re-employment of any employe who because of any physical disability may be unable to perform the duties required in the situation formerly held by him.

Definite Plans for the Instruction of Apprentices.

During the past year earnest efforts have been made to inaugurate a more thorough system for the training of our apprentices. In the report of the committee having charge of this work will be found certain definite recommendations which merit the thoughtful consideration of every member of this union.

It is a pleasure to state that employers in both branches of the industry are lending their co-operation and within the next year the foundation for a permanent system of instruction owned absolutely by the International Union will be established and conducted from our headquarters in Indianapolis. This is a business proposition, pure and simple, and while time and patience may be required to obtain the full co-operation of our subordinate unions and all employers, we must accept this new responsibility and overcome any obstacles which we may encounter.

Old Age Pension Receipts and Expenditures.

As predicted in this report one year ago, there has been a marked increase in the expenditures from the old age pension fund during the past year. While the total receipts and the total expenditures for the past twelve months have produced but a small deficit, it must be remembered that an item of $23,282.75 in interest is included in the receipts for the year.

The definite warning contained in the following summary of receipts and expenditures should not be disregarded:

Receipts—Assessment	$332,934 40
Interest	23,282 75
Refunds	50 00
Total receipts		$356,267 15
Expenditures—Pensions	$351,505 00
Expenses	5,187 30
Total expenditures		$356,692 30

Digitized by Google

That provision in the pension law which permits a member of but ten years' standing to be placed on the pension roll at the age of 70 should be repealed. When this amendment was adopted there was some justification for the law. That justification has ceased to exist, and it is not fair that those of our members who join the union at the age of 21 or thereabouts should be assessed to pay pensions to members who join at the age of 55 or later. It is a question whether members who work regularly two days each week are legally entitled to continue on the pension roll. We may as well realize the fact that if we are to continue this extremely liberal interpretation of our pension law we must pay for it by an increased assessment.

Mortuary Fund Assessments and Expenditures.

During the past fiscal year the mortuary benefits paid amounted to practically $300,000, an increase of $25,000 over the preceding year. The receipts and expenditures may be briefly summarized as follows:

Receipts—Assessment	$333,589 91
Interest	9,666 53
Bequests and refunds	662 08
Total receipts		$343,918 52
Expenditures—Benefits	$298,476 88
Expenses	5,383 66
Total expenditures		$303,860 54

There is considerable satisfaction in the knowledge that our mortuary fund is on a sound foundation under normal conditions. The members of this union must realize, however, that we shall be compelled to meet abnormal conditions during the coming year at least. With more than five hundred members of our Canadian unions now under arms, and with the enrollment of thousands of our members in war service under the Stars and Stripes, this fund may be drawn upon heavily during the coming twelve months. Any proposed legislation affecting this fund must be very carefully scrutinized.

Open-Shop Contracts and "Special Dispensations."

Conceived in malice and deliberately intended to reflect discredit on the officers and representatives of the International Union, Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 has submitted a wonderful declaration of policy in the form of a proposed constitutional amendment.

It is only fair to those subordinate unions whose officers and members have been thus maliciously though covertly insulted that the evolutions of this Chicago boomerang be given consideration in this report. Here comes the boomerang:

CHICAGO TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION No. 16.
332 South La Salle Street.

CHICAGO, April 5, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of Subordinate Unions of the International Typographical Union:

At a regular meeting of Chicago Typographical Union, held March 25, 1917, the following proposition was endorsed and the officers instructed to print and circulate the same among subordinate unions, requesting endorsement thereof in order that the necessary number of endorsements be secured to have the proposition submitted to a referendum of the members of the International Typographical Union.

Amend the constitution of the International Typographical Union by adding a new article, as follows:

ARTICLE XIX—POLICY.

Section 1. The International Typographical Union recognizes the open shop as the arch enemy of unionism; therefore, all subordinate unions and the executive council of the International Typographical Union, and any and all persons acting for or representing, in any capacity whatsoever, any subordinate union, or tne International Typographical Union, or the executive council, are hereby prohibited from inserting in any scale, contract or agreement any open-shop clause or provision, or any clause or provision that might or could be construed as an open-shop clause or provision, or any clause or provision that could or might be interpreted or construed as permitting any non-union man or men to be employed in any union office; PROVIDED, HOWEVER, THAT THIS SECTION SHALL NOT BE HELD OR UNDERSTOOD AS IN ANY WAY LIMITING THE POWERS AND USAGES OF SUBORDINATE UNIONS IN THEIR EFFORTS TO UNIONIZE NON-UNION OFFICES.

Section 2. Subordinate unions, and any and all persons representing them, and the International Typographical Union, and any and all persons representing it, are hereby expressly prohibited from submitting to arbitration or conciliation, in any form whatsoever, any proposition which contemplates, or which might be construed as contemplating the establishment of an open-shop condition, or which permits or might be construed as permitting the employment of non-union men in union offices.

Section 3. No contract or agreement with any national association of employers shall be signed by the International Typographical Union or any of its representatives until and after the same shall have been published in THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL for at least two issues and then adopted by a majority vote of the members of the International Typographical Union at an election for that purpose. Such election to be held not later than thirty days following the last publication thereof.

So far as the first two sections of this proposition are intended to reflect discredit on the officers of the International Union, the Chicago boomerang misses completely. In offices covered by contracts entered into under the International Arbitration agreements, the right of an employer to hire non-union men can not be submitted to arbitration. That has been the invariable ruling made by the president of the International Union and concurred in by the chairman of the Special Standing Committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association for many years.

The weasel clause in the Chicago proposition is at the end of the first section, which is intended to permit and legalize open-shop contracts if made by subordinate unions.

The Chicago newspaper scale has been in the process of negotiation since December, 1914. On two occasions the International Union has been asked to abrogate the local contract through convention action. Both requests have been properly and emphatically denied.

One of No. 16's several scale committees had the courage to present certain recommendations to the union. The report of this committee was promptly rejected, and the members of the committee were assailed as advocates of the open shop because the proposed contract submitted contained a section as follows:

Sec. 2. The union agrees to furnish during the life of this agreement a sufficient number of competent workmen to set the type, operate the machine, and do all work required to be done under the terms of this agreement. If the work of the publisher calls for the employment of more help than the union is able to furnish, the publisher shall have the right to employ other help temporarily; such help so employed to be replaced by union help whenever the union is able to supply the same.

Upon this peg hangs the proposed amendment to the constitution submitted by Chicago Typographical Union No. 16. In this paragraph of the report of the union's scale committee the authors of the proposed amendment discovered the arch enemy of unionism and the necessity for enacting a law which would restrain the officers of the International Union from submitting to arbitration a question which they invariably have refused to arbitrate, and which is distinctly recognized as non-arbitrable in the agreements between the International Union and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America.

The clumsy bunglers who are responsible for the mismanagement of the Chicago newspaper scale negotiations have kept that union in a blind alley for more than two and one-half years. In their efforts to distract attention from their own miserable incompetence and stupidity they have seized every opportunity to create an impression that the officers of the International Union were in some way responsible for a series of local blunders which have no parallel in the history of the typographical union.

In their anxiety to cast suspicion on the officers of the International Union the authors of the Chicago boomerang, unintentionally and through stupid ignorance, perhaps, have assailed the integrity and unionism of the officers and members of a large number of sister organizations, who have consistently demonstrated their ability to manage successfully their own internal affairs and scale negotiations.

It is doubtful if the members of New York Typographical Union No. 6 require any advice or suggestions from the authors of the Chicago boomerang. Nor can it be conceded that the Chicago brand of unionism is in any way superior to that of New York. The contracts between "Bix Six" and New York Branch No. 1 Printers' League of America and the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America contain this clause:

It also being understood and agreed that in case of the failure of New York Typographical Union No. 6 to furnish such number of competent workmen as may be required, then and then only members of the Printers' League shall be privileged to secure necessary help for the composing room elsewhere.

It is not to be expected that the members of Cincinnati Typographical Union No. 3 will greatly appreciate the left-handed compliment paid to them by the promoters of the Chicago proposition, for the Cincinnati newspaper contract includes the following provision:

Should Cincinnati Typographical Union No. 3 be unable at any time to furnish workmen, and other help is called in by the office, such help shall be displaced by members of the Cincinnati Typographical Union No. 3 at the end of any day when the union is able to furnish workmen.

That these Chicago statesmen should have inadvertently included Houston Typographical Union No. 87 under the "open shop" classification is most unkind, to say the least. The Houston newspaper contract contains this provision:

It is agreed * * * that the said party of the second part shall at all times during the life of this contract truly and faithfully discharge the obligations imposed upon it by furnishing a sufficient number of competent men to do the work required by the party of the first part under this contract, and, failing to do so, party of the second part shall have the right to employ any help available until sufficient men are furnished.

Certainly the members of Forth Worth Typographical Union No. 198 are not advocates of the open shop, as defined by the Chicago proposition. The newspaper contract in Fort Worth says:

If at any time the union fails to supply sufficient competent men the publishers may employ any members of the International Typographical Union that they can secure. It is further agreed that the publishers in such event may advertise for union men in the name of the union, or they may employ enough non-union men to meet the emergency requirements only.

The members of Dallas Typographical Union No. 173 require no certificate of character from the Chicago censors. The Dallas newspaper contract includes this provision:

It is further agreed that if at any time the union fails to supply sufficient competent men, the publishers may employ any member of the International Typographical Union that it can secure. It is further agreed that the publishers in such event may advertise for union men in the name of the union, or they may employ enough non-union men to meet emergency requirements, while emergency exists only.

Nor do the members of Galveston Typographical Union No. 28 deserve to be classed as open shoppers simply because the Galveston newspaper agreement contains this provision:

It is further agreed that if at any time the union fails to supply sufficient competent and reliable men, the publishers may employ any member of the International Typographical Union that it can secure. It is further agreed that the publishers in such event may advertise for union men in the name of the union or they may employ enough non-union men to meet emergency requirements.

It is doubtful if the members of Duluth Typographical Union No. 136 will concede that the Chicago standard of unionism is higher than that of Duluth. The Duluth newspaper contract says:

Provided, however, that if at any time the union is unable to or fails to supply sufficient union men to meet the requirements the Duluth Newspaper Publishers' Association may employ non-union men and may, if desired, retain such men permanently, provided the men are competent and apply for admission and are admitted to the union.

In its travels the Chicago boomerang hits Milwaukee Typographical Union No. 23, the members of which are not in urgent need of any suggestions from Chicago or elsewhere. The following is from the Milwaukee newspaper contract:

Provided, that in the event said party of the second part shall at any time be unable to furnish sufficient help, this agreement shall not become inoperative, but said party of the first part shall then have the right to employ workmen not members of said Milwaukee Typographical Union No. 23, provided the adopted scale of wages is paid; provided, however, that the employer shall have the privilege of retaining such substitute help, if desired, for a period of not more than thirty days, even though such substitute does not desire to affiliate with the local union.

The members of Rochester Typographical Union No. 15 are included in the insinuation promulgated by the Chicago censors. The following is from the Rochester newspaper contract:

Whenever the party of the second part can not supply the number of competent men required by the party of the first part, non-union men may be employed until such time as competent union men are obtained.

The job contract approved by the members of Baltimore Typographical Union No. 12 requires editing, if the Chicago standard is to be observed, as it contains this provision:

If the party of the second part is unable to furnish such help, the party of the first part may employ such other help as is needed, provided they immediately make application for membership in Baltimore Typographical Union No. 12.

The members of Montreal Typographical Union No. 176 no doubt will be surprised to learn that this section in their newspaper contract does not meet with the approval of the Chicago statesmen:

It is agreed that in consideration of the publisher employing in its newsroom only members in good standing of said union, that the Montreal Typographical Union will supply on demand a sufficient number of competent men to operate said newsroom efficiently, and that in default of the union to supply such men within a reasonable time, then men not members of the union may be employed.

The members of Springfield Typographical Union No. 158 also have failed to measure up to the standard prescribed in the Chicago proposition. The Springfield newspaper contract says:

Provided, if at any time Springfield Typographical Union No. 158 fails, for any reason, to supply a sufficient number of competent and satisfactory members of Springfield Typographical Union No. 158, the party of the first part may employ any members of the International Typographical Union that it can secure, it may advertise for men in the name of Springfield Typographical Union No. 158 or it may employ enough non-union men to meet requirements, with the understanding that if non-union men are employed they may be retained permanently if desired, if they are competent and make immediate application for membership in Springfield Typographical Union No. 158, and are admitted.

It is to be hoped that the members of Troy Typographical Union No. 52 will not be discouraged simply because the following section in their newspaper contract does not meet with the approval of the Chicago critics:

Provided, if, at any time, Troy Typographical Union No. 52 fails, for any reason, to supply a sufficient number of competent and satisfactory members of Troy Typographical Union No. 52, the parties of the first part may employ any members of the International Typographical Union that they can secure. They may advertise for men in the name of Troy Typographical Union No. 52, or they may employ enough non-union men to meet their requirements until the union supplies competent men.

Pueblo Typographical Union No. 175 is not a large organization, but its members have established a pretty fair scale in that jurisdiction, and they will be able to survive the criticism contained in the Chicago declaration. The following is from the Pueblo scale:

Provided, however, that if the party of the first part fails to furnish competent workmen in sufficient number to perform the services required by said party of the second part in said departments, then said party of the second part may provide for such competent workmen as it may require until such time as the party of the first part procures competent union men for such work.

In recent years the members of Boston Typographical Union No. 13 have been quite successful in their scale negotiations. The members of No. 13 may be astonished, but will not be unduly alarmed to learn that the following provision in their job contract is not approved in Chicago:

If the party of the second part is unable to furnish such help, the party of the first part may employ such other help as is needed, provided they immediately make application for membership in Boston Typographical Union No. 13.

The problems which confront the officers and members of our smaller organizations are not less difficult than those encountered in the larger cities. One of these problems is to fulfil that obligation of a contract which requires a subordinate union to furnish a sufficient number of men. In order to guard against the cancellation of their contracts, many subordinate unions have included clauses in their agreements permitting the employment of non-members until members of the union can be obtained. Sections of this character have been included in scores of contracts for years. Here are a few of them:

From the Lewistown newspaper contract:

Provided, that when it is impossible to obtain such members, others may be employed, but only until such time as union members can be procured.

From the Flint newspaper contract:

In the event of extra men or substitutes for regular men being required, the union agrees to furnish them, and in the event of their being unable to do so, the office shall be entitled under such circumstances to employ any men available.

From the Aberdeen, S. D., newspaper contract:

Should the Aberdeen Typographical Union No. 564 be unable at any time to furnish workmen, and other help is called in by the office, such help shall be displaced by members of Typographical Union No. 564 at the end of any day when the union is able to furnish workmen.

From the St. Augustine newspaper contract:

In the event that the party of the second part fails to furnish the necessary competent workmen, the party of the first part is privileged to obtain workmen outside of the union.

From the Owensboro newspaper contract:

It is further agreed that if the union fails or neglects to supply sufficient competent and satisfactory men the publisher shall be free to employ such non-union men as may be necessary, and to retain the non-union men permanently in his service, providing such men immediately apply for membership in the union.

From the Prince Albert newspaper contract:

Should men be unobtainable through the union, other help may be employed at union rates of pay and union conditions under a permit issued by the local secretary, with the understanding that if non-union men are employed they may be retained permanently if desired if they are competent and make immediate application for membership in the Typographical Union No. 705. Always providing that they are not charged with "ratting" or that they have not been expelled from the union.

From the St. Cloud newspaper contract:

It is further agreed, that in case the office is stuck for want of help and a union man can not be secured the Times Publishing Company has the right to put to work any man until a union man can be secured, but in no case is such a man to be retained longer than thirty days, if the union can supply the necessary help.

From the Keokuk, Iowa, newspaper contract:

In cases of emergency a non-union man may be employed temporarily until a union man can be obtained, provided he is eligible for membership in the union and the scale is paid.

From the Portland (Me.) newspaper contract:

Provided, that if the party of the second part fails to supply a sufficient number of competent and satisfactory members of said union, the party of the first part may employ any member of the International Typographical Union that it can secure, or it may employ enough non-union journeymen to meet requirements, with the understanding that, if non-union men are employed, they may be retained permanently, if desired, if they are competent and make application for membership in Portland Typographical Union No. 66.

From the Superior (Wis.) newspaper contract:

Sec. 2. As a condition of this contract and agreement, it is mutually agreed and understood that when the said union does not furnish union men as above stated that the said publishers and employing printers may employ other than union printers until such deficiency is supplied.

From the Ashtabula newspaper contract:

Provided that when it is impossible to obtain such members, others may be employed, but only until such time as union members can be procured.

From the Middletown newspaper contract:

It is further provided, if at any time Middletown Typographical Union No. 463 fails to supply a sufficient number of competent men, the party of the first part may employ any members of the International Typographical Union that it can secure, it may advertise for men in the name of Middletown Typographical Union No. 463, or it may employ enough non-union men to meet requirements, with the understanding that if non-union men are employed they may be retained permanently if desired if they are competent and make application and are admitted to membership in Middletown Typographical Union No. 463.

From the La Crosse newspaper contract:

Provided, that if the secretary can not furnish union men, non-union men can be taken on, but they must be released as soon as union men can be furnished.

From the Anniston (Ala.) newspaper contract:

None but members in good standing of the International Typographical Union shall be employed in any office entering into contract with the Anniston Typographical Union, except when it is impossible to obtain such members, and then only until such time as union members can be procured.

From the Marshalltown newspaper contract:

Members in good standing of Marshalltown Typographical Union No. 414 shall always be preferred whenever they are available and competent to do the work to which they are assigned.

From the Santa Fe newspaper contract:

The party of the first part agreed to employ only competent members of Santa Fe Typographical Union No. 405, or of the International Typographical Union, in the above-mentioned composition departments, unless such union printers can not be secured.

Digitized by Google

From the Rome newspaper contract:

Should Rome Typographical Union No. 371 be unable at any time to furnish workmen, and other help is called in by the office, such help shall be displaced by members of Rome Typographical Union at the end of any day when the union is able to furnish workmen.

From the Waterbury, Conn., newspaper contract:

It is further provided, if at any time Typographical Union No. 329 fails to supply a sufficient number of competent and satisfactory men, the party of the first part may employ any members of the International Typographical Union that it can secure, it may advertise for men in the name of Typographical Union No. 329, or it may employ enough non-union men to meet requirements, with the understanding that if non-union men are employed they may be retained permanently if desired, if they are competent and make application and become members of Typographical Union No. 329.

From the Racine newspaper contract:

Provided, that employers may hire non-unionists in case of necessity, upon obtaining the consent of Racine Typographical Union, and the party of the first part hereby agrees to use his utmost endeavors to supply the parties of the second part with competent help as needed.

From the Frankfort (Ky.) newspaper contract:

It is further agreed that if the union fails or neglects to supply sufficient competent and satisfactory men the State Journal Company shall be free to employ such non-union men as may be necessary, and to retain the non-union men permanently in its service, providing such men immediately apply for membership in the union.

From the Blue Grass newspaper contract:

It is agreed by the said party of the second part that, for and in consideration of the covenants entered into and agreed to by the said party of the first part, it shall at all times during the life of this agreement truly and faithfully discharge the obligations imposed upon it by furnishing men capable of setting the type and operating the machines of the Lexington Leader Company, but if the union should fail, or neglect, to supply such help in ample time to prevent delay in the issue of the Leader after such demands shall have been made upon the chairman of the chapel, it shall be proper for the Leader Company to secure such help from any source possible and retain such help permanently in its employ, provided such help shall be eligible and shall immediately make application to become a member of the union.

From the Meridian newspaper contract:

Provided, when union men are not obtainable, the foreman shall have the right to employ such other help as is obtainable.

From the Elizabeth, N. J., newspaper contract:

Section 12. The Journal shall employ only members of Typographical Union No. 150; provided, that said union shall be able to furnish enough competent men to enable the Journal to issue its publication promptly and regularly; otherwise, said Journal may employ printers temporarily until said union is able to supply the men needed.

From the Charleston, W. Va., newspaper contract:

Section 7. Members of this union shall not work with non-union men of any craft if union men of that craft are obtainable within this jurisdiction.

From the Madison, Wis., newspaper contract:

In cases of emergency, if the union is unable to furnish help, on request of the foreman, then non-union help may be employed. Such person or persons shall have the privilege of making application for membership in the union, and may be retained in the employ of the office if elected to membership.

Th authors of the Chicago proposition have demonstrated that they are novices in the art of hurling the boomerang. In this particular exhibition the weapon aimed at the officers of the International Union has missed them completely, but in its travels it has hit the officers and members of more than fifty subordinate unions who by inference have been classed as open shoppers.

Before attempting to censor the action of other subordinate unions, it would seem in better taste for the shyster politicians in Typographical Union No. 16 to edit some of the agreements which have been issued in their own back yard. Here is one of them:

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS COVERED BY THE SETTLEMENT BETWEEN
EDWIN R. WRIGHT AS PRESIDENT OF TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 16
AND CHURCH PUBLISHING HOUSE

I. Church Publishing House agrees:

1. To maintain the forty-eight-hour week throughout its shop, and to pay 50 cents per hour for the day work and 55 cents per hour for night work and the present union scale for piecework to journeymen printers. In the event of a change of hours or wages differing from those of present date, the same shall be considered in conference to be held within one week thereafter.

2. To reinstate all union members who left its employ or were discharged on or after February 5, 1916, viz., Christians, Harrison, Preston, Johnson, Connors, Gardner, Fagan and Pelzer.

3. To employ one union proofreader whenever a vacancy occurs in its proofreading department.

4. To employ a union machinist-operator in its linotype department who shall work solely as a machinist until either under the rules of the union or by special dispensation he is permitted to spend part time operating a machine.

5. To cease to employ more than two apprentices when one of its present apprentices shall graduate and become a journeyman, unless in the meantime the number of journeymen printers employed by it shall entitle it under union regulations to more than two apprentices.

6. To offer no objection should Otto, Mrs. Hire and Rob Grosser, or either of them, wish to join the union.

7. To employ no non-union printers in filling vacancies occurring hereafter in their composition department.

II. Mr. Wright agrees:

a. To find other employment for operator Fagan whenever his services are no longer required by Church Publishing House.

b. To offer operator Hull, at present employed by Church Publishing House, an opportunity to join the union and if he accepts, then to assist him in securing employment elsewhere.

c. To permit Church Publishing House to employ three apprentices until such time as one of said apprentices shall graduate.

d. To permit Church Publishing House to continue the employment of its present proofreader until a vacancy shall occur in said department, after which a union proofreader shall be employed.

e. To permit Church Publishing House to retain its present foreman or superintendent.

f. To permit the Church Publishing House to retain the services of Mrs. Hire; to allow Rob Grosser (learner on machine) to continue such apprenticeship. Upon completion of same he is to receive either piece or time scale and join the union or vacate. Grosser, during the interim of practice on machine, not to be considered as an apprentice.

g. To permit Benedict and Manor, now employed by Church Publishing House, to make application to the union if they desire, and should they join the union, to endeavor to furnish them employment without unnecessary loss of time.

h. Whenever Church Publishing House shall report to him that the entire time of the machinist-operator is not required to work as machinist, then to take up the matter with the operator and with the union authorities and honestly endeavor to secure a special dispensation to permit said machinist-operator to spend his spare time operating a linotype machine.

III. This adjustment and the necessary changes required by it shall be effective on and after Monday, March 13, 1916.

Dated this 9th day of March, A. D., 1916.

(Signed). CHURCH PUBLISHING HOUSE,
By CHARLES V. CLARK, Agent and Attorney.
EDWIN R. WRIGHT,
President Chicago Typographical Union No. 16.

This contract illustrates the "powers and usages of subordinate unions" as exercised in Chicago in March, 1916, and the last clause of section 1 of the constitutional amendment submitted by Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 is intended to legalize and authorize subordinate unions to enter into such contracts without the sanction of the president of the International Union as required by section 165 of our general laws.

The boomerang thrown from Chicago for the purpose of discrediting the officers and members of other unions has completed its flight by raising a lump on the heads of the individuals who threw it.

Deserved Compliments for Our Representatives.

It is only fair to the earnest men through whose efforts many scale controversies and other disputes are adjusted that a few of the many complimentary letters received be included in this report:

SANDUSKY, OHIO, June 10, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. SCOTT—As president of Sandusky Typographical Union No. 237, I desire to thank you for sending Representative Pendergast to settle the differences which have existed here since and previous to January 1, 1915. It certainly was a pleasure to accompany him on conferences held with the publishers in the successful termination of our scale and securing of contracts. In one of my previous reports I stated we were apparently drifting from our goal, but Mr. Pendergast's diplomacy and courteous treatment has produced a cementation of friendly feeling between employer and employe which I hope can not be broken. Thanking you again for sending Representative Pendergast here and hoping he may continue his splendid work in other fields in the same courteous and businesslike manner, I remain, Fraternally yours,

JOHN BEVERICK, President No. 237.

The following letter is from the president of London Typographical Union No. 133:

LONDON, ONT., October 14, 1916.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. SCOTT—Permit me to extend, on behalf of myself and the membership of No. 133, our sincere gratitude for the service rendered by you in our recent organization work. Your representative, J. E. Pendergast, proved himself an untiring worker, in the face of the most disheartening conditions, and has brought about results of the most gratifying character to the executive of No. 133. In a word, in over a quarter of a century's experience I had never met such religious earnestness of purpose and loyalty to principle and fairness as has characterized his work in this district. I feel sure you will never have cause to regret your action in calling the gentleman to such a field of labor. Again thanking you for kind favors to myself and No. 133 in particular, I am,

Yours fraternally,

A. H. WHEATLEY.

SCRANTON UNION PRAISES CORLESS.

The following letter is from the scale committee of Scranton Typographical Union No. 112:

SCRANTON, PA., December 29, 1916.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union:

MY DEAR MR. SCOTT—It is with a feeling of deep gratefulness on the part of the scale committee of Scranton Typographical Union that we inform you of the successful termination of our conferences with the Scranton proprietors for the new wage agreement of No. 112.

No more appropriate present for the yuletide season could possibly be given our members than the new scale which Representative William Corless succeeded in finally adjusting after the scale committee had reached a dangerous precipice in the closing hours of our deliberations.

While the scale committee worked diligently and faithfully through the past four months to secure an increase for our members, we feel that an injustice would be done a capable and efficient officer if we did not mention the work of Representative William Corless.

During the conference between the scale committee and the proprietors in which Mr. Corless took part he displayed the tact of a leader well groomed in his work to smooth out at the psychological moment all knotted questions that arose and paved the way for what we consider the best scale in our state at present.

Such representatives as Mr. Corless are a credit and a valuable asset to our organization, and we feel sure we voice the sentiment of our entire membership in extending to you the thanks of Scranton Typographical Union for your foresight in assigning Mr. Corless here to assist us in finally adjusting the scale.

With best wishes and the compliments of the season, we remain

Fraternally yours,

A. J. O'Malley, Chairman;
Frank McTague,
Clifford Moore,
Joseph Battle,
Peter J. Coleman, Secretary.

PHŒNIX PLEASED WITH REPRESENTATIVE SCOTT'S SERVICES.

The president of Phœnix Typographical Union No. 352 sends the following letters:

Phœnix, Ariz., September 26, 1916.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Mr. Scott—After two months' negotiation an agreement was reached yesterday between the employing printers of Phœnix and the scale committee of No. 352.

The increase amounts to 6 per cent in book and job offices, 5¾ per cent on afternoon papers and 5 per cent on morning newspapers. On October 1 the scale will be, respectively, $4.25, $4.75 and $5.25 for eight hours. The new agreement is for three years and will expire October 1, 1919.

It was a hard fight and for some time looked like trouble for No. 352. After a deadlock between the employers and the scale committee of about two weeks, Representative Scott of Los Angeles was requested, through you, to visit Phœnix. Upon his arrival last Thursday, at the request of the employers, a conference was held. From then until yesterday afternoon at 5:15, when No. 352 unanimously adopted the recommendation of the scale committee, it was almost a continuous performance, with reluctance to concede but remarkable good nature prevailing on both sides.

I wish to express my appreciation of the assistance rendered by Representative Scott, and I believe a large majority of the membership of No. 352 will agree with me in saying that his efforts were timely, thorough and just, and will result in much good to the members of Phœnix local.

It is my belief that the entire affair has been gone through and concluded without a sore spot that will work injury to any one. Moreover, it appears that the employers realize that Phœnix can more nearly approach a model printing town by closer affiliation with the typographical union.

One proprietor has suggested that a committee composed of members of the typographical union and representatives of the employers be created to promote the general welfare of the industry.

Kindly give or direct me to any information that will assist the typographical end in case the suggestion is considered by other employers.

Thanking you for your attention and any information, and again expressing gratitude for the services of Representative Scott, I am

Yours fraternally,

Ben F. Wood, President No. 352.

These resolutions were adopted by No. 352:

Phœnix, Ariz., October 2, 1916.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Newton Claypool Building, Indianapolis, Ind.:

My Dear Mr. Scott—The members of Phœnix Typographical Union are well pleased with the new contract recently negotiated by the scale committee with the able assistance of Representative Charles T. Scott.

Following is a copy of a resolution that was passed at our meeting yesterday:

"Whereas, Through the efforts of International Representative Charles T. Scott we have been successful in negotiating a new contract with the employing printers of this city at an increase of $1.50 per week; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to Representative Scott, a copy to International President Scott, and also be spread upon the minutes of this organization."

Thanking you personally for your promptness in sending Mr. Scott to this city, I am

C. E. TRACY.

Reno Typographical Union No. 611 sends the following:

RENO, NEV., March 18, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR SIR—Representative Charles Scott arrived in Reno Sunday evening, March 11, and Monday we undertook negotiations with the Journal management, who, by the way, are a hard proposition to deal with. Mr. Scott, after hearing the objection to the raise in scale advanced by the Journal, came to the conclusion that to argue the matter further on the stand they had taken would be futile and advised them to pay the scale.

Their main point of objection was that "hard wheat in Kansas, canned corn in Stamford, Conn., butter in Imperial Valley, Cal., etc.," were not any higher than Reno prices and their scales are lower.

Mr. Scott proved to be a fine fellow and an efficient officer, and the boys of Reno Union join me in expressing thanks for your prompt response and your choice of so able a representative.

The affair, as it stands today, leaves no enemies for either the local or the International Union. Fraternally yours,

GEORGE F. SMITH, President Reno Union No. 611.

SEVERAL WARM COMPLIMENTS FOR CAMPBELL.

The following is from the secretary of Savannah Typographical Union No. 183:

SAVANNAH, GA., March 29, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. SCOTT—I am authorized by Savannah Typographical Union No. 183 to express to you the sincere appreciation of your interest in this local in sending Representative Campbell to this city to aid us in obtaining contracts from newspaper and job shops.

Mr. Campbell has gained the esteem and hearty co-operation of this entire local by his exceedingly efficient work while here. Too much praise can not be given him for his untiring efforts, which have been crowned with success, he having succeeded in obtaining a contract with the largest job shop in this part of the south for an increase of wages and overtime, and also an agreement with the afternoon paper and a strong chance of getting an agreement with the Morning News in the near future. He has also succeeded in getting contracts from several small shops.

It is not too broad an assertion to make when we state that Mr. Campbell is the only representative sent to this city who has accomplished something, justly showing that he is a "live wire" and on the job night and day (including Sundays).

Sincerely and fraternally yours,

W. S. MACFEELEY, Secretary No. 183.

President Palmer of St. Augustine sends this letter:

ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA., April 3, 1917.

M. G. Scott, President International Typographical Union:

DEAR SIR—I am sending under separate cover the contracts of the Meteor Publishing Company, the signatures for which Mr. Campbell was unable to obtain before leaving this city.

Mr. Campbell rendered valuable assistance indeed in securing a contract with the Record Company, as without his aid it is doubtful whether we could have secured an agreement of any kind. At a regular meeting Monday evening the union instructed the secretary by unanimous vote to write to you commending Mr. Campbell and expressing our appreciation for the valuable services rendered, and I wish to add a word—personally—in praise of the able and gentlemanly manner in which he handled himself and the matter he had in hand.

Sincerely and fraternally yours,

F. D. PALMER, President No. 588.

President Sowers of Columbia, S. C., writes as follows:

COLUMBIA, S. C., February 19, 1917.

M. G. Scott, President International Typographical Union:

DEAR SIR—At a meeting of this union, last Wednesday, when we adopted our scale of prices, the union instructed me to write you that it gave you a vote of thanks for the promptness with which you responded to our call for a representative. It also instructed me to state that the union was well pleased with the manner in which Mr. Campbell conducted negotiations. To this I wish to add my personal thanks. We were hopelessly deadlocked, and perhaps would have squabbled over a few minor points for some weeks, to say the least, and this might have led to something worse. It was a marvel to see Mr. Campbell bring things around to where both sides were willing to accept a reasonable compromise. By doing this we secured an increase ranging from $1 to $3 and everybody is satisfied. I consider Mr. Campbell's services worth considerably more to this union than their cost to the International.

Thanking you again for your promptness in coming to our assistance, I remain

Yours fraternally,

J. P. SOWERS, President No. 34.

The following is from Secretaty Broce of Johnson City:

JOHNSON CITY, TENN., November 7, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. SCOTT—At the regular meeting of Johnson City Typographical Union held on Monday, November 6, I was instructed by that body to extend thanks to you for your prompt response to our request for a representative to assist in negotiating contracts with the employers in this city.

We also wish to commend the work of Mr. Campbell, and the manner in which he conducted the negotiations. While the newspaper in this city was working the eight-hour day, the job shops were working nine, and Mr. Campbell, through his courteous treatment, secured the eight-hour day for the jobmen without decrease in pay, and the most pleasant relations are now existing between employer and employe in this city.

Fraternally yours,

H. P. BROCE, Secretary.

HANSON'S SERVICES APPRECIATED IN RALEIGH.

The following letter is from the retiring president of Raleigh:

RALEIGH, N. C., September 13, 1916.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. SCOTT—A word I wish to say for Mr. Hanson is that his work before the book commission has been all that could be desired; he impressed all he came in contact with as being a man who fights perfectly fair and as one who believes in what he is fighting for—not alone that it is best for union men, but that it is best for the entire community. While we did not get all we wanted, we got so much more than was expected by many of our members that we can claim a decided victory. New books adopted were union, and old books readopted that were non-union were adopted only after the price had been cut—and it was only because of this and the rule of the commission to keep acceptable books for two periods that I believe any non-union books were adopted. In instance of this, the Rand-McNally Company reduced the price of their geographies and got them adopted for another period, but failed to get any of their other bids accepted.

In fact, Mr. Hanson's work here has not only been beneficial to the typographical union, but has been a great benefit to the children of the entire state, in that he aided in getting better books adopted and in the fact that, as one member of the commission says, the children of this state will probably get some books cheaper for the next five years than the children of any other state are at present getting them.

Mr. Hanson was with us Labor day as our principal speaker, and his address created a very favorable impression on all sides. It was published complete in the principal state paper—the News and Observer—and was, I think, the very best rendering of union ideas and aims for this section.

Indeed, although it is delayed in the saying, I feel proud to have had a part in getting Mr. Hanson here—both to lead the textbook fight and also as our Labor day speaker.

Hoping you continued success in your choice of representatives, and thanking you for courtesies shown, I remain

Yours fraternally,

F. L. MORRIS.

PRAISE FOR PULVER FROM COLORADO AND NEW MEXICO.

The following letter is from Grand Junction Typographical Union No. 292:

GRAND JUNCTION, COLO., October 13, 1916.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. SCOTT—Representative Pulver has been here and left last Monday for home. As far as I know he straightened out the grievances referred to by one of the members in a letter to you. He found conditions, according to his report on file, not nearly as bad as was stated in the letter, but it was a very good thing that he came because he put things right, as well as put me right on several things of which I was deficient.

There was considerable hard feeling in regard to many things, but since Representative Pulver's trip that is apparently wiped out, and everything has been wiped out in charges and the like.

I believe I voice the sentiment when I say that the whole local thinks that Representative Pulver did exactly what was right and that it is money well spent. Those are my sentiments at least. Furthermore I will add that he is surely fair and the best man on the representative staff of the International Typographical Union.

No. 292 should be and I believe they are truly grateful to the executive head for their patience with a small local of this size when he himself knows something of the workings of a small local.

Again giving Representative Pulver a big boost and thanking you for your part in the matter, I remain

Fraternally yours,
C. W. CULHANE.

The following is from the secretary of a new local in New Mexico:

RATON, N. M., February 9, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR SIR—The members of Raton Union No. 773 desire to express to you the appreciation they feel for the courteous and efficient handling of the new local in this place by Frank Pulver.

Men of the type of Mr. Pulver are a credit to the craft, and their conduct of union affairs can not fail to promote not only better working conditions, but better co-operation and clearer understanding between employer and men.

Very respectfully yours,
ROY D. RAMAGE, Secretary.

PRAISE FOR KINSKEY, GADD, PHILLIPS AND BARRETT.

This letter is from the secretary of Peterborough Union:

PETERBOROUGH, ONT., March 12, 1917.

M. G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. SCOTT—As perhaps you are aware, our new agreement and scale of wages has been settled to the satisfaction of our members and the employing printers of this city, and the members of No. 248 wish to express their grateful appreciation of the manner in which the negotiations were carried out by Representative Kinskey. Also we wish to convey to the executive council and yourself our hearty thanks for the prompt way in which the officials of the International Typographical Union responded to our request for the services of an International representative. Our local is of the opinion that we have a good scale and agreement now, and venture to express the hope that the same will be published in The Bulletin.

Representative Kinskey carried out the negotiations without a hitch, and No. 248 is pleased to have the opportunity to bear evidence to the able manner in which he carried out his work.

Trusting that you will see your way clear to print our scale in The Bulletin, and with best wishes

Fraternally yours,
G. L. MYLAND, Secretary No. 248.

A letter from the secretary of No. 525 is in part as follows:

AMARILLO, TEXAS, November 6, 1916.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. SCOTT—Enclosed you will find the signed contracts of the Daily News Company, Loving Printing Company, H. B. Martin and Russell & Cockrell, which put into effect the final scale adopted by Amarillo Union on October 28. These contracts have all been signed since the day Representative Gadd left, with the exception of the Daily News Company. The business manager for this company had agreed to the signing, but the matter was delayed from day to day on one pretext or another until Saturday, when they were signed.

The contracts, as you will notice, cover a period of three years. The members generally are very well pleased with the increases, and there is no doubt but that the minimum scale has been greatly benefited.

The union as a whole desires to compliment Mr. Gadd on his handling of the affair. If it is permissible to say so, we found Mr. Gadd enthusiastic as well as conservative. We consider him above the average as a representative. At least three of the employers have paid him high compliments and stated that he was exactly the opposite to the kind of man they expected. And personally I am very much gratified that you saw fit to send Mr. Gadd our way.

Yours fraternally,
W. T. STANBERRY, Secretary No. 525.

The following is from Secretary Blair of Lancaster:

LANCASTER, PA., April 6, 1917.

John A. Phillips, Esquire, Philadelphia, Pa.:

DEAR SIR—Your successful conduct of negotiations for the settlement of the wage scale between Lancaster Typographical Union No. 70 and the employing printers of this city without any friction of consequence induces the organization to forward to you its sincere appreciation of your work here.

Wishing you continued success in your line of work, and again thanking you, I am.

Fraternally yours,
IVAN D. BAIR, Secretary-Treasurer No. 70.

Richmond Typographical Union No. 301 sends this letter:

RICHMOND, IND., January 12, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR SIR—I am sending you under separate cover contracts and agreements between the newspaper publishers and No. 301, which now only need your signature to become binding. Will you please affix your signature and return copies as soon as convenient?

I want to thank you for sending us so able a representative as Mr. Barrett. He was seen "on the job" all the time, and in such a manner as to merit the admiration of all with whom he came in contact. Again thanking you, I am,

Yours fraternally,
C. W. GENN, Secretary No. 301.

Relations with the American Federation of Labor.

The members of the International Typographical Union never have been slackers in the trade union movement. We neither ask nor expect special favors, but we do demand the square deal in all matters which affect the interests of this organization.

We have contributed to the support of the American Federation of Labor from the day of its birth, and we have no intention of withholding our support from any legitimate enterprise undertaken by the organized wage-earners of America. We have a right to expect and we do expect the full observance of the obligations which the officers and subordinate organizations of the American Federation of Labor owe to this International Union.

These obligations have been disregarded in many instances. The laws of the American Federation of Labor have been ignored and grossly violated repeatedly, and there is no assurance that any official attempt will be made to prevent a repetition of these illegal acts.

Until these conditions are remedied, the officers and members of our subordinate unions must be on their guard constantly. Unless we are prepared to accept the serious consequences of these illegal acts we must repudiate them promptly and without reservation.

Work for Our State and District Organizations.

Within the past year attempts have been made in several states to establish printing plants in reformatories and other state penal institutions. In some jurisdictions these plants have been established, and commercial printing heretofore the product of fair printing offices has been diverted to these penal institutions.

In other jurisdictions printing plants have been established in public schools and in institutions maintained for the care of juvenile delinquents. Some of the promoters of these juvenile sweatshops not only do printing for the local board of education and other municipal departments but reach out into the commercial field as well.

In most of the states child labor has been abolished by law, and in these jurisdictions if a private employer attempted to conduct one of these juvenile sweatshops he would be promptly and deservedly arrested and punished. Under the guise of "education," however, these sweatshops have been established in public schools and the work of the pupils is being exploited.

Our State and District organizations should be on guard to prevent the establishment of printing departments in penal institutions and juvenile sweatshops in our public schools.

Gain in Average Membership for the Year, 1,119.

The average paying membership for the fiscal year was 61,350. This is a gain of 1,119 over the preceding year. The average paying membership for the past nine years follows:

Average paying membership for 1909	44,921
Average paying membership for 1910	47,848
Average paying membership for 1911	51,807
Average paying membership for 1912	53,807
Average paying membership for 1913	55,614
Average paying membership for 1914	58,537
Average paying membership for 1915	59,571
Average paying membership for 1916	60,231
Average paying membership for 1917	61,350

Preserve the Files of the Monthly Bulletin.

While The Bulletin is mailed regularly each month to the presidents and secretaries of all subordinate unions, these copies are in no sense the personal property of the individual member. The members of subordinate unions should see to it that the files of The Bulletin are surrendered to their successors in office by retiring presidents and secretaries.

The five volumes of The Bulletin, with supplements, which have been issued include:

Arbitration board decisions	44
Contracts and scales	148
Executive council decisions	256
Letters	121
Miscellaneous items of interest	56
Total number of pages	1,332

From time to time members of subordinate unions ask to be placed on The Bulletin mailing list. There is no authority in law for such action, and if all these requests were granted in a few years the cost of printing and mailing The Bulletin would be materially increased. It is therefore suggested that the convention fix a nominal yearly subscription price to those who desire to be placed on The Bulletin mailing list.

Our House Is in Order and We Are Confident.

In a year which has been crowded with events by far too grave to be discussed here, the International Union has made considerable progress.

Our gross earnings show an increase of nearly four million dollars, and our expenditures for strikes have been reduced to a minimum.

By authority of the Baltimore convention the arbitration agreement between this union and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association has been renewed for five years.

By authority of a vote of the membership an arbitration agreement has been entered into between this union and the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America.

Definite plans for a permanent system of instruction for apprentices have been practically completed.

The capacity of the Home at Colorado Springs has been increased materially by the completion of the main building extension.

The International Union, through the Executive Council, has purchased $50,000 of the Liberty Loan bonds, and scores of our subordinate unions also have subscribed to this loan.

Hundreds of our members are serving their country with the allied forces in Europe, and thousands of others will follow the Stars and Stripes in the world's war now in progress.

We have put our house in order, and we have confidence in our ability to keep to the right path.

With best wishes, I am Fraternally,

M. Y. Scott

President.

REPORT OF VICE-PRESIDENTS

FIRST VICE-PRESIDENT.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—I herewith submit for your consideration a report covering briefly my work for the past year.

While I might chronicle in detail the results of my efforts, it is unnecessary to do so, as the more important matters coming under my purview as a member of the executive council will be covered in the report of that body or in the report of the president.

The negotiation of wage agreements, adjustment of disputes arising between employers and subordinate unions, organization work, arbitration board meetings, Board of Governors' meetings of the International Allied Printing Trades Association and general administrative work at headquarters in connection with the affairs of our union, have occupied my entire time.

During the year the following jurisdictions were visited in connection with the matters enumerated:

ALBANY, N. Y.

Albany Union No. 4 had for some weeks been unsuccessful in its efforts to adjust its scale with the job employers, the main difference between the contending parties being on the question of the competency line. An adjustment was reached granting the increase demanded and eliminating the competency line from the scale, leaving the matter of competency to the judgment of the executive board of the union in case of dispute. The agreement reached runs for two years, grants back pay, gives to the operators an increase of $1 per week and to all other employes of the composing room $2 per week divided into two periods. Beginning with the second year of the contract all employes will be on a flat scale basis.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA.

In Sioux City all attempts to adjust the scale with the job employers by conciliatory methods failed, owing to the attitude assumed by the employers. No. 180 enforced its demand and secured a $4 increase spread over a five-year period as follows: First year, $2; second year, 50 cents; third year, 50 cents; fourth year, 50 cents; fifth year, 50 cents, making the scale $24 during the last year of the agreement, which expires May 31, 1921. The apprentice provisions are also very complete in this agreement.

RACINE, WIS.

A five-year agreement was negotiated with the Racine publishers and employing printers granting to the members of No. 324 a $4 increase. The agreement calls for an increase of $1 per week the first year; $1 the second year; $1 the third year, and 50 cents each of the following two years, making the scale for operators $24 per week and for all other employes $22 during the last year of the contract. The night scale is $2 per week above that of the day scale and the machinist-operators receive $1 additional for each machine under their care. This adjustment makes a decided step in advance by Racine Union No. 324.

QUINCY, ILL.

Considerable difficulty was experienced in negotiating a new agreement for Quincy Union No. 59, but by continued effort and the invaluable assistance rendered by the local members an adjustment was reached granting an increase of $2.50 to all members employed in all offices, both newspaper and job. The agreement dates from October 1, 1916, and expires April 1, 1922. Under the terms of the agreement the old scale remains in effect for the first year; $1 is granted for the second and third years; $1 for the fourth year, and 50 cents for the last eighteen months of the contract. This brings the scale applying to job offices to $21.50 for handmen and $23.50 for operators and for evening papers to $23.50 for all employes. The night scale is $2 in excess of the day rate and machinist-operators receive $2.50 extra for one machine and $1.25 for each additional machine under their care.

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Separate agreements were negotiated with the publishers and job employers for Rockford Union No. 213. The agreement made with the newspapers runs for five years and calls for the following increases: Night work, handmen, $4; operators, $3. Day work, handmen, $3.50; operators, $3. This increase is spread over the period of the contract and in the last year of the same the scale for day work will be: Operators, $22, and handmen, $20 per week. The night scale will be $2 in excess of the day rate.

The agreement negotiated with the job employers runs for three years and calls for an increase of $3 per week all around, making the scale for operators $22 and for handmen $20 per week. Considerable difficulty was experienced in negotiating with the job employers on account of the refusal of No. 213 to sign an agreement giving to the employers the use of the typographical label. An allied council had been formed in Rockford, but the employers refused to recognize it. This position assumed by the employers blocked our efforts to negotiate signed contracts with the job employers, but the demands of the union in all other respects were accepted. In both agreements the apprentice regulations are very complete.

ELGIN, ILL.

Negotiations for Elgin Union No. 171 were successfully concluded and the contract covers a period of five years dating from June 1, 1916, and expiring May 31, 1921. The agreement calls for an advance of $1 the first year; 50 cents the second; $1 the third, and 50 cents the fourth. This is an increase of $3 for all members and beginning June 1, 1919, foremen will receive $26 per week, operators and head admen $24 per week, and floor and job men $22 per week.

JOLIET, ILL.

Services were rendered Joliet Union No. 194 in negotiating a three-year agreement with the publishers and job employers. A $2 increase was secured, $1 July 1, 1917, and $1 July 1, 1918. This brings the scale for all members to $23 per week, with a differential of $2 per week for night work.

GALESBURG, ILL.

On request of Galesburg Union No. 288 I visited that jurisdiction to render services in their scale negotiations. Conferences with the publishers and employers were held, but an agreement could not be reached granting the union its demands.

Among other reasons advanced by the employers for their refusal to accede to the demands of the union was one in which they claimed that the members of the union were not in sympathy with their demands, and that they would not prosecute the proposition to a final conclusion. An investigation of this statement proved to me that their information was based on fact, and so I notified the president of the union that it was my opinion that to prosecute the matter would, under the circumstances, be most unwise at the time and that therefore I would not proceed further in the matter. A year previously I had visited Galesburg to render services and at that time No. 288 was seeking to reaffirm its contract. This year the demand was for an increase of $6 per week.

Before leaving Galesburg I had an understanding with the employers that an adjustment of the scale would be made just as soon as possible, and in any event the matter would be taken up in the fall.

Some of the members of No. 288 were dissatisfied because results favorable to the union had not been obtained, and so I returned to Galesburg to give the members an opportunity to place themselves on record. A meeting was held and the issue discussed thoroughly, and the members voted to continue the present agreement until a more favorable time for the negotiation of a new one. At this meeting it was shown that the proposed increase as submitted by the union was favored by the members employed on the newspapers but was opposed by the members from the job branch, and so it was agreed that in the making of a new agreement the scales would be separated. I advised against this conclusion, but as the majority of the members were of the opinion that it was the correct solution of the matter it was decided to follow that course.

PEKIN, ILL.

A new agreement for Pekin Union No. 591 was negotiated which grants an increase of $2 per week to all members, beginning January 1, 1918. The agreement runs for two years, expiring March 1, 1919.

PERU, IND.

An increase of $3 per week is granted under the new agreement negotiated for Peru Union No. 97. The agreement is for three years and the increase is spread over that period, $1.50 per week for the first year; $1 per week for the second year, and 50 cents per week the third year. The agreement expires January 2, 1920.

RICHMOND, IND.

A one-year agreement was negotiated for Richmond Union No. 301 with the newspapers. Under the agreement an advance of $2 is granted, which makes the scale $21 per week for handmen and $23 per week for operators. The agreement is one of the most complete in the state and the members of No. 301 are to be congratulated on the work of their scale committeemen and officers in bringing the negotiations to so successful a conclusion.

WASHINGTON, IND.

An advance of $1 per week was secured by Washington Union No. 538. The agreement is for one year.

OTTAWA, ILL.

When the agreement between Ottawa Union No. 265 and the Ottawa publishers and employing printers expired an endeavor was made to negotiate an increase of $2 per week in the wage scale. Every effort on the part of the union to negotiate the agreement by conciliation failed and a strike was called. The employers then offered an advance of $1 per week and the members returned to work pending further settlement.

CANTON, ILL.

On the expiration of its contract Canton Union No. 342 asked that the contract be renewed for one year without change. One of the publishers insisted that the contract be amended by the insertion of a provision making it compulsory for members to give reasonable notice before quitting their situations. This demand of the publisher caused considerable feeling among the membership, but the matter was finally adjusted by the union deciding that each party should give notice of their intention one week in advance.

FOND DU LAC, WIS.

An effort was made to negotiate a three-year agreement for Fond du Lac Union No. 31. An advance of $2 per week for the first eighteen months and $2 for the second eighteen months of the contract was demanded. Agreement could have been reached granting an increase of $2 for eighteen months, but this the union refused to accept. As the publishers offered to arbitrate, the difficulty being on the wage only, the matter was referred to arbitration.

CHARLESTON, W. VA.

A visit was made to Charleston, W. Va., in connection with a controversy between the Gazette management and Charleston Union No. 146. Considerable feeling had been exhibited between the two parties, which finally culminated in the chapel striking the office. The strike lasted but a few hours and was called because the management of the office refused to allow the foreman to fulfil an agreement made with No. 146 to reinstate a member discharged for alleged incompetency. In discussing the matter with me the management insisted that some action be taken to discipline those responsible for the action taken, which it was contended was a violation of their contract with the union. Unquestionably the action of the chapel in walking out was illegal, but the circumstances under which the action was taken can be attributed to mismanagement on the part of the then business manager of the Gazette and the unwarranted actions of the foreman in discharging some of the old employes of the office and making conditions so intolerable for others that they resigned. My investigation led me to the conclusion that the management had employed this foreman for the express purpose of cleaning out the old force, and the accumulated evidence of his actions as presented to me by the representatives of No. 146 showed conclusively that by complying with orders of the management he was creating a condition which was bound to bring trouble.

The foreman having decided to take an appeal to the executive council from the action of the union in ordering reinstatement of the discharged member, the matter was dropped pending a decision by that body. The decision of the executive council has been published in the Bulletin. Some time later President Fraser, of No. 146, notified me that a new foreman had been placed in charge of the Gazette composing room and that the business manager had been deposed.

EL PASO, TEXAS.

President Scott having come into possession of authentic information that strained relations existed between the management of the El Paso Morning Times and the men employed in the composing room of that paper, I was directed to proceed there and adjust the difficulty. An investigation disclosed that the controversy was not one in connection with the scale of prices or hours, but was in connection with working conditions. The rules laid down for the guidance of members by the chapel were the points at issue, the management of the Times contending that their enforcement was in conflict with the terms of his contract with the union and created a condition that was becoming intolerable. A careful reading of these rules showed that in many instances the chapel had adopted and made effective rules which were in conflict with the terms of the contract with the Times and were therefore illegal.

A meeting of the executive board of No. 370 was called, the matter was laid before them and the board agreed that the rules in question were not operative under the contract. It was then decided that the chapel rules as then in effect should be eliminated entirely and that a committee from the chapel be appointed to draft a new set of rules, and that if the chapel desired any rule be made a part thereof which would in any way conflict with the provisions of the agreement in effect with the Times office, that said rule should be submitted to the management of the Times and their consent gained before the rule could be incorporated in the chapel laws and made effective. A meeting of the chapel was held and the action of the executive board concurred in.

This solution of the difficulty met with the full approval of the Times management and the matter was adjusted.

In connection with this case I desire to say that the entire controversy was caused through the unwise and illegal use of power by the Times chapel and that the officers of No. 370 were not only anxious that a friendly solution be found for the adjustment of the controversy, but that both they and the management of the Times extended every courtesy and help to bring about the conclusion reached.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.

I was directed to visit Springfield, Mo., to adjust a difficulty between the Springfield Leader and Springfield Union No. 158. The trouble arose in connection with a strike of the street carmen's union and the management of the Leader contended that because the Leader had not supported the strike, but had remained neutral, that the central trades and labor assembly, of which body a member of No. 158 was president, had placed a silent boycott on the Leader.

The management of the Leader also made emphatic protest against the publishing of a daily paper by the central trades and labor assembly, which was edited by a member of No. 158 and used as a boycott weapon against the Leader, contending that such actions on the part of members of Springfield Union No. 158 constituted a violation of the contract.

My investigation of the matter convinced me that the Leader had just cause for complaint, and the officers of No. 158 with whom I conferred were of the same opinion, but explained that they had been unable to do anything in the matter, as a majority of those of our members attending the meetings of the union were opposed to taking any action against the existing conditions.

While the central trades and labor assembly had not officially declared a boycott against the Leader, nevertheless there was, as the publisher of the Leader claimed, a silent boycott on his paper, and members of No. 158 were active in its support. This silent boycott had the same force as if it had been official and seriously interfered with the business of the Leader.

On account of certain circumstances an adjustment of the matter was impossible while I was in Springfield. The matter was therefore covered in a report to President Scott, who notified No. 158 that unless the boycott was repudiated action would be recommended to the executive council. That seemingly settled the matter for some time, but as this report goes to press a resolution is before the central trades and labor assembly which has for its purpose the placing of the Leader and the Republican (the latter being the other daily paper) on the unfair list, and Springfield Union No. 158 has threatened to withdraw from the central body if the resolution is adopted.

Other jurisdictions visited during the year on varied matters of importance were South Bend, Wabash, Muncie, Richmond, Michigan City and Huntington, Ind.; Chicago, Ill.; Milwaukee, Appleton and Madison, Wis.; St. Paul, Minn.; Detroit, Mich.; Cleveland, Ohio; Philadelphia, Pa.; Rochester and New York, N. Y.; St. Louis, Mo.; Baltimore, Md.; New Orleans, La., and Washington, D. C.

THE UNITED TYPOTHETÆ CONVENTION.

With President Scott I attended the convention of the United Typothetæ and Ben Franklin Clubs of America which was held in Atlantic City. At this convention the members of the typothetæ conducting union composing rooms formed a Closed Shop Division for the purpose of entering into an arbitration agreement with the International Typographical Union.

Later I attended, with the other members of the executive council, a joint conference of the two parties in New York city, at which the terms of the agreement were finally decided upon.

SCALE NEGOTIATIONS.

Decided progress has been made in the past year by subordinate unions in negotiating increased wage scales, the earnings of our members being $3,940,626 above that of a year ago.

It has been my observation in this work that local unions are endeavoring to have their agreements more complete than heretofore, and that where the agreements cover in detail the rules and regulations governing the conditions under which the members shall work, that the best results are obtained.

Too much care can not be exercised in drawing up scale agreements and a reference to the Bulletin, which is sent to the secretaries of subordinate unions monthly, will be found to be very helpful to scale committees in their work. All the information necessary to a complete scale agreement can be found in its pages. In some jurisdictions which I visited to render services in connection with scale negotiations I found that the scale committee had become discouraged because the demands of the union were not accepted by the employers immediately they were presented and further attempt to negotiate was abandoned. This should not be the case. Local committees should not consider that an agreement is impossible because they are rebuffed on their first attempt, but meetings with the employers should be continued, preferably in joint conference, and the proposed agreement should be discussed section by section. If the employers have submitted a counter proposition the same course should be pursued. By following this procedure invariably the local committees are able to agree. If a deadlock is reached on but a few provisions and a representative is called in his work is expedited and the results obtained are as a rule greater. Every possible effort should be extended by the local committee to close negotiations, and before presenting the union's demands they should be sure that the agreement is complete in all its phases and in accordance with the laws of the International Union.

THE JOB ARBITRATION AGREEMENT.

That the policy of co-operation through the medium of conciliation and arbitration has been successful needs no introduction to the members of the International Typographical Union, for the history of the progress made since the institution of the arbitration agreement with the American Newspaper Publishers' Association has proved its value many times to us in the past seventeen years. If, then, this policy governing our relations with the publishers has proved successful, may we not expect that a similar agreement with the book and job employers will be doubly successful when a comparison is made of the number of offices in the two divisions.

The adoption of this agreement by the members of the International Typographical Union means nothing less than a reiteration of our position on the principle of arbitration and that we stand for industrial peace, progress and co-operation.

It is now up to all the employing printers of North America to decide as to whether they believe in the same principle and are willing to do their share to promote the advancement and stability of the industry.

A. W. ("BOOTH") THOMSON.

In my official capacity I attended the services in Cleveland for our departed friend and brother, Booth Thomson. The loss of this grand old man of the International Typographical Union can not be measured in words, and while in person he has passed from our immediate presence his work will remain with us as one of the great bulwarks of our union.

CONCLUSION.

In conclusion, I congratulate the membership on the great progress made in the past year. I thank the officers and members of the subordinate unions I visited for the hearty co-operation rendered and the courtesies extended, and I wish for every member continued happiness and prosperity.

Fraternally yours,
WALTER W. BARRETT.

SECOND VICE-PRESIDENT.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

CO-WORKERS—Owing to the seriousness of the war situation my report on the doings of the Typographia for this fiscal year, like the one I submitted the year before, is very short. Up to date business has been fair with us, but, of course, nobody can foretell what the future has in store for the German-American Typographia, an organization that during the last forty-four years has battled manfully for the cause of labor. Although our hands have been tied to a great extent, we have, nevertheless, made good progress in a number of our local unions.

At New York city the newspaper scale of Typographia No. 7 expired last June, and after several conferences with the publishers of German papers in that city a new scale was agreed to, raising the wages of the men $1.50 per week, bringing the scale up to $5.50 per day for day work and $5.80 for night work. As our members in Greater New York, like our members in other large cities, ever since the introduction of typesetting machines, have worked and are working now only five days per week, their wages are now $27.50 for day work and $29 for night work, for a week of thirty-seven and one-half hours—half an hour lunch time being included in the eight-hour workday.

At Philadelphia, where the scale expired last October, the publishers of German newspapers and the Typographia at first could not reach an agreement in trying to renew the same. As the proprietors of the Philadelphia Daily Gazette held an arbitration contract with the Typographia, a local arbitration board was constituted, with the result that this board agreed on an increase of $1 per man per week for the next two years, without being compelled to call in the fifth man or to let the case go to the International Arbitration Board.

Typographia No. 3, of St. Louis, also reports a peaceful settlement of its newspaper scale, with a considerable increase in wages, bringing the scale up to $25.36 for day work and $29 for night work, for a five-day week of forty hours, dating back till October 29, 1916.

Another typographia that reports good progress is No. 21, of Detroit, Mich. Although the publishers of German papers in that city have a hard struggle to make both ends meet, they agreed to an increase of $2 for all men. Furthermore, they agreed to put the handmen, that had been working six days per week, on an even basis with the machine men, giving them also the five-day week.

The members of Typographia No. 5, of Rochester, N. Y., last November received a voluntary increase of $1 per week. Typographia No. 15, of Evansville, Ind., raised its scale $1.20 per man per week, and Typographia No. 12, of Louisville, Ky., got a new newspaper scale last December, raising the wages of operators on plain matter to $4 and of operators on ads (that have also to translate the same) to $4.40 per day, in a five-day week.

In conclusion, I can report that we again have increased our general treasury, this time from $28,629.51 to $29,751.46, and that undoubtedly we will pay the International Typographical Union per capita tax and assessments for our members that are drafted for the pending war out of our general fund, as we do with the dues and assessments of our members on the pension list.

That's all for this year. But I hope, from these few lines, you will see that the old reliable Typographia is still alive and is doing business at its old stand.

With the best hopes for the future, I remain
Fraternally yours,
Indianapolis, Ind. HUGO MILLER.

THIRD VICE-PRESIDENT.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—The year just closed has been marked by unusual conditions due to many reasons, but governed somewhat by the war that has been raging in Europe for the past three years, which this country has now taken part in; and no doubt those war conditions will continue to have an effect on the condition of the working men and women of this country for some time to come. It has been a source of pleasure to note the attitude of organized labor on the question of war and conscription. They were opposed to war up until the date of a declaration of a state of war by the president of the United States. (Although organized labor has been branded as exponents of war and general strife by a certain class of employers). Organized labor, however, immediately backed up the president in his stand on the war question and also by a very large majority favored conscription, which is in conformity with their principles of equality, a fundamental policy of organized labor. There can be no doubt but what organized labor will continue to back up the actions of the president, the senate and congress, and will pay more than their share in the lives and blood of their people and the monetary considerations which will be necessary during the conflict.

Everything considered, I believe that my report will show reasonable increases made to our members, improvements made in offices, proper control over mechanical devices, increased membership and increase of new locals.

The mechanical devices continue to force themselves to the front, as we are now confronted with many automatic machines which make metal plate and paper stencils, where linotype machines had heretofore been used in that class of work. We also have with us automatic machines to stamp, wrap and distribute, and a machine to stuff or insert is the newest invention. Those machines, if successful, will practically do all kinds of mailing which have heretofore been done by hand methods, and we have been compelled to put up a constant battle to secure control of these new devices. Many jurisdiction squabbles have resulted from the introduction of machinery in the mailing department and we were confronted with the stenographers' and bookkeepers' organizations (a federal local) claiming jurisdiction over the keyboard for plate-making machines by an appeal they sent to the executive council of the American Federation of Labor on this subject. The appeal was sent from Indianapolis and was finally decided in our favor. There have been other claims regarding the stuffing or inserting machines, but so far we have been able to control the matter. We have been hampered also by the manufacturers of these machines claiming that the work in connection therewith can be done by boys or girls, and does not require any skill, which in my opinion has hurt the machine more than it has hurt our people. This is not true, however, of the manufacturers of the Cox multimailing machine, which is an automatic device with a keyboard attachment which makes plates, proves galleys, stamps, wraps and delivers papers in the bags, as they realize that it requires skill to operate their machines. They feel that it is an asset to their concern to have competent operators, and they have given our members every opportunity to be taught the operation of their machines, and our organization has been doing all it can to co-operate with this concern, as we believe the manufacturers, publishers and our members will eventually receive better results through this form of co-operation. I feel safe in stating that our members are giving complete satisfaction where they are operating these automatic devices, and it is my opinion that there will be many suggestions come from our members that will have to do with the improvement of the machines and also the system in connection with same. Many of our members have already developed into mechanical operators and can repair any part of their machines.

There are two cities where unusual conditions prevail so far as our craft is concerned; both of those cities have been mentioned in previous reports of mine, and although we have never ceased our efforts to better conditions in said cities and to some extent have improved same, still we have been unsuccessful in adjusting matters to our satisfaction. The cities referred to are Atlanta, Ga., and Kansas City, Mo. We have been trying for fourteen years to adjust the Kansas City situation, where our members quit their positions in violation of a contract they then had with the publisher of the Star and Times and Journal. After they had received an adverse decision in arbitration, and for eight continuous years, I and other officers of the International Typographical Union have been trying to straighten out this matter, and although we can not report the trouble settled, I will say that the office of the Star and Times are now over 90 per cent organized. Still they do not pay the scale of wages or meet our conditions, that exist in the office of the Post, which is under contract to our organization. In the Star and Times office the men employed there work eight shifts a week for $17 and $18 against six shifts of eight hours for $19 per week under union conditions. This has caused much dissatisfaction among the employes in the Star and Times mailing department, and to some extent has been responsible for the men deciding to join the union. The Journal office is in the same condition as the Star and Times.

The Atlanta situation has been fixed up somewhat. Our members are now working forty-eight hours a week in the Constitution office where they had at one time worked sixty-eight hours a week, and on the Journal now work an average of fifty-four hours a week where they had previously worked seventy-two hours. The manager of the Journal is very hostile to our organization, and repeatedly refuses to adjust conditions in his office. The Hearst publications, the Georgian and American, have for some time been giving our members the eight-hour day and paying them the scale they are asking of $18 per week. Neither of the other publishers have to date met this condition, and we are hopeful that the manager of the Journal will change his attitude toward our members, as we feel he holds the key to the situation, which is controlled by a local publishers' association, of which he is a member.

We have not been very successful in organizing the mailers in the city of Philadelphia, although every effort has been made during the year. It is rather difficult to explain the attitude of the men in that city, as every reason existed why they should organize during the past twelve months, and some gain should have been made, and although opportunity confronted the mailers in that city on several occasions we have to acknowledge that our efforts have been uneventful.

Two very serious elements entered into the printing business this year which prevented our members and others employed in the printing trades to some extent from receiving increases they were justly entitled to, and could have gained if it had not been for the high cost of news print paper and the increased cost of second-class postage rates. While it must be admitted there has been and is a shortage of wood pulp and that the cost of materials necessary in the manufacturing of news print paper, and also that the cost of labor in the manufacture of such paper has increased, nevertheless we contend that there is no reason shown which would justify the increase of from 50 to 300 per cent in the rates of print paper, and it is my personal opinion that the most thorough investigation should have been made of this matter (which has not been done to date) and prosecutions made by the federal government, should their findings justify, which I believe would be the case.

There is no doubt but that an increase will be placed upon second-class postage matter, and if so, it will affect our organization more than any other craft in the printing trades. It will have a tendency to discourage the continuation of mail subscriptions and thereby cause less work in our department, which of course regulates the amount of men employed. Realizing this and considering the whole matter unjust to our employers, we have on several occasions sent committees to Washington on this subject and have sent out considerable mail addressed to the members of the senate and the lower house on this matter, and although the question is still unsettled, we have encouragement enough to believe the entire rate will be rearranged so as to lessen the burdens of our employers. There is every indication, however, that there will be a slight increase in second-class mailing matter.

We show a remarkable year in scale matters—more than 40 per cent of our organizations being affected. Increases range from 90 cents to $6 per week with an average of close on to $2. The 90-cent increase was secured in the city of Denver after the state board of arbitration gave a decision against our organization. The new agreement will prevent state compulsory arbitration in the future, so far as that organization is concerned, as it embodies a local arbitration clause. It is my opinion the people of the great state of Colorado will eventually see the injustice done them and their state by a politically constructed compulsory arbitration board, and will amend their laws to conform to the great fundamental principles of this country—freedom and equality. The scales will be enumerated in President Scott's report.

We have met with considerable success in forming new locals during the past twelve months, but find it rather difficult to secure recognition for our organization, as the publishers, without any good reasons, refuse to recognize our organization. Therefore, we realize something must be done to remedy this matter and we expect to perfect a plan which may be effective. Some of our members propose raising a general organization fund of $100,000 by assessment, and while this may not be the action that will be finally determined, nevertheless it must be admitted there is some weight to this proposition and it may be the means to a happy solution of the question.

Arbitration is very much favored by our members, as they feel they can get a square deal through that method and secure fairly good results. We have not lost a case nationally during the past year, and I know of but one case which was decided against us locally during that period, so you can see that it is quite natural that we would not fear arbitration.

Work has been plentiful; none of our members has been out of employment and less than 5 per cent have been without a majority of days or nights' work per week. In fact, there have been several occasions when we were compelled to send out a call for men to fill steady positions outside of their home towns, and in a majority of the cases we have been unable to secure men for the positions.

Conditions have not improved any in Chicago, as we have been trying to do business with the members of the publishers' association there for seventeen years, and although we have the promise that our scale matter and the recognition of the organization will be given a hearing by the members of the publishers' association in that city, we have always been prevented from a hearing before their association. We intend to continue our persistent efforts, nevertheless, and feel that our very worthy cause will receive proper consideration by the publishers in Chicago sooner or later.

I believe I can say without fear of contradiction that we have more arbitration agreements signed up with the members of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association than ever before, and if we continue along these lines it wouldn't surprise me to find that we will have more arbitration contracts signed than any other printing trades union except the printers. Our relations with the members of the newspaper publishers' association are of the best, and there is no doubt in my mind but that we will make many new friends of members of that association during the coming year.

I have visited many cities during the past twelve months and settled many questions of differences, and very frequently have secured new contracts before the matter was submitted to arbitration, and in this way I believe the cost of arbitration has been saved the organization. We have also secured four or five new locals and they have all the appearances of healthy organizations and I believe they will prosper. We have almost 100 more members than we had a year ago.

I take this opportunity of thanking the other officers of the executive council of the International Typographical Union for the assistance they have given our members and the kind manner in which they have considered propositions submitted to them by members of the mailing craft.

I also want to take this opportunity of thanking the officers of local organizations who have assisted me in my endeavors during the past twelve months and for the assistance they have given our organizations in their locality.

Feeling sure that many matters of importance will be brought up at the convention, especially so on account of the conditions with which we are confronted due to the war, and knowing full well that the delegates there assembled will be able to handle those questions with credit, and looking forward to a successful convention, I am

Yours fraternally,

Brooklyn, N. Y. CHARLES N. SMITH.

THE HOME FUND.

Under the present law 20 cents of the per capita tax collected by the International Typographical Union at the rate of 50 cents per member per month is transferred to the Home fund monthly by the secretary-treasurer for the maintenance of the Home. The aggregate apportioned to the Home fund by the International secretary-treasurer in the year closing May 31, 1917, is as follows:

Fund's portion per capita tax to May 31, 1917	$147,091 05
Transportation of residents returned	726 64
Total	$147,817 69
Transferred to Home treasurer	$147,817 69

In another portion of this book will be found the report of the trustees of the Home. Since all expenses in connection with the institution are under their supervision, the reader is referred to the report of the trustees for the detailed financial transactions of the institution.

A summary of the money received by the secretary-treasurer for the support of the Home and transferred to the Home fund from May 1, 1890, to May 31, 1917, follows:

Year.	Amount.
1891	$21,548 36
1892	30,110 51
1893	28,997 51
1894	20,923 96
1895	18,307 24
1896	18,193 48
1897	34,793 70
1898	35,415 60
1899	37,618 15
1900	38,690 73
1901	38,639 84
1902	46,433 97
1903	51,162 28
1904	55,670 00
1905	56,235 95
1906	54,227 80
1907	61,931 40
1908	77,752 95
1909	86,518 31
1910	89,199 46
1911	$92,365 95
1912	97,483 76
1913	100,766 95
1914	105,697 61
1915	107,662 02
1916	120,149 07
1917	147,817 69
Total	$1,674,314 25

Originally each member paid 5 cents per month for the maintenance of the Home. That amount was later increased to 10 cents per member per month, and in 1908 the apportionment was made 15 cents per member per month. The 1915 convention increased the per capita tax 5 cents per member per month for its support. This action was ratified by the referendum and the Home fund now receives 20 cents per member per month.

It is believed that the present revenue of the fund will meet the requirements of the Home for some years, but a greater revenue will be needed should the capacity of the Home be materially increased at any future date.

BENEFITS VERSUS RECEIPTS.

The relation of the benefits paid to the receipts for the year is most interesting. In this report it is shown that there was expended for beneficial features the following:

Mortuary benefits	$298,476 88
Strike benefits and special assistance	14,300 15
Old age pensions	351,505 00
Union Printers Home	147,817 69
Total	$812,099 72

These benefits represent 74½ per cent of the total money paid into the treasury. They are 79.3 per cent of the total expenditures for the year.

THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL.

The subscription price of THE JOURNAL—5 cents per member per month—was established fourteen years ago. With the passing years, the cost of printing has steadily advanced but the increase has been so great in the past three years as to cause all publishers endless trouble. At the last convention, your secretary-treasurer was authorized to reduce the size of THE JOURNAL, if necessary, to keep the cost of the paper within its revenues. Paper continued to increase in price and it finally came to the place where the paper for one issue of THE JOURNAL cost more than the monthly subscriptions thereto. It was then decided to print a less number of pages each month and to eliminate all illustrations, obituary resolutions and such other matter as was deemed unimportant. Instead of 160 pages as formerly THE JOURNAL now contains 104 or 112 pages, and with the result the cost of its publication in the past six months has about equaled the revenue for that purpose. Whether the revenue will pay for a paper of the present size in the future is a matter of conjecture. Paper, ink and everything that enters into the production of printing is still increasing and there appears to be no relief in sight for this condition. In reducing the size of THE JOURNAL it was necessary to curtail the space allotted to correspondence. When the members contributing to the official paper were informed of the situation, and asked to condense their letters, they quickly complied with the request. I wish to thank each one for co-operation in this matter and for continuing to contribute to THE JOURNAL under the new and restricted conditions.

The cost of the publication for the fiscal year is as follows:

RECEIPTS—JUNE 1, 1916, to MAY 31, 1917.

Subscriptions from non-members.....	$37 72
Subscriptions from members.....	36,327 30
Subscriptions from apprentices, etc....	349 00

Total	$39,222 12

EXPENDITURES—JUNE 1, 1916, TO MAY 31. 1917.

Printing and mailing twelve issues....	$17,077 07
Paper	27,363 85
Postage	3,799 30
Addressing machine supplies.....	130 90
Wrapping paper	1,028 61
Clerical work	3,813 35
Halftones, etc.....	381 91
Refund on advertising.....	1 25
Total	$53,596 24
Excess of expenditures over receipts..	$14,374 12

As has been previously stated, each issue of THE JOURNAL contains about thirty-five pages of official matter, for the publication of which THE JOURNAL account does not receive credit. If the cost of printing official pages were charged as an expense of the organization and credited to THE JOURNAL account, as is done by many other trade unions, the account would show a different result. Without THE JOURNAL for publication of official matter, the cost of printing and circulating official documents in another form would no doubt entail a greater expense upon the general fund than does the present deficit in THE JOURNAL account.

It will be observed that the cost of the paper for THE JOURNAL was almost $7,000 more in this fiscal year than in the preceding one. This is due to a continued increase in the price of paper. Union water-marked paper can be had from only two mills and the makers of this paper have taken advantage of that fact and have, in the opinion of your secretary-treasurer, increased the price of it beyond all reason.

PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Our publicity or advertising campaign begun some years ago continues with unabated vigor. It is impossible to estimate the amount of good that results therefrom to the International Union and its subordinate bodies. There can be no doubt that our organization is better known than any other American trade union, and it is not uncommon to hear favorable comments upon its work in public places and by men and women who are in no way connected with the trade. Two leaflets issued during the year attracted wide attention—"Somewhere in France" and "The Printers' Fight for Life; and Victory." The first is a tribute to the members of the International Union who have laid down their lives in the European war that democracy and liberty may survive. The second is an article concerning the beneficial features of the organization written by A. M. Simons and published in Pearson's Magazine for December, 1916, and which was reprinted and distributed from this office with the permission of the author. Mr. Simons' introduction to his article follows:

If some philanthropic or "uplift" organization, some association for improving something or other, some civic federation, Rockefeller, Carnegie or Sage "foundation" had added ten years to the lives of 50,000 people, established a home for the sick and aged, raised wages, shortened hours, paid out a million for old age pensions and maintained a great system of education, how the plaudits of such an achievement would ring through the columns of the press! All these things the typos have done, and here is the story of how they did it.

The above is a great tribute to a great organization. We must have deserved it and we must continue to tell the public through our publicity campaign what we are doing. Each local union should have a committee to see that due publicity is given the work of the local as well as that of the International Union. Printer's ink is good for all business and especially for our business. There was expended in the publicity campaign during the year the sum of $5,916.58 divided as follows:

Clerical and stenographic work.....	1,300 00
Bulletins, Home brochures, pictures, post cards, etc.	4,168 58
Total	$5,916 58

EARNINGS OF MEMBERS.

Below is a statement of the average earnings of the members of the International Typographical Union as shown in the yearly reports. The figures are creditable to the organization. Using as a basis the old age pension and mortuary assessments, each one of which is paid at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent on the earnings of the members, the total earnings of the members of the International Typographical Union from June 1, 1908, to May 31, 1917, are found to be as follows:

MORTUARY BENEFIT AND TABLES.

In the twelve months ended May 31, 1917, 825 mortuary benefits were paid. This is seventy more than in the previous year, and the largest number of benefits ever paid in a like period. These benefits aggregated $298,476.88, an average of $361.79. This total includes $786.15 benefits due and unclaimed on May 31, 1916, but claimed and paid during the last fiscal year. Since January 1, 1912, benefits to the number of 3,769, amounting to $1,345,440.64, have been paid, the average benefit for the entire period the new law has been in operation being $356.97. The average continuous membership of the 825 members for whom benefits were paid was 19.34 years. To this fund during the fiscal year has been charged the proportion of the expenses of maintaining the register system of members and clerical and stenographic work necessary for its administration. The receipts and disbursements of the fund from June 1, 1916, to May 31, 1917, follow:

RECEIPTS.

Balance in fund June 1, 1916	$247,254 63
One-half of 1 per cent assessment	333,589 91
Interest on fund	9,666 53
Unclaimed benefits returned	2 08
Bequests to fund	660 00
Total	$591,173 15

EXPENDITURES.

Benefits paid	$298,476 88
Clerical work	2,730 00
Maintenance register system	2,243 91
Legal services	330 60
Printing	79 15
Total	$303,860 54
Balance in fund May 31, 1917	287,312 61
Total	$591,173 15

It will be observed that the interest on the fund is in excess of the expenses for clerical work and the maintenance of the register system of members necessary to the administration of the fund. In other words, the fund was administered without cost and with profit to the members of the International Typographical Union.

A summary of the receipts and expenditures of the mortuary fund from January 1, 1912, to May 31, 1917, follows, but this statement should not be confused with the yearly one immediately preceding it:

Balance in fund May 31, 1917	287,312 61
Total	$1,657,133 70

FUTURE OF THE FUND.

It will be seen from the foregoing figures that the balance in the mortuary fund increased $40,057.98 during the fiscal year. This calculation does not, however, take into consideration benefits pending at the close of the year, amounting to $9,452.12 and shown in a later table. A portion of these pending benefits will be claimed and paid, but the major part of them have been standing long enough to revert to the fund under the existing law. Even though all of these pending benefits be considered a liability of the fund, the result would not be changed, and the year's business would show that the receipts of the fund were in excess of the demands thereon. With a large increase in the number of benefits, and an increase in the average benefit, I do not believe it wise to make any change in the law. Probably amendments to the law increasing or extending the benefit will be offered at the convention. Such propositions should not be hastily adopted. This is especially true under present conditions. One thousand members of the International Union are now serving their countries in the European war. How many more will be involved when the call is made for the men subject to conscription no one can say, nor can any one safely predict the number who will lay down their lives before their service has ended. Each member in the army or navy is a liability. If there is any legislation affecting this fund it should be calculated to strengthen its resources and not to add to its liabilities. Under normal conditions the fund is on a sound basis but its founders did not see a world-wide war or reckon with its possibilities.

PENDING BENEFITS.

Failure of the deceased member to name a beneficiary, as the law requires, frequently delays the payment of the benefit. Again, members often name as beneficiaries minor children, and where this occurs an executor of the estate or a guardian for the children must be appointed by the courts before the benefit can be paid. It sometimes occurs that the relatives of the deceased member can not be located. Under the law any benefit remaining unclaimed for six months reverts to the mortuary fund. For reasons of this character balances of benefits as follows remained unpaid on May 31, 1917:

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE.

In the meager casualty reports which reach the officers of the International Typographical Union at Indianapolis the phrase "Somewhere in France" occurs with monotonous regularity. Some day, perhaps, when this war curtain shall have been lifted, the friends and relatives of the members of our Canadian unions who have been killed in the European war will receive more detailed information.

Mortuary benefits amounting to $10,925 have been paid by the International Typographical Union to the beneficiaries of thirty-eight members of its Canadian unions who have been killed somewhere in Europe. Over 500 members of the International Union have enlisted in the overseas service, Canadian Expeditionary Force.

THE OLD AGE PENSION FUND.

The original pension law provided for the payment of $4 per week to members 60 years of age, having a continuous active membership in good standing of twenty years, unable to obtain sustaining employment at the printing trade, and not earning more than $4 per week at the trade. At the 1910 convention the law was amended so as to render eligible to the pension members 70 years of age, having a continuous active membership in good standing of ten years. Provision was also made in the law for members totally incapacitated for work whose applications for admission to the Home had been disapproved by reason of their affliction, such members to have twenty years' continuous active membership in good standing.

The San Francisco convention, held in August, 1911, increased the pension to $5 per week and further extended the law. As it now stands the law provides for the payment of a pension of $5 per week to three classes of members:

First. Members 60 years of age who have been members in good standing for a period of twenty years, including and antedating the enactment of the pension law, and who find it impossible to secure sustaining employment at the trade. Applicants under this provision of the law must have been members in good standing at the time the pension law became effective and maintained active membership since that time.

Second. Members who have reached the age of 70 years and who have been in continuous good standing for a period of ten years and who find it impossible to secure sustaining employment at the trade.

Third. Members who are totally incapacitated for work, who have been continuous active members for twenty years, and whose applications for admission to the Home have been disapproved because their afflictions are such as to render them ineligible for entry to that institution.

During the twelve months covered by this report, the average membership of the International Typographical Union upon which per capita tax was collected was 61,350. The monthly receipts from the pension assessment averaged $27,744.53 —45.2 cents per member per month, or $5.43 per member per year. Receipts from the pension and mortuary assessments show that the total earnings of the membership during the year aggregated $66,652,431—$3,940,626 more than in the previous year. Last year the earnings averaged $1,041.18 per member on a basis of 60,231. This year the average paying membership was 61,350 and the average earnings $1,086.43.

While the wage of members increased $3,940,626 during the year—or $64 per man on the basis of the average paying membership—new and increased scales are being negotiated daily without serious friction, proprietors in most cases realizing that the wages of their employes must be increased as food prices soar. We can all be proud of the year earnings. Sixty-six and one-half million dollars is a large sum.

A summary of the receipts and expenditures of the fund for the year closing May 31, 1917, follows:

RECEIPTS.

June 1, 1916—Balance in fund		$616,300 88
May 31, 1917—One-half of 1 per cent assessment	332,934 40
May 31, 1917—Interest	23,282 75
May 31, 1917—Pensions returned	50 00
Total		$972,568 03

EXPENDITURES.

Paid to pensioners	$351,505 00
Clerical work	2,730 00
Books and printing	213 40
Maintenance register system	$2,243 90
Total		$356,692 30
Balance in fund May 31, 1917		$615,875 73

A proportion of the clerical work and the maintenance of the register system of members is charged against this fund because the record is necessary for the administration of the fund. In the receipts of the fund there will be found an item of $23,282.75 as interest. The interest on the fund has always paid the expenses incident to its administration and still left a handsome revenue from that source.

In the above statement is an expenditure of $351,505 for pensions in the fiscal year ended May 31, 1917, as against an expenditure of $352,-920 in the previous year. The casual reader will probably conclude at once that the demands upon the fund have decreased, but such is not the case. As was shown in my last report, the pension payments became due in such a manner that fourteen checks were issued to each pensioner to whom they were due in the fiscal year of 1916, and during which $352,920 was expended for pensions. In the fiscal year ended May 31, 1917, thirteen pension payments were made as follows:

Four weeks ending June 24, 1916.
Four weeks ending July 22, 1916.
Four weeks ending August 19, 1916.
Four weeks ending September 16, 1916.
Four weeks ending October 14, 1916.
Four weeks ending November 11, 1916.
Four weeks ending December 9, 1916.
Four weeks ending January 9, 1917.
Four weeks ending February 3, 1917.
Four weeks ending March 3, 1917.
Four weeks ending March 31, 1917.
Four weeks ending April 28, 1917.
Four weeks ending May 26, 1917.

By the above it will be seen that each pensioner on the roll who drew the full pension received thirteen checks in this fiscal year, provided he was entitled thereto and his union made the pension reports promptly.

The first thirteen of the fourteen payments made in the fiscal year of 1916 aggregated $328,735. As shown above, thirteen payments in the fiscal year of 1917 amounted to $351,505, or $22,770 more than the same number of payments in the previous year. Thus it is apparent our expenditures for pension have not decreased but increased almost $2,000 on every payment of four weeks.

A summary of the receipts and expenditures of the pension fund from its inception to May 31, 1917, is as follows:

RECEIPTS.

One-half of 1 per cent assessment, March, 1908, to May 31, 1917		$2,513,205 21
Interest		128,059 72
Pensions returned		653 50
Total		$2,641,918 43

EXPENDITURES.

Paid to pensioners	$1,975,859 00
Clerical work	20,886 50
Books and printing	3,132 69
Maintenance registry system	26,154 59
British income tax	9 92

From the above it will be seen that no part of the pension assessment has been used to defray the cost of administering the fund. The interest on the fund has paid these expenses and returned a profit of $78,000 to the fund.

Since the establishment of the fund and up to May 31, 1917, 2,590 applications for the pension have been filed. Of this number 271 were handled during the last fiscal year—267 approved and four disapproved. Four petitions previously disapproved were reconsidered and approved and four withdrawn were restored to roll, making a total of 275 applications approved in the fiscal year. Fifty-five applications were received from members over 70 who applied under the ten-year membership clause. Eleven applications were received from members whose petitions for admission to the Home had been disapproved and forty-eight were from members who became eligible to the pension under the accumulative membership clause. There were 1,509 members on the roll on May 31, 1917—an increase of sixty-nine in the year.

ACTION NEEDED.

With the whole world at war conditions in our trade as well as of others are somewhat unsettled at this time, and by the date on which the convention meets at Colorado Springs it is altogether possible that a large number of members of the International Typographical Union will have been called to the service of their country. One thousand have now enlisted and are with the Canadian or United States forces. We can safely expect an increase in the number of pensioners during the next year. The amount expended for pensions is now much in excess of the revenue from the pension assessment notwithstanding the fact that the assessment, during the last fiscal year, was larger than in previous ones. With the possibility of many of our members serving in the army and navy it can hardly be expected that the collections upon the assessment will increase in the fiscal year upon which we are now entering. Should the receipts from the assessment increase the increment will not in all probability be as great as that during the past year. Viewed from all possible standpoints there is every indication that the expenditures from the fund will be in excess of its revenue in the next twelve months.

At the last convention of the International Typographical Union there was introduced a proposition which was popular because of the attending sentiment. Your secretary-treasurer alone opposed it, and because he did so one delegate took occasion to praise his stand on the subject, which was finally acted upon in such a way as not to embarrass the organization. In that particular instance I performed my duty as I saw it—no more—no less. I should be negligent and remiss in my duty if I failed to again warn the membership and especially the delegates to the Colorado Springs convention against any further extension of the pension law and advise that action be taken to protect the fund without further delay. At every convention since the pension law became operative propositions to extend the scope of the law or to increase the pension have been presented, but none of these propositions have ever provided for an increased revenue for the fund. It is quite probable that the Colorado Springs convention will have before it the usual number of propositions of this character. In fact, one local union has appointed a committee for the purpose of presenting a proposition providing for an increase in the pension. Before serious consideration is given to an amendment of this character the pension fund must be provided with a greater revenue. The organization can not assume greater responsibilities in the way of old age pensions without first enacting legislation providing the money with which to meet these obligations.

One of two avenues is open—reduce the expenditures for pensions by returning to the original pension law or by some other method, or increase the assessment. As has been stated on numerous occasions, the original law provided for the payment of a pension of $4 per week to members 60 years of age having a continuous membership of twenty years and unable to obtain work at the trade. This law, which was sound, was based upon the experience of other trade unions. We have departed far from the original law. In granting the pension to members under 60 years of age and whose applications for admission to the Home are rejected by the trustees thereof, the fund virtually became a sick benefit as well as a pension fund.

There are 110 members in this class of pensioners, representing an annual expenditure of $28,600. In the 70-year class of pensioners and with a membership of ten years there are 108 members, calling for an expenditure of $28,080 per annum. One hundred sixty-five members are receiving the pension under the accumulative membership clause of the law and their pensions amount to $42,900 per year. In other words, the amendments to the original law have increased the expenditures from the fund $99,580 per year.

As originally adopted the law provided that a member earning more than $4 per week at the printing business was debarred from the pension for that week. The law as it now stands bars a member from the pension for any week in which he earns more than two days' pay at the scale of his union. The possibilities under this law are not fully recognized by the membership of the organization. Some members on the pension roll get more or less work. In the larger cities it is possible for a pensioner to get two days' work per week and in that time earn $10 or $11. If to this is added the pension, to which he is entitled under the law, the pensioner has an income of $15 or $16 per week—often more than the member in the smaller town who works a full week or the sub who gets a day or two each week.

In the foregoing I have endeavored to present the situation clearly and forcibly. What I have said must not be construed to mean that I am in any way opposed to a further safe extension of the pension law or to the law as it now stands. If it is the will of the membership to further extend the law and to provide funds for that purpose I would be pleased indeed with action along that line, for it is difficult for a pensioner to live on his pension alone, and the men on the pension roll are all tried and true unionists who have made sacrifices for the International Union and who are entitled to everything it can give them in their declining years. A condition created by the membership and not a theory now confronts the organization. It is impossible to further extend the pension on the present revenue or to continue it indefinitely on the present basis and with an ever-increasing list of pensioners. We must look to the future of the fund and not let our desires or sentiments outweigh our business judgment. The condition presented herein has long been anticipated, and in previous reports I have warned the membership that it was coming. Now that it is here, something must be done to correct it, and this, to my mind, is the time for action.

The following figures show the rapidity with which the number of pensioners has increased:

An analysis of the ages of the pension applicants develops the notable fact that the average age of the 2,590 applicants is 65.1 years. It will be noticed that the death rate among the pensioners was 36.9 per cent of the total number of applicants.

In this connection it should be stated that all pensioners less than 60 years of age made application under that provision of the law permitting the payment of the pension to members who make application for admission to the Home and whose applications are rejected because of the disease with which they are afflicted. On May 31, 1917, there were 110 members in this class of pensioners.

The following table contains a list of the unions having members on the pension roll on May 31, 1916, together with the number of pensioners, the number since approved, who have died, been transferred, etc., and the number on the roll on May 31, 1917:

TUBERCULOSIS WAR.

Unions subordinate to the International Typographical Union are still taking an active part in the world-wide campaign against the "great white plague." The film, "A Curable Disease," in which the Home at Colorado Springs is featured, and which was purchased some years ago, succumbed to constant use and traveling. A new one was procured and is in constant demand. In connection with this film there is used a set of stereopticon slides containing views of the Home and grounds and statistics regarding the International Union. Especially in the smaller cities the film and slides have met with much success. The story they tell is a new one to the public who are not familiar with the work of trade unions and particularly our own organization. Continued efforts to stamp out this dread disease and improve sanitary conditions in workrooms should be made. There was expended in the tuberculosis war during the fiscal year the sum of $533.75, divided as follows:

Postage	$50 00
Pamphlets, leaflets, etc.	387 25
Film, "A Curable Disease"	96 50
Total	$533 75

OUR MEMBERSHIP.

The receipts for per capita tax show an average paying membership of 61,350 for the twelve months ending May 31, 1917. This is an increase of 1,119 over the year 1916, and 1,779 over 1915, a total increase of 18,993 members in the past ten years. At the close of business on May 31, 1917, register numbers were held by 66,681 members, of which 62,509 were affiliated with local unions, the remainder being in unorganized towns or out of the business and in possession of traveling cards.

There are registered at headquarters 9,820 persons who previously held membership in the organization, but who now stand suspended or expelled, and 2,876 who are in possession of honorable withdrawal cards. The number of members lost through suspension is so large as to warrant our earnest attention. Men who stand suspended and who are working at the trade should be reclaimed. They are a menace to any local union that may be involved in trouble.

An honorable withdrawal card can only be issued to a member leaving the trade. Very often a member takes a card of this kind, leaves the trade for a few months, only to return to it, deposit his withdrawal card and find his continuous membership broken. Local unions are urged to impress upon members asking for withdrawal cards the importance of continuous membership.

The following table shows how the average membership paying per capita tax during the past year compares with former records:

There was an increase of twelve in the number of local unions holding charters from the International Union in the fiscal year.

THE BOND INVESTMENT.

The International Union now has invested in government, state, county and municipal bonds the sum of $674,466.98 divided among the several funds as follows:

Mortuary fund	$168,711 00
Pension fund	505,755 98
Total	$674,466 98

These securities are the best to be found on the market and if necessary could be quickly converted into cash. Some of the bonds were purchased slightly below par, others at par and still others at a premium. Bonds valued at $28,000 matured during the year and were converted into cash. New York city corporate bonds having a par value of $30,000 were purchased to replace them—the price of the bonds with premium and accrued interest being $31,211.65. Liberty loan bonds of the United States in the sum of $50,000 were subscribed for but had not been delivered or paid for at the close of the fiscal year. Where a premium was paid a portion of the annual interest on the bonds is credited against the investment so the bonds will appear at par value on the books of the International Union when they mature. This method of procedure and the maturing of bonds accounts for the difference between the listing of some of the bonds in this and previous statements. The entire investment is on a basis of about 4 per cent.

MEMBERSHIP OF SUBORDINATE UNIONS.

It is important that each local should know the numerical strength of those about it. This is made possible by the following table, in which is set forth the membership in good standing and in arrears, the total membership of each union, and the amount in its treasury. The data presented was compiled from the quarterly reports for the three months ended April 30, 1917. In instances where unions failed to report, the membership given is based upon the last remittances for per capita tax, such unions being designated by a star (*). Recently formed locals have also been added to the list, the membership being based upon the number of charter members or receipts from per capita tax. Such unions are indicated by a dagger (†):

PRESCOTT MEMORIAL FUND.

At the last convention several resolutions were introduced in regard to erecting a memorial to former President William B. Prescott. These propositions were referred to the committee on resolutions, which reported as follows:

Your committee on resolutions is in harmony with Propositions Nos. 141 and 142, relative to subscriptions for the purpose of erecting a suitable memorial to the memory of William B. Prescott, president of the International Typographical Union from 1891 to 1898, who died in Chicago, January 25, 1916; and your committee recommends that the executive council issue a call to local typographical unions for subscriptions to the proposed memorial.

Your committee recommends further that this memorial be in the nature of a simple granite shaft to be erected over the final resting place of William B. Prescott, in Toronto, Can., and that in the base of the shaft the names of the donors be sealed.

It is further suggested that if these recommendations are concurred in by the convention, the memorial project be acted upon by all unions subordinate to the International Typographical Union; that they be given full publicity in THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL, and that individual members actively interest themselves in an effort to show appreciation of the work of one whose mission in life is inseparably linked with the high ideals of the International Typographical Union.

Shortly after the close of the convention the executive council called its action to the attention of all local unions and suggested that members be given an opportunity to contribute to the Prescott memorial fund. Up to the close of the fiscal year on May 31, 1917, the following sums had been collected by subordinate unions and forwarded to headquarters:

The amount in the fund is not sufficient to erect a shaft that would be creditable to the International Union or do justice to the memory of its late president. The executive council will probably bring this matter before the Colorado Springs convention for action.

STRIKES.

In the matter of strikes the year has been a most remarkable one. Disputes to the number of three resulted in strikes, involving 135 members. Of these disputes one was quickly won; one was partially won—only two offices now being out—and the third was in progress when the year closed but with little prospect of an early or favorable conclusion. Ninety-three of the members participating in the strike returned to work when settlements were made and forty-two were in the strikes pending at the close of the year.

A BUSINESS ORGANIZATION.

In previous reports and under this caption I have commented on the business of the organization and the cost of conducting the same. The International Union is engaged in selling the labor of its members and its sales of labor for the past fiscal year were $66,652,431—$3,940,626 in excess of those of the preceding year. In the handling of such a volume of business expenses must necessarily be incurred. It is pleasing to note that the cost of conducting the business of the International Union is remarkably small as compared with the expenses of mercantile concerns.

The grand total expended last year for all purposes was $1,022,982.34. Of that sum $812,099.72 was paid to local unions in benefits and for the support of the Home, leaving $210,882.62 expended for all office expenses, officers' salaries and traveling expenses, expenses of organizers, committees, convention expenses, printing constitutions, officers' reports, convention proceedings, printing and distributing THE JOURNAL—in short, all expenses except benefits paid to local unions—or about .0032 per cent on its total labor sales of $66,652,431. Instead of a selling cost of 25 to 30 per cent on its business as allowed by mercantile concerns the International Typographical Union does business for a small fraction of 1 per cent.

The International Typographical Union is the most liberal of all trade unions. Other organizations charge for constitutions, officers' reports, convention proceedings and organizing literature. The International Typographical Union sends each local union and prepays the charges thereon as many copies of the International constitution as it desires, and furnishes in the same manner literature and publicity documents. It mails a copy of the officers' reports to each member and likewise supplies him with a copy of the convention proceedings. These things are all provided for in the law, as is our per capita tax to the American Federation of Labor and the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, and the expenses of the delegates to these bodies. Eliminating the expenses like those above mentioned as made by law, it is found that receipts from interest on the several funds, registration and other fees from persons outside the organization seeking admission thereto, the sale of supplies, etc., are sufficient to cover all expenses for clerk hire, postage, expressage and the other items properly chargeable to the operation of headquarters. In short, no member directly pays one cent for the expenses incurred in conducting the business of the headquarters of the International Typographical Union when he pays his per capita tax and the pension and mortuary assessments. The revenue of the International Union from the sources mentioned above is sufficient to pay what is ordinarily known as "overhead charges" of the organization.

EXTENSION OF REGISTER SYSTEM.

On this subject I beg to again quote from my report to the Providence convention as follows:

EXTENSION OF PLAN.

Frequently your secretary-treasurer is asked whether or not an individual member is in good standing with his local union and it is impossible to answer this query. The present record of members at headquarters only shows the date and place of the initiation of a member, his transfer from one union to another, the local with which he is connected and his suspension, expulsion, reinstatement or reinitiation. Local books alone show the payments of dues by individual members and their standing. Often local records are accidentally destroyed or lost in some other way. This usually occurs in the smaller jurisdictions where officers frequently change. A master record at headquarters showing the earnings of each member, the amount paid by him for local and International dues and assessments and the date of each payment would give the parent organization data of inestimable value for the present and future. The installation of such a record would require a monthly report from each local union containing the name of every member and his payments to the various funds. Such a report would greatly add to the labor of local secretaries who are now doing an immense amount of work and in most instances without compensation. To maintain such a record at headquarters would also necessitate the employment of a larger number of bookkeepers and possibly increase our expenses for clerical work about $5,000 per year. Are we ready for this step?

It was my intention to urge upon the convention this year the carrying out of such a plan as is contemplated in the foregoing, but with a probability of the nation being at war for the next three or five years, I hesitate to suggest anything that might increase the expenses of the organization. We may find it necessary to retrench in every way in the next and succeeding years, but this subject is one that should have thought.

THE FUTURE.

For the third time in the history of the International Union the United States is at war. Many of its members served with credit in the wars of 1861-65 and 1898 and one thousand are with the Canadian and American forces in the present European struggle which has involved the whole world. Foreign trade unions have felt the effects of the war and have lost a very large number of members in battle. We must realize that some of the brave boys who are called to the service will not return, but will find their last resting place "Somewhere in France" and with honored dead of other countries. No one can tell what the future has in store for us. We can only accept what comes and meet each new situation calmly and with a united front. This is not the time for internal strife or bickering. Radical legislation must be avoided and diplomacy and judgment must be used in meeting new conditions. Let us be sure we are right and then go ahead. This policy will leave the International Union stronger and better than ever when "grim-visaged war hath smoothed his wrinkled brow."

CONCLUSION.

The finances of the International Typographical Union are in a healthy condition, its members are generally employed and it is at peace with all but a few employers. An arbitration agreement has just been signed with the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America which should greatly strengthen the organization in the book and job branch of the trade. I congratulate the membership upon this condition of affairs which has come from hard and well directed work. Membership in the International Union is an asset of which every cardholder can well be proud.

Thanking the officers and members of subordinate unions for their many courtesies and co-operation, I am Fraternally yours,

J. W. Hays

Secretary-Treasurer.

REPORT OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

To the Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Following the custom established several years ago, your executive council submits herewith some of the matters that have claimed its attention during the past year and some of the things that will be up for consideration and determination at the Colorado Springs convention.

OLD AGE PENSION AND MORTUARY BENEFITS.

Once more the executive council presents for the information of the delegates to the convention extracts from the laws and decisions thereon affecting the old age pension and the mortuary benefits of the organization:

OLD AGE PENSION FUND.

SEC. 6. Any member of the International Typographical Union who has reached the age of 60 years, and who has been in good standing for a period of twenty years, including and antedating the enactment of the pension law, or any member who has reached the age of 70 years, and who has been in continuous good standing for a period of ten years, and who finds it impossible to secure sustaining employment, or any member having a continuous membership of twenty years who, by reason of his affliction, is totally incapacitated for work, and whose application for admission to the Union Printers Home has been rejected by the trustees thereof, may receive the sum of $5 per week, subject to the provisions hereinafter set forth.

SEC. 7. Applications for pensions shall be made on blank forms prepared and furnished from International headquarters, which shall require answers to all questions, and the setting forth in full of all facts required to establish the right of the applicant to the benefits of the pension. Such blank shall also include a form of certificate that the application has been read in full at a regular meeting of the local union of which the applicant is a member, and has been approved by a majority vote of those in attendance upon such meeting. Said application shall be published in THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL, and should no objection be made within thirty days from the date of said publication the member shall then be placed on the pension roll. Should objection be raised, the case shall be investigated by the executive council and the council shall act thereon in such manner as in its judgment seems proper.

SEC. 8. Any member earning more than two days' pay in any one week at the printing trade at the scale of the union with which he is affiliated shall not be entitled to the pension for that week.

SEC. 9. Any resident member at the Union Printers Home at Colorado Springs who is expelled from said Home shall not be eligible to the old age pension until one year after such expulsion.

SEC. 10. Secretaries of subordinate unions shall forward every four weeks to the International secretary-treasurer a true and correct list of applicants entitled to pensions. One receipt of such list the International secretary-treasurer shall transmit the amount due to the local secretary for distribution.

SEC. 11. Any beneficiary who has knowingly testified falsely concerning his or her qualifications as a worthy applicant for said pension shall be debarred from receiving pension for such time as the executive council may deem fit.

SEC. 12. The executive council shall have the power at all times to review any pension case, and if in its opinion circumstances warrant it, the beneficiary may be debarred from further participation in the pension fund.

SEC. 13. In order to meet exigencies that may arise, the executive council is authorized and empowered to make such changes in administering the old age pension fund as it may deem wise after said plan has been established.

SEC. 14. Any member of the International Typographical Union in good standing at time of enlisting in the regular or volunteer army or navy of the United States during the Spanish-American war shall be considered as having been a continuous contributing member during such enlistment, providing he re-established membership as soon as possible after his discharge from said war.

DECISIONS AND INTERPRETATIONS OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL GOVERNING PAYMENT OF THE OLD AGE PENSION

The pension applications passed upon favorably by the executive council of the International Typographical Union are approved subject to the following conditions:

1. The council approves all pension applications on the understanding that the applicant, eligible in all other particulars and requirements, "finds it impossible to secure sustaining employment."

2. Where members, applicants for the pension, are residents of institutions maintained by the nation, state, county or municipality, they shall not be eligible for the pension while at such institutions. This ruling does not apply to fraternal homes or institutions established by fraternal societies for the benefit of their members.

3. Where members, applicants for the pension, also draw a pension from the nation, state, county or municipality, or from employers or other sources, and are not residents of publicly supported institutions, they shall be eligible for the pension.

4. An inmate of an institution maintained by the state who spends ninety days of each year at his home outside the institution is a resident of said institution until he completely severs his connection with it, and is not entitled to the old age pension during the ninety days he is on his furlough.

5. Residents of the Union Printers Home shall not be eligible for the pension while at that institution.

6. Members who earn more than two days' pay at the printing trade at the scale of the union with which they are affiliated, shall not be entitled to the pension for that week.

7. Pensioners must at all times be in possession of a current working card, with the proper International due stamp attached, showing all International dues and assessments to have been paid.

8. The pension is to be paid every four weeks, checks therefor to be payable to the interested member and transmitted to him through the secretary of his union.

Digitized by Google

9. Holders of traveling cards desiring to apply for the pension must deposit their cards with a local union, and file their petitions through it.

10. All members who are receiving the old age pension must regularly pay International per capita tax, amounting to 50 cents per month, and in addition thereto 30 cents per month as the pension assessment, and 30 cents per month as the mortuary fund assessment, the total monthly payment to the International Union from such members to be $1.10.

11. The pension law as it now stands does not give local and International officers any control over pensioners as regards the use of their pensions. In the opinion of the council a pensioner is at liberty to spend his money in any way he sees fit. If a pensioner is not totally incapacitated for work on account of his age and incapacitates himself by constant debauchery it would then become the duty of the local officers to make a specific report on his case and ask the executive council for a ruling. All members on the pension roll who are able to work, and who can obtain work, are expected to accept it.

12. Members of the International Typographical Union not working at their trade, and otherwise eligible to the pension under our laws, but having employment in positions paying salaries that are presumed to represent sustaining employment —that is, holding a position that if filled by any other person would be regarded as sustaining employment—are not entitled to receive the pension.

DECISIONS OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL AS TO MEMBERSHIP OF APPLICANTS FOR THE OLD AGE PENSION AND ADMISSION TO THE UNION PRINTERS HOME.

1. Any member suspended or expelled for nonpayment of dues and subsequently readmitted as a new member on the payment of the regular initiation fee of the local union will not be entitled to the old age pension until twenty years after the date of his last admission.

2. A member who stands suspended can reestablish continuous membership when he is reinstated by paying all International dues and assessments he owed at the time of his suspension, and International dues and assessments from the time he was suspended up to and including the date of his reinstatement, and the legal reinstatement fee, provided he was not, during the time of his suspension or expulsion, guilty of ratting or any violation of union rules and regulations, and provided further that reinstatement is not sought for the purpose of obtaining the old age pension.

3. The council holds that members who make application for the pension under the accumulative membership law must have established continuous membership prior to the taking effect of the old age pension law—January 1, 1908—in order to entitle such applicants to the pension. In other words, continuous membership can not now be established by the payment of arrearages for the purpose of acquiring a right to the beneficial features of the International Typographical Union.

4. All residents of the Home, under the law, must be active members in good standing and during the time they stay at the Home should be considered as continuous active members of the organization. The law exempts members at the Home from the payment of International per capita tax and specifically states that they shall be considered as members in good standing. A member, therefore, completing his twenty years' continuous active membership at the Home would be entitled to the old age pension should he leave the Home, provided he can meet the requirements of the law in every other particular.

5. Section 6, article v, of the by-laws of the International Typographical Union, provides for the payment of the old age pension to any member of the International Typographical Union who has reached the age of 60 years and who has been in good standing for a period of twenty years, or any member who has reached the age of 70 years and who has been in continuous good standing for a period of ten years and who finds it impossible to secure sustaining employment. It was never intended by the law that a member could make application for the pension immediately upon reaching the age of 60 years and with a view to receiving the pension at some future date, or at widely intermittent periods. The pension fund was provided for the relief of members who can meet its requirements relative to age and membership and who, through the infirmities of age and other causes, are unable to obtain sustaining employment. A member who is out of employment for a month or so and who has had regular employment prior to that time, is still able to work, and with good prospects of again securing employment within a reasonable period, can not be considered as coming under the provisions of the law and can not make application for the old age pension, go upon the pension roll and draw the pension whenever he happens to be out of work. To place a different construction upon the law would make it an out-of-work benefit rather than an old age pension. Neither is the pension fund intended as a sick benefit. It was adopted for the relief of members whose opportunity for securing sustaining employment has vanished or is at that point, or nearly so, so far as the printing business is concerned.

DECISIONS OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RELATIVE TO THE PAYMENT OF PER CAPITA TAX, THE OLD AGE PENSION AND MORTUARY ASSESSMENTS BY MEMBERS NOT FOLLOWING PRINTING TRADE AND PROPRIETOR MEMBERS.

Active members whose cards are deposited with a local union and who are not seeking work at the printing business or who are following other pursuits must pay dues and assessments monthly as follow:

1. Local dues as the laws of the local union provide.
2. Fifty cents per month as International per capita tax.
3. Thirty cents per month as the old age pension assessment.
4. Thirty cents per month as the mortuary assessment.

The above applies to all members who are not actively seeking work at the printing business or who are following other pursuits.

Proprietor Members.

Members who are running printing offices must pay local dues as the laws of the union to which they belong require. In addition to this they must pay 50 cents per month per capita to the International Typographical Union, and the pension and mortuary assessments at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent for each on the scale of the local union, but in no case can they pay less than 30 cents per month on each assessment.

Members Working at Printing Trade.

Active members whose cards are deposited with a local union and who are seeking work at the printing trade must pay dues and assessments monthly as follows:

1. Local dues as the laws of the local union provide.
2. Fifty cents per month as International per capita tax.
3. One-half of 1 per cent on total earnings as the old age pension assessment.
4. One-half of 1 per cent on total earnings as the mortuary assessment.

If through dulness of trade a member of this class is idle he is not liable for the pension and mortuary assessments during the time he is out of work, because he does not earn anything in that period, but he must produce evidence to the local secretary that he is actually seeking work at the printing trade.

If through temporary illness (temporary illness being construed to mean an illness of not more than one month's duration) a member of this class is idle he is not liable for the pension and mortuary assessments during that time; but if such illness continues beyond one month then he must pay 30 cents per month as the mortuary assessment and 30 cents per month as the pension assessment in addition to International Typographical Union per capita tax.

Where a member works a day or more in the mechanical department of an office and the remainder of his time in another department or at an outside pursuit, he shall be classed as working at the trade and pay dues as above and the assessments for full time upon the scale of the union for the class of mechanical work performed.

Members of Union Printers Home or on Old Age Pension Roll.

Active members whose cards are deposited with a local union and who are residents of the Union Printers Home are by law exempted from the payment of International Typographical Union per capita tax, and by an action of the executive council, subsequently endorsed by convention action, they were exempted from the payment of the old age pension assessment and are not eligible for the pension while residing at the Home. In the past the death benefit of $75 has been paid on the death of a resident of the Home when the expense of burial was not paid from the Home funds. In all instances where burial is made in the Home plot in Evergreen cemetery, Colorado Springs, the Home fund is charged with the burial expenses, and the burial benefit is not paid. In the future, on the death of a resident of the Home, the executive council will continue to pay a death benefit of $75, provided the expenses of burial are not paid from the Home funds; this $75 burial benefit to be paid from the mortuary fund of the organization. This action is based on the exemption of residents of the Home from the payment of the mortuary assessment. If, however, any resident of the Home arranges to pay, through his local union (or the union to which he belongs pays for him), the sum of 30 cents per month from January 1, 1912, as the mortuary assessment, the International Typographical Union will then pay the mortuary benefit on the basis of the mortuary benefit law, as found in sections 15 to 20, article v, International by-laws, deducting the burial expenses when interment is made in the Home plot. To protect a member at the Home the union with which he is affiliated should remit local dues and carry him on its rolls as an active member.

All members who are receiving the old age pension must regularly pay International per capita tax, amounting to 50 cents per month, and in addition thereto 30 cents per month as the pension assessment, and 30 cents per month as the mortuary assessment, the total monthly payment to the International Union from such members to be $1.10.

Members Holding Traveling Cards and in Country Towns or Not Working at Trade.

Members holding traveling cards and located in unorganized towns must renew them through headquarters as International law provides. The holders of traveling cards so situated must pay International dues and assessments as follows:

1. Fifty cents per month as International per capita tax.
2. One-half of 1 per cent on total earnings as the old age pension assessment.
3. One-half of 1 per cent on total earnings as the mortuary assessment.
4. If not seeking work at the printing trade, following other pursuits or engaged in business for himself, the cardholder must pay 60 cents per month as the pension and mortuary assessments in addition to per capita tax.
5. Any member holding a traveling card and working at the trade in an unorganized town and failing to report his earnings will be charged 60 cents per month as the pension and mortuary assessments.

Members Depositing or Renewing Traveling Cards.

Whenever a member who is following the trade presents a traveling card within date upon which dues and assessments have accumulated, the secretary receiving the card shall collect per capita tax at the rate of 50 cents per month, and the old age pension and mortuary assessments at the rate of 30 cents per month each. If the card has expired it must be renewed as is provided in section 83, International Typographical Union general laws for 1916.

Payment of Benefits.

The amount of the mortuary benefit paid in each case will be based upon the number of years the deceased had been a continuous active member in good standing at the time of death as shown by the records of the International Typographical Union and the death claim papers, which must be prepared as provided in the law. Benefits will be paid as follows:

Seventy-five dollars on the death of a member in good standing who joins the union subsequent to January 1, 1912, who was 50 years of age when initiated, regardless of the number of years of membership. (Section 20 of the mortuary benefit law.) A member who becomes such subsequent to January 1, 1912, after reaching the age of 50 years, by depositing an honorable withdrawal card, comes under the provisions of this section.

Seventy-five dollars on the death of a member in good standing who at the time of demise had been a continuous active member for one year or less.

One hundred dollars on the death of a member who at the time of demise had been a continuous active member for more than one and less than two years, provided the deceased was not 50 years of age when last becoming an active member.

One hundred and twenty-five dollars on the death of a member in good standing who at the time of demise had been a continuous active member two years and less than three years, provided the deceased member was not 50 years of age when last becoming an active member.

Two hundred dollars on the death of a member in good standing who at the time of demise had been a continuous member for three years and less than four years, provided the deceased member was not 50 years of age when last becoming an active member.

Three hundred dollars on the death of a member in good standing who at the time of demise had been a continuous active member for four years and less than five years, provided the deceased member was not 50 years of age when last becoming an active member.

Four hundred dollars on the death of a member in good standing who at the time of demise had been a continuous active member for five or more years, provided the deceased member was not 50 years of age when last becoming an active member.

If the deceased had been suspended and reinstated, no benefit will be paid if death occurs within three months after such reinstatement. (See section 16 of the mortuary benefit law.)

New Form of Working Cards.

At the Cleveland convention section 63 of the general laws was amended to read as follows:

"Section 63. Every member must demand, and shall receive, on payment of the proper sum, due stamps or a working card for each month's dues paid. The card shall show the sum paid for per capita tax, local dues, old age pension and mortuary assessments, and such other assessments as may be levied by the local or International Union, and the date of said payments. It shall be optional with subordinate unions to choose either the adhesive stamps or working cards hereinbefore mentioned, but in every instance an adhesive stamp shall be attached or a stamped working card issued for each month's dues paid, and the stamp or card canceled to show the particular month's dues paid."

Secretaries of subordinate unions should see that the provisions of this section are complied with. Sample working cards, so arranged as to make this possible with very little trouble, can be secured from headquarters. These cards can then be procured from Secretary-Treasurer Hays or they can be printed by local unions.

INVESTMENT OF I. T. U. FUNDS.

Section 3, of article v, of the International Typographical Union by-laws, reads as follows:

The executive council shall take immediate steps to secure the funds of the International Typographical Union in excess of $50,000 (the amount of the bond of the secretary-treasurer), by investing such excess in bonds of the United States, or in approved, non-taxable state, county, township, city or school bonds, the said investments to be made by the president and secretary-treasurer under the order of and with the approval of the executive council: Provided, That if the executive council deems advisable, it may order the president and secretary-treasurer to deposit the funds of the International Typographical Union in any reputable bank or banks to be selected by the executive council, and accept as security for such deposits bonds from any approved surety company of good reputation, and such deposit bonds shall be made payable to the president and secretary-treasurer and their successors as trustees for the International Typographical Union and its members, and for any breach of said bonds the president and secretary-treasurer and their successors shall be authorized in their name as such president and secretary-treasurer as trustees for the International Typographical Union and its members to bring suit against any defaulting bank and its surety or sureties.

Under the provisions of this section, the executive council has from time to time invested various sums from the funds of the International Typographical Union in bonds of approved stability and at the present time there is in the possession of the International Union government, state, county and city bonds as listed in the report of the secretary-treasurer to the amount of $674,466.98. These bonds are deposited in safety deposit vaults in the Fletcher American National Bank at Indianapolis, Ind.

A list of the bonds, together with the rate of interest which the organization realizes thereon, follows:

Hawaiian government public improvement bonds of a par value of $100,000 at a price of 102, the total investment for the same being $102,000, together with $777.78 accumulated interest, making the total price of this issue $102,777.78. In this case, as in all other cases, the amount paid as accumulated interest was returned to the International Typographical Union on its first interest day. These bonds yield an income to the International Typographical Union of about 3¾ per cent.

Hawaiian government public improvement bonds of a par value of $50,000 at a price of 102, the total price being $51,000, together with accumulated interest amounting to $211.11, making the total investment at that time in this issue $51,211.11. These bonds yield the International Typographical Union about 3¾ per cent interest.

Chicago West Park commissioners' bonds of a par value of $125,000, at a price of $124,687.50, together with $1,368.88 accumulated interest, making the total investment in this issue at that time $126,056.38.

New York city corporate stock bonds of a par value of $100,000 at the price of $100,750, together with $472.22 accumulated interest, making the total investment in this issue at that time $101,222.22.

Both the Chicago and New York bonds net the International Union 4 per cent interest.

State of Massachusetts gold 3 per cent registered bonds of a par value of $50,000 at the net price of $42,625, together with $433.33 accumulated interest, making the total investment in these bonds at that time $43,058.33. These are 3 per cent bonds, but at the price paid they net the International Union 3⅞ per cent.

City of Buffalo (N. Y.) parks, registered, of a par value of $50,000, at a net price of $51,125, together with $354.17 accumulated interest, making the total investment in these bonds at that time $51,479.17. These bonds net the International Union about 4 per cent.

City of Milwaukee library, park and school bonds of a par value of $50,000 at the net price of $50,603.15, together with accumulated interest to the amount of $601.64, making the total investment in these bonds at that time $51,204.79. These bonds net the International Typographical Union

4.15 per cent interest. Of these bonds $13,000 has matured and been paid.

$10,000 of the city of Ottawa, Ont., on a 4¼ per cent income basis.

2,000 pounds sterling city of Victoria (B. C.) debentures, which yield an income of 4.4 per cent.

$10,000 Province of Ontario bonds which net the International 3.9 per cent.

2,000 pounds sterling city of Toronto 3½ per cent bonds at a price which nets the International Union about 4.3 per cent.

$10,000 city of Calgary (Alta.) 4½ per cent bonds at a price that nets the International 4⅝ per cent.

$25,000 San Francisco Geary street railway bonds at a market price which nets the International Union about 4.3 per cent.

$10,000 city of Nashville (Tenn.) 5 per cent bonds at a price which nets the International Union 4.8 per cent.

$16,000 Porto Rican registered 4 per cent bonds at a price which nets the International Union 3.8 per cent.

$13,000 Saskatoon (Sask.) 5 per cent municipal bonds at a price which nets the International Union 5⅜ per cent.

$10,000 Vigo county (Ind.) funding bonds at a price which nets the International Union 4 per cent.

$6,000 South Bend (Ind.) 4 per cent school bonds at a price which nets the International Union 4 per cent.

$9,000 city of Indianapolis bonds at a price which nets the International Typographical Union 4 per cent.

$25,000 city of Colorado Springs bonds at a price which nets the International Union 4 per cent.

$3,000 San Francisco Geary street railway bonds at par which yield 4½ per cent.

$30,000 New York city corporate bonds at a price of $31,211.65. These are 4¼ per cent bonds, but at the price paid they net the International about 4 per cent.

After the close of the fiscal year the executive council purchased Liberty Loan bonds in the sum of $50,000. These bonds had not been delivered at the time of closing this report.

Where bonds were purchased at a premium, a portion of the yearly interest received thereon is credited against the investment, to the end that these bonds will appear on the books of the organization at par value when they mature.

THE TYPOTHETAE ARBITRATION AGREEMENT.

The committee which framed the first arbitration agreement between the typographical union and the employers in the book and job branch, adopted May 23, 1917, included the following representatives of the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America: William Green, New York; J. W. Hastie, Chicago; E. F. Hamm, Chicago; Frederick Alfred, New York; G. H. Gardner, Cleveland; G. Frederick Kalkoff, New York; Hiram Sherwood, New York; Morton B. Hirsh, Philadelphia; Louis D. Woodward, St. Louis. Marsden G. Scott, Walter W. Barrett, Hugo Miller, Charles N. Smith and John W. Hays, comprising the executive council, represented the International Typographical Union. The agreement, adopted by a vote of 26,757 to 14,282, and effective August 4, 1917, follows:

This agreement, made and entered into this .... day of ...., 19.., between ..... and their successors, constituting the International arbitration committee of the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America, hereinafter referred to as the Closed dhop Division, party of the first part, duly authorized to act for and in behalf of the employers who are members of the Closed Shop Division, and who may become parties to this agreement, and

..... President,
..... First Vice-President,
..... Second Vice-President,
..... Third Vice-President,
..... Secretary-Treasurer,

and their successors, constituting the executive council of the International Typographical Union of North America, hereinafter referred to as the International Typographical Union, party of the second part, duly authorized to act for and in its behalf, is for the purpose of establishing industrial peace in union composing rooms and departments thereof, of commercial printing and publishing establishments not classed as daily newspaper offices, within the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union of North America, and is as follows:

Section 1. On and after ...., 1917, and until December 31, 1926, any member of the Closed Shop Division who is conducting a union department under the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union shall have the guarantee hereinafter set forth when the requirements of this international arbitration agreement are observed. This agreement shall cover all contracts with local unions, whether in writing or oral understandings. Oral understandings shall be understood as applying to instances wherein union scales are being paid, but where there are no written agreements covering specified periods of time. Such oral understandings which are not for a definite period may be terminated by either side on thirty days' notice in writing. This agreement shall embrace all contracts of either form which are in effect on December 31, 1916, and contracts of subsequent date which have been approved by the president of the International Typographical Union.

Sec. 2. To acquire the protection of this agreement, an individual arbitration contract must be executed in quadruplicate in the form prescribed in this agreement. The holder of such individual arbitration contract shall be entitled to the protection guaranteed by the provisions of this agreement and the terms of the individual arbitration contract in respect to any contract such member may have with a local union of the International Typographical Union.

Sec. 3. Subject to the conditions hereinbefore prescribed, every member of the Closed Shop Division who is a party to this agreement and holding an individual arbitration contract shall have the following guaranteeing:

(a) He shall be protected against walkouts, strikes or boycotts by the members of the union or unions with which he has contracted relations under this agreement, and against any other form of concerted interference by them with the usual and regular operation of any of his departments of labor.

(b) In the event of a difference arising between an employer having an individual arbitration contract and any local union a party thereto, all work shall continue without interruption pending proceedings looking to conciliation or arbitration, either local or international, and the wages, hours and working conditions prevailing at the time the difference arises shall be preserved unchanged until a final decision of the matter at issue shall be reached.

(c) All differences which can not be settled by conciliation shall be referred to arbitration in the manner stipulated in this agreement.

Sec. 4. All differences arising under an existing written contract, or an oral understanding, which involve the interpretation to be placed upon any part or parts of this agreement, shall be submitted to the chairman of the international arbitration committee of the Closed Shop Division and the president of the International Typographical Union, together with the arguments and briefs of both parties and an agreed statement of facts in the controversy, accompanied by a joint letter of transmittal, certifying that each party is familiar with the contents of all documents. In case these two officials can not reach a decision upon the issues involved, their differences shall be submitted to the International Board of Arbitration.

Sec. 5. All differences other than those specified in section 4 of this agreement, including disagreements over local union rules and regulations or arising in negotiations for a new scale of wages, including hours of labor and working conditions, as well as in renewing or extending an existing scale, or in respect to a contract, which can not be settled by conciliation, shall be referred to a local board of arbitration in the manner stipulated in the code of procedure as set forth in exhibit "B."

Sec. 6. The question whether a department shall be union or non-union shall not be classed as a "difference" to be arbitrated. Union departments shall be understood to mean such as are made up of union employes and in which the union has been formally recognized by the employer.

Sec. 7. If either party to a local arbitration shall be dissatisfied with a decision by a local board, appeal may be taken to the International Board of Arbitration, to be constituted as hereinafter provided. Such appeal may also be taken to the International Board of Arbitration by either party if for any cause a decision shall not have been rendered by a local board within ninety days after the questions to be arbitrated have been duly determined under the code of procedure.

Sec. 8. Local union laws not affecting wages, hours or working conditions and the laws of the International Typographical Union in effect January 1, 1916, shall not be subject to the provisions of this arbitration agreement, but all changes in and any new International Typographical Union laws thereafter adopted that affect wages, hours or working conditions shall not be operative until accepted by the International Board of Arbitration. All differences regarding or arising under such laws shall be referred to the International Board of Arbitration. Provided, that International or local laws enacted subsequent to the execution of an individual arbitration or local contract shall not affect either contract during its life, except by mutual agreement.

Sec. 9. The International Board of Arbitration shall consist of three members of the executive council of the International Typographical Union, or their proxies, and three members of the International Arbitration Committee of the Closed Shop Division, or their proxies, duly authorized to act for and in behalf of the employers who are members of the Closed Shop Division and who may become parties to this agreement. The International Board of Arbitration shall meet at such time and place as may be determined by it. Due notice of time and place of meeting of the International Board of Arbitration shall be given all interested parties. If the board as thus constituted is unable, after considering a case at two meetings, to reach a decision, the membership of the board may be increased, by unanimous vote, by the addition of a seventh and disinterested member, who shall act with them at the earliest possible date after his appointment, and only on the matters that made his selection necessary.

Sec. 10. The award of the International Board of Arbitration in all cases shall include a determination of all the issues involved; it shall cover the full period between the raising of the issues and their final settlement; any change in the wage scale may be made effective from the date the issue first arose, at the discretion of the board. An award by a majority of the International Board of Arbitration shall be final, and shall be accepted as such by the parties to the dispute.

Sec. 11. At the request of either party to an arbitration, the International Board of Arbitration shall determine whether evasion, collusion or fraud has characterized either the local or international proceedings, or whether either party has failed to comply with, or refuses to fulfill its obligations under a decision, or has omitted to perform any duty prescribed therein, or has secured any unfair or fraudulent advantage, or has evaded any provision of this agreement or any rule of the code of procedure, or is not acting in good faith. At the conclusion of such inquiry it shall be wholly within the power of the International Board of Arbitration to reject all that has been previously done and order a rehearing before the International Board of Arbitration, or before a new local board; or it may find against the offending party or annul the individual arbitration contract. In the event of either party to a dispute refusing to accept and comply with a decision of a local board which is not appealed, or with a decision of the International Board of Arbitration, or with any of the provisions of this International arbitration agreement, as determined by a decision of the International Board of Arbitration, all aid and support to the employer or the local union refusing acceptance and compliance shall be withdrawn by both parties to this agreement. The acts of such recalcitrant employer or union shall be publicly disavowed and the aggrieved party shall be furnished by the other with an official document to that effect.

Sec. 12. The form of individual arbitration contract set forth in Exhibit "A" and the code of procedure set forth in Exhibit "B" are hereby made a part of this agreement and shall be as binding on the parties hereto as if the same were set forth at length herein.

Sec. 13. This agreement shall remain in effect from the .... day of ...., 1917, to the thirty-first day of December, 1926, inclusive, but amendments may be proposed at any meeting of the International Board of Arbitration by either party hereto, and on acceptance by the other party to this agreement shall become a part hereof.

Sec. 14. Believing that the establishment of industrial peace in the departments of printing offices covered by this agreement will prove of mutual benefit to employers and employes and to the commercial printing industry, and realizing that trade customs and shop practices in some respects are not uniform in all the cities which the arbitration agreement is intended to include, it is agreed that the trade customs and shop practices now in effect in union printing offices in each jurisdiction shall not be disturbed or changed by the enforcement of any rules not in effect in such jurisdiction, except by mutual agreement between the parties to local scales and contracts in effect on the date when this agreement shall be made effective.

In witness whereof, the undersigned have affixed their respective signatures in quadruplicate this .... day of ....., 19..

"EXHIBIT "A."

Individual Arbitration Contract.

It is agreed between ....., party of the first part, and ..... Union No. ....., of ....., party of the second part, by its president, duly authorized to act in its behalf, as follows:

Section 1. In the event of any difference arising between the parties to this contract which can not be adjusted by conciliation such difference shall be submitted to arbitration under the code of procedure provided by the International Arbitration Agreement of the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America effective ....., 1917, between the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America and the International Typographical Union of North America.

Sec. 2. This contract shall cover any contract between the parties of the first and second parts, whether the same is in writing or an oral understanding, subject to the conditions expressed in the International Arbitration Agreement, effective ....., 1917, between the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America and the International Typographical Union of North America.

Sec. 3. It is expressly understood and agreed that the International Arbitration Agreement and Code of Procedure, both hereto attached, between the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America and the International Typographical Union of North America shall be integral parts of this contract and shall have the same force and effect as though set forth in the contract itself.

Sec. 4. The parties hereto specifically authorize the executive council of the International Typographical Union of North America and the International Arbitration Committee of the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America to give public disavowal to any failure to comply with this contract as provided in section 11 of the International Arbitration Agreement.

This contract shall be in full force and effect on the ..... day of ....., 19.., and continue until the 31st day of December, 1926, inclusive.

In witness whereof the undersigned employer and the president of the ..... Union No. ..... have hereunto affixed their respective signatures this ..... day of ....., 191..

EXHIBIT "B."

Code of Procedure.

Section 1. Any employer who is a member of the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America who desires to secure protection afforded under the terms of the International Arbitration Agreement, shall notify the president of the local union operating in the department he wishes the contract to cover, of his desire to secure an individual arbitration contract to be effective from ....., to December 31, 1926, inclusive. If the issuance of an individual arbitration contract as above is satisfactory to the said union, the parties shall execute in quadruplicate an individual arbitration contract, as set forth in Exhibit "A." Employers securing individual arbitration contracts shall have continuous protection for the department to which said contracts apply during the period covered by such contracts.

Conciliation.

Sec. 2. There shall be selected by the respective parties concerned, from within the localities affected by the issues raised, such number of representatives of the employers as the employers may deem desirable, not exceeding three, and an equal number of representatives of the local union, said representatives to constitute a standing local board of conciliation.

Sec. 3. In case of a vacancy, absence or refusal of any member of this standing local board of conciliation to act, another member shall be appointed in his place.

Sec. 4. To this standing local board of conciliation shall be referred all differences which may arise under any local contract, or alleged violations thereof, and such board shall meet when any question of difference shall have been referred to it for a decision by either party to this agreement. A majority vote of the standing local board of conciliation, each party represented therein being at all times entitled to cast the full vote of its representation thereon, shall be final and binding, and the decisions of the standing local board of conciliation shall include any financial claim if such be involved in a dispute brought to it for decision.

Sec. 5. Should the standing local board of conciliation be unable to reach a decision in a dispute at the end of ten days after the same has been brought to its attention, the dispute shall be referred to a local board of arbitration as hereinafter provided: Provided, however, that the standing local board of conciliation, by unanimous vote, may extend the time limit of ten days to twenty days if in its opinion an agreement can be reached in that time.

Sec. 6. For the purpose of renewing or extending contracts covering scale provisions affecting wages, hours and working conditions, the standing local board of conciliation may be enlarged or changed as the parties to this contract may unanimously agree upon. When thus enlarged, for the purpose stated above, this committee shall be known as the Scale Conference Committee. It shall meet within thirty days after notice by either party in writing of proposed changes to be made in renewing or extending existing contracts, and if unable to reach a decision within sixty days after its first meeting, unless further time is agreed to by both parties to the contract, the issues in dispute for the renewal or extension of said contracts shall be referred to the local board of arbitration.

Sec. 7. An issue is raised at the time a written request is made by either party presenting in detail changes in conditions desired.

Sec. 8. When an issue has been raised either party in interest may bring the same to the attention of the standing local board of conciliation as provided in section 4. The party upon whom the original demand is made may present a counter proposition, provided it be submitted in writing and in detail, which counter proposition shall be submitted as soon as possible, and in any event within sixty (60) days.

Sec. 9. Should the standing local board of conciliation fail to reach a decision as provided in sections 5 and 6, each party shall prepare its statement, embracing the conditions that it seeks to establish. Each statement must be complete in itself, and shall include only the propositions and counter propositions originally submitted to the standing local board of conciliation; and copies thereof shall be forwarded to the chairman of the International Arbitration Committee of the Closed Shop Division and the president of the International Typographical Union, accompanied by a letter of transmittal, to be signed jointly by the parties in interest, certifying that they are acquainted with the contents of both statements. The chairman and president shall thereupon determine the questions or subjects which can be properly submitted to arbitration, and shall promptly notify by joint letters the interested parties of their decision. In case the two officials can not agree, their differences shall be submitted to the International Board of Arbitration.

LOCAL ARBITRATION.

Sec. 10. Within thirty (30) days after questions for arbitration have been determined a local board of arbitration composed of residents of the locality in which the controversy arises must be formed, the members thereof, not exceeding three representatives for each party to the controversy, to be named by each side, respectively. The board as thus constituted shall select a secretary from among its members. The original members shall then choose an additional member, who shall be a disinterested party and shall act as chairman of the board. If the chairman of the local board shall not have been selected within thirty (30) days after the questions to be arbitrated have been determined, he shall be named by the chairman of the International Arbitration committee and the president of the International Typographical Union, or their proxies, upon the request of either of the interested parties. The two officials named, or their proxies, may for this purpose visit the locality if they deem it necessary. Any expense thus incurred shall be defrayed equally by the parties to the controversy. The chairman of the local board shall preside, put motions, etc., and shall be entitled to vote on all propositions which may properly come before the board in open session. He shall declare a motion carried only when at least a majority of the arbitrators shall have voted affirmatively thereon. At the conclusion of the hearing the chairman shall retire and the other members of the board shall go into executive session and immediately take up a consideration of the issues involved. If in executive session a tie vote occurs on any proposition, or if there are any differences, questions or propositions which do not receive the votes of a majority of the original members of the board, the chairman shall be called in to cast the deciding vote on all unsettled questions or propositions.

Sec. 11. After the local board of arbitration has been organized, it shall proceed forthwith to conduct its hearings under the following rules:

1. It may demand duplicate typewritten statements of grievances.
2. It may examine all parties involved in any differences referred to it for adjudication.
3. It shall employ such stenographers, etc., as may be necessary to facilitate business, and to provide a record for use in the event of an appeal, said record to be properly paged and indexed.
4. It may require affidavits on all disputed points.
5. It shall have free access to all books and records bearing on points at issue.
6. Equal opportunity shall be allowed for presentation of evidence and argument.
7. In event of either party to the dispute refusing to appear or present its case after due notice, it may be adjudged in default and decision shall then be rendered against such party.
8. All evidence communicated to the board in confidence shall be preserved inviolate and no record of such evidence shall be kept, except for use on appeal, in which case such inviolability shall be preserved.
9. The party making the original demand shall have the right to present its case and evidence without interruption, excepting that when oral evidence is introduced cross-examination of witnesses shall be allowed. The opposing party shall have the same right in turn. The first party shall then have the right to present evidence strictly in rebuttal and the opposing party shall be allowed to present counter-evidence strictly in surrebuttal. When objection is made by either party to the admission of any evidence offered by the other party, the board by vote shall decide as to the admissibility of the evidence in question.
10. In case of the inability of either side to present evidence at the moment, the order may be varied to the extent of allowing such evidence to be presented at such session as may be agreed upon by the parties to the controversy, or as may be ordered by the local board of arbitration. No evidence shall be received or considered that was not presented at a regular open session of the board, except that it shall be allowable for the members of the board, in any case, to visit any office in a body to see the operation of labor therein, or for any other necessary purpose, to aid in arriving at a just decision.
11. Oral argument may be limited to one speech on each side after all evidence has been presented. Written pleadings, instead of oral arguments, shall be allowed whenever agreed upon by the parties to the controversy or whenever ordered by the local board of arbitration.
12. There shall be an agreement by at least a majority of the members of the board as to the exact time and place of hearing, of which both parties shall be notified in season. The sessions shall be continuous, except for necessary intermissions, until the hearing is concluded.

Sec. 12. When a hearing is concluded the board shall, without unnecessary delay, and as set forth in section 10 of this code, go into executive session, from which all persons except the original members of the board shall be excluded, for the determination of its award. In its deliberation the transcript of the stenographic report shall be accepted as the best evidence of what occurred at the hearing, unless it be shown that gross errors exist in said transcript. Should the original members of the board be unable to decide upon the award, the chairman shall be called in, as provided in section 10 of this code. The award of the board must be formulated and signed by all the members thereof at a regular executive session, after there has been full opportunity for consideration and discussion, the date and time of such session having previously been determined at a full meeting of the board. If any member of the board dissents from the award and wishes to file a dissenting opinion, he shall give immediate notice to that effect, and shall, within forty-eight (48) hours after the award has been decided upon and before it has been promulgated, formulate his reasons for dissenting, and such opinion must be signed by him before final adjournment at a regular executive session, arranged for as above provided. Such dissenting opinion, when thus signed, must be attached to the award.

Sec. 13. The board shall not be compelled to set forth its reasons for making the award, but may do so in the written award only. In framing its award the findings shall be expressed in detail, to the end that no misunderstanding shall afterward occur. An award of a local board shall be for not less than one year nor for more than three years; provided, however, that the provisions of the local agreement shall not be violated thereby.

Sec. 14. All expenses of a local arbitration board shall be divided equally between the union and the other interested party or parties.

INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION.

Sec. 15. When either party to a local arbitration shall desire to appeal to the International Board of Arbitration written notice to that effect must be given to the other party within five (5) days after the local decision has been rendered, and the appeal shall be filed with the International Board of Arbitration within thirty (30) days after such decision. When an appeal is under consideration by the International Board of Arbitration, it shall not take evidence, but both parties to the controversy may appear personally or may submit the records and briefs of the local hearing and make oral or written arguments in support of their several contentions. They may submit an agreed statement of facts or a transcript of testimony, properly certified to before a notary public by the stenographer taking the original evidence or depositions.

Sec. 16. The International Board of Arbitration must act when its services are desired by either party to an appeal as above, and shall proceed with all possible dispatch in rendering such services.

Sec. 17. So far as applicable, the rules of procedure governing local arbitration boards shall govern the International Board of Arbitration.

Sec. 18. Should either party to a local or International arbitration desire to make an allegation against the other, as provided in section 11 of the International arbitration agreement, the complaint shall be prepared in writing and in quadruplicate. A copy thereof shall be delivered by registered mail to the chairman of the International Arbitration Committee of the Closed Shop Division, to the president of the International Typographical Union of North America, and to the party against whom the complaint is made.

Sec. 19. All awards of the International arbitration board shall be for not less than one year nor for more than three years; provided, however, that the provisions of the local agreement shall not be violated thereby.

Sec. 20. All expenses attendant upon the settlement of any case before the International Board of Arbitration shall be adjusted in each case in accordance with the directions of the International Board of Arbitration.

Sec. 21. These rules and this code may be amended at any meeting of the International Board of Arbitration in accordance with the method prescribed in section 13 of the International arbitration agreement.

ARBITRATION DECISIONS.

Four meetings of the International Board of Arbitration were held during the past year. The minutes of these meetings, containing the decisions rendered, are as follows:

June Meeting.

The International Board of Arbitration met in the office of Chairman H. N. Kellogg, of the special standing committee, in Indianapolis, Ind., June 21, 22 and 23, 1916.

There were present representing the American Newspaper Publishers' Association Chairman H. N. Kellogg, Charles H. Taylor, jr., of the Boston Globe, and W. S. Jones, of the Minneapolis Journal.

There were present representing the International Typographical Union President M. G. Scott, Vice-President W. W. Barrett and Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays.

The first matter given consideration was a dispute between St. Louis Typographical Union No. 8 and the St. Louis Times regarding the number of situations that should be given out in the composing room of that paper. E. E. Bradley appeared representing the St. Louis Times and Charles Hertenstein appeared representing St. Louis Typographical Union No. 8.

The Union being the moving party in this case, Mr. Hertenstein opened and his argument was followed by that of Mr. Bradley, after which a general discussion was had, and the board then proceeded to give consideration to another case from St. Louis, the same being a dispute between St. Louis Typographical Union No. 8 and the St. Louis publishers regarding the reproduction of an advertisement appearing in a rotogravure supplement. Mr. Hertenstein appeared representing St. Louis Typographical Union No. 8 and Mr. Bradley appeared representing his publication. After the arguments in this case, and at 12:30 the board adjourned to 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The International Board of Arbitration met at 2 P. M. as per adjournment, with all members present.

The board resumed consideration of the St. Louis dispute between the St. Louis Times and St. Louis Typographical Union No. 8 regarding the number of men that should be employed in the composing room of that paper, and the following decision was rendered:

This case relates to the number of machine operators to be employed in the composing room of the St. Louis Times.

The contention is one which should have been adjusted locally. The records show that the time worked by machine operators on a number of days greatly exceeded the maximum day established by the scale. It is the opinion of the board that operators should not be compelled to work nine and ten hours except in emergencies. It has not been shown that emergencies existed in the office mentioned in this appeal, and the board recommends that on the days when there is a large volume of work for machine operators an extra man or men be employed. This does not apply to 'regular extras' mentioned in section 18 of the contract.

The board then gave further consideration to the contention between St. Louis Typographical Union No. 8 and the St. Louis publishers regarding the reproduction of an advertisement in a rotogravure section, and rendered the following decision:

In this case the union claims that a Coca-Cola advertisement that appeared in the rotogravure section of the Post-Dispatch should be paid for 'at the ready print rate.' The claim is denied.

The International Board of Arbitration then gave consideration to a dispute between Kansas City Typographical Union No. 80 and the Kansas City Post regarding the claim of members of the union for back pay for certain Sunday work upon that publication, and rendered the following decision:

In this case the union claims back pay to the amount of $85.32 for men working on Sundays during the interim between the date on which the union notified the Post of its claim and the International Arbitration Board's decision August 30, 1915. The contention of the union is sustained.

The board then gave consideration to a dispute between the Indianapolis News management and Indianapolis Mailers' Union No. 10 that had been before it on previous occasions. The dispute arose regarding the jurisdiction over mailing machines known as the typograph and the addressograph machines. The board being unable to reach a decision, this case was passed for further consideration.

At 5 P. M. the board adjourned to meet at 10 A. M.

JUNE 22, 1916.

The International Arbitration Board met at the office of Chairman Kellogg at 10 A. M., as per adjournment, with Messrs. Kellogg, Jones and Brown representing the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, Mr. Brown having been substituted on the board for Mr. Taylor while the board gave consideration to an appeal from a decision of the local arbitration board on a dispute between the Boston Mailers and the Boston local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. Vice-President Charles N. Smith, of the International Typographical Union, and representing the Mailers' Trade District Union, was substituted for Mr. Barrett during the hearing of this case.

Mr. Bogart, of the Boston American, appeared before the board representing the Boston publishers and supporting the appeal. Mr. Spillane, of the Boston Mailers' Union, appeared representing the organization and advocating the endorsement of the decision of the local board.

At 1 P. M. the board adjourned to meet at 2:30 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The board met at 2:30 P. M., as per adjournment, with all members present, and resumed consideration of the Boston Mailers' case, Mr. Spillane arguing for the union. After the hearing of a rebuttal by Mr. Bogart and a sur-rebuttal by Mr. Spillane, the board went into executive session, and a general discussion took place upon the case in question. The board was unable to reach a decision on this case, and it was laid over, in the meantime being referred to Vice-President Charles N. Smith, representing the Mailers' Trade District Union, in order that he might make an effort at an adjustment.

At 6. P. M. the board adjourned to meet at 10 A. M.

JUNE 23, 1916.

The board met at 10 A. M., as per adjournment, with all members present, Charles H. Taylor, jr., resuming his place on the board, as did W. W. Barrett, representing the International Typographical Union.

The only questions coming before the board at this session were questions of dispute between Chairman H. N. Kellogg, of the joint standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and President Marsden G. Scott, of the International Typographical Union, regarding points subject to arbitration in scale disputes. The results of this conference were not in the nature of decisions, and at their conclusion the board adjourned.

October Meeting.

The International Arbitration Board of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the International Typographical Union met at 10 A. M. on October 31, 1916, in the office of Chairman Kellogg, in Indianapolis, Ind.

There were present representing the American Newspaper Publishers' Association H. N. Kellogg and Charles H. Taylor, jr. Announcement was made by the publishers' representatives that the third representative of the publishers was seriously ill at his home in Minneapolis and could not be present.

There were present representing the International Typographical Union President M. G. Scott, Vice-President Hugo Miller and Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays.

There being no case ready for consideration, the board adjourned to 10 A. M., November 1, 1916.

NOVEMBER 1, 1916.

The International Arbitration Board met at 10 A. M., as per adjournment, with all members present, Bruce Haldeman, of Louisville, Ky., being present as the third representative of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. The board took up an appeal case from a local arbitration decision rendered in a dispute between the Newark local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and Newark Typographical Union No. 103.

There appeared before the board representing the Newark local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association Eugene W. Farrell, of the Newark Evening News; Henry Joseph Auth, of the Newark Star-Eagle, and Louis Hannock, of the Newark Sunday Call. Henry Gottlob and William Dolson appeared representing Newark Typographical Union No. 103.

The appeal having been made by the publishers, the case was opened by them, and their arguments were followed by those of the representatives of the union.

At 11:45 A. M. the board adjourned to 2 P. M. for lunch and to give opportunity for a conference between the representatives of the two sides from Newark.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The board met at 2 P. M., as per adjournment, and resumed consideration of the Newark appeal case, Mr. Gottlob, of Newark Typographical Union, having the floor. Mr. Gottlob informed the board that the representatives of the two parties from Newark had been unable to reach an agreement on all of the points at issue, and the case was therefore still before the board.

At 4:45 P. M. the board adjourned to meet at 2 P. M. on November 2, 1916, the hour being made 2 P. M. in order that the representatives of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association could take up an arbitration case pending with the Stereotypers' International Union.

NOVEMBER 2, 1916.

The board met at 2 P. M., as per adjournment, with all members present, Mr. Rembold, of Cincinnati, taking the place of Bruce Haldeman as a representative of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association on the board.

Charles H. Taylor, jr., of the Boston Globe, and representing the publishers' association on the board, and Charles N. Smith, vice-president of the International Typographical Union and representing the Mailers' Trade District Union, reported that Mr. Smith had visited Boston and succeeded in securing an adjustment of the dispute between the Boston local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the Boston Mailers' Union that was before the International Arbitration Board at its last meeting.

The secretary of the board read a letter from St. Louis regarding the reproduction in a photoengravure section advertisement of one of the St. Louis papers. The board decided that a previous decision on this subject was made on a specific act and that it had no further effect, and any case outside of that must be brought in the usual manner and carried through in the usual way.

The board then took up a dispute between the Indianapolis local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and Indianapolis Typographical Union No. 1 as to the right of a foreman to compel a regular to work after he has put on a competent sub. Hilton U. Brown and Frank Eckert appeared for the Indianapolis publishers and Messrs. Hattery and Ankenbrock appeared for Indianapolis Typographical Union No. 1. This case was brought by the publishers, and Mr. Eckert opened the argument for the Indianapolis local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. After Mr. Eckert closed, Mr. Brown made a further statement for the publishers. Mr. Hattery opened the case for Indianapolis Typographical Union No. 1, and he was followed by Mr. Ankenbrock along the same line. Rebuttal and sur-rebuttal arguments were made, and after a general discussion the following decision was rendered:

Owing to the personal elements involved in this case the board dismisses it without prejudice to either side and recommends that the practice which has heretofore prevailed in emergencies in Indianapolis be continued.

Members of the union should respond to emergency calls for additional help by employers when made to the officers of the union, but employes whose positions are covered by competent substitutes can not be disciplined by foremen for failure to respond.

At this time Vice-President Smith, of the International Typographical Union, took the place of Vice-President Miller as the representative of the union, and a case that had been pending for some time before the board and involving a dispute between Indianapolis Mailers' Union and the Indianapolis local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association was taken up. After some discussion this case was referred to Vice-President Smith, of the International Typographical Union, with the request that he attempt to reach an adjustment thereon.

Further consideration was then given to the dispute between the Newark local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and Newark Typographical Union No. 103, but no decision was reached, and by agreement the case was passed over to the next meeting.

The board then adjourned.

February Meeting.

The International Arbitration Board of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the International Typographical Union met on February 28, 1917, in the office of Chairman Kellogg, of the special standing committee, in Indianapolis, Ind.

There were present representing the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, H. N. Kellogg, Indianapolis, Ind.; W. S. Jones, Minneapolis, Minn., and Charles H. Taylor, jr., of Boston, Mass.

There were present representing the International Typographical Union President Marsden G. Scott, Vice-President W. W. Barrett and Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays.

Vice-President Smith, of the International Typographical Union, was present during the hearing of the various cases.

The first matter to come before the board was an appeal case from a local arbitration board decision on a dispute between the Milwaukee local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and Milwaukee Typographical Union No. 23.

The Milwaukee local of the publishers' association was represented before the board by John Poppendieck, jr., and John W. Campsie.

Milwaukee Typographical Union No. 23 was represented before the board by John P. Keating and O. E. Thomas.

Mr. Poppendieck opened the discussion for the Milwaukee publishers, his remarks being followed by Mr. Keating, representing No. 23. Rebuttal and sur-rebuttal arguments were made and some informal discussion then took place

At 12:20 the board adjourned to meet at 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The board met at 2 P. M., as per adjournment, with all members present.

An appeal from a decision of a local arbitration board in Elizabeth, N. J., on a dispute between the Elizabeth Journal and Elizabeth Typographical Union was taken up on appeal.

William F. Estep appeared before the board arguing the contention for Elizabeth Union.

Augustus S. Crane appeared before the board representing the Elizabeth Journal. The union being the mover in the case, Mr. Estep presented the case for that organization, after which Mr. Crane made an argument for the Elizabeth Journal. Rebuttal and sur-rebuttal arguments were heard, when some informal discussion took place, after which the board went into executive session.

At 5 P. M. the board adjourned to meet at 10 A. M., March 1, 1917.

MARCH 1, 1917.

The board met at 10 A. M., as per adjournment, with all members present, and resumed consideration of the Milwaukee appeal case.

After spending some time on the above case the board took up a dispute between the Evening Express Publishing Company, of Portland, Maine, and Portland Typographical Union No. 66.

At 12 o'clock, noon, the board adjourned to 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The board met at 2 P. M. with all members present, and resumed consideration of the Portland case, which was finally passed over, as was the Elizabeth case, to be taken up at a future time.

A contention existing in Boston was referred to Messrs. Kellogg and Scott.

The board then took up a scale contention between the Pueblo Star-Journal and Pueblo Typographical Union. This case had been before the board on previous occasions and the board at this time rendered the following decision:

In this case the publisher of the Star-Journal asked for a readjustment of the scale. The board having been unable to reach a decision upon the briefs and arguments submitted, action has been deferred from time to time in order to permit the parties to the controversy to present oral arguments. The publisher and the union have been unable to arrange for a time mutually convenient for the presentation of these oral arguments, and the board has been requested to dispose of the case upon the papers submitted.

The appeal is dismissed.

These sections govern the renewal of the Pueblo scale:

It is further agreed by and between the parties hereto, that either party hereto, desiring any changes in the provisions hereof, may open the same for revision by giving thirty (30) days' written notice prior to the expiration of this contract, which said notice shall clearly and fully specify the changes desired to be made by either party, and no notice shall be effective which does not so specify such matters, and no matter shall be considered by either party, except such notice be served within the time specified above, and contain the specific matter desired to be considered, except such matters as may mutually be agreed upon by the parties hereto, when such matters are opened up for discussion.

If no such notice be served upon either party by the other, then this contract is to remain in full force and effect from year to year.

The board therefore decides that the existing scale shall continue in effect until January 1, 1918.

The sections quoted above indicate the procedure which should be followed if the scale is to be amended at that time.

The board then took up a dispute between Indianapolis Typographical Union and the Indianapolis local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, on a reproduction case and rendered the following decision:

Referring to the contention regarding the reproduction of a photo-engraved plate of an advertisement of the Globe-Outlet Company, the case is dismissed without prejudice to either side.

Photo-engraved plates of local advertisements originally set in type, shall be reproduced within the time limit required by the local contract. Photo-engraved plates or cuts used in advertisements, in whole or in part, made from drawings or lettered designs, not originally set in type, are to be classed as plate matter. The reproduction of such lettered designs may be submitted to local arbitration.

The board then took up a dispute that had been before it for some time from Newark, N. J. This case also was passed over to a future meeting.

At 4:30 P. M. the board adjourned to 10 A. M., March 2, 1917.

MARCH 2, 1917.

The board met at 10 A. M., as per adjournment, all members being present.

The board then gave some consideration to a controversy brought before it from Portland, Maine, and President Scott and Chairman Kellogg were authorized to issue a joint letter in an effort to secure an adjustment of this matter.

Some time was given to a discussion of a controversy between Chairman Kellogg, of the publishers' committee, and President Scott, of the International Typographical Union, on a condition that had come up in Fort Smith, Ark., since the last meeting of the board.

At 12, noon, the board adjourned.

April Meeting.

The International Board of Arbitration met in the office of the Boston Globe, World building, New York city, April 24, 1917, at 10 A. M.

There were present representing the American Newspaper Publishers' Association H. N. Kellogg, Indianapolis, Ind.; W. S. Jones, Minneapolis, Minn., and C. H. Rembold, Cincinnati, Ohio.

There were present representing the International Typographical Union President Scott and Vice-President Smith.

After further consideration of the controversy over the pay of an apprentice employed in the office of the Portland (Maine) Evening Express in 1916, the board reached the following decision:

NEW YORK, April 24, 1917.

Portland Typographical Union No. 66 vs. W. H. Dow, business manager the Evening Express, Portland, Maine.

In the case of the claim by apprentice Hamilton for twelve dollars ($12) per week from January 1, 1916, the board decides that he is entitled to the sum mentioned from March 1, 1916, to December 31, 1916, inclusive, less what he received as wages during the period. Respectfully submitted,

H. N. KELLOGG,
W. S. JONES,
C. H. REMBOLD,
MARSDEN G. SCOTT,
J. W. HAYS,
CHARLES N. SMITH.

The appeals from the award of the local board of arbitration in the Newark, N. J., newspaper scale was given further consideration. The board being unable to reach a decision, Chairman Kellogg and President Scott were authorized to proceed under the provisions of the last sentence of section 10 of the International agreement, provided further efforts to adjust the controversy were unsuccessful.

The following communications were taken up for consideration:

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., March 30, 1917.

Hopewell H. Rogers, President American Newspaper Publishers' Association, care Chicago Daily News, Chicago, Ill.:

DEAR MR. ROGERS—Since the beginning of the European war more than 500 members of our subordinate unions in Canada have enlisted for the overseas service. Many members of the International Typographical Union responded to President Wilson's call when the state military organizations were sent to guard the border in Texas last year.

At our annual convention held in Baltimore last August the delegates adopted a rule to protect the situations of these members as follows:

"Section 127. In cases where members * * * enlist for active service in time of war, or members of the national guard who may be ordered to war, their situations may be filled by the foreman. Provided, that upon again reporting for duty the situations formerly held by these members shall be restored to them."

While the rules of the union are definitely recognized in many of our contracts with employers, the fact that this rule was adopted subsequent to the meetings at which the new International arbitration agreement for 1917-1922 was completed has created a feeling of uncertainty and anxiety in the minds of many of the officers and members of our subordinate unions.

I therefore suggest that the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the International Typographical Union can be of material assistance to our government at this time if the executive officers of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association will recommend that your members accept this rule while the necessity for it exists.

I am in receipt of a number of letters on this subject from members of our local unions, and it will be a pleasure to be able to assure them that the executive officers of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association will accept the suggestion which we have presented.

With best wishes, I am Yours sincerely,
MARSDEN G. SCOTT.

NEW YORK, March 31, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, 635 Newton Claypool Building, Indianapolis, Ind.:

MY DEAR MR. SCOTT—I have your letter of March 30 in reference to the rule adopted at the last annual convention of the International Typographical Union, held in Baltimore in August, and I shall immediately take this question up with the directors of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the special standing committee, and hope to give you a more definite reply in the very near future. Yours very truly,
H. L. ROGERS,
President American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., April 3, 1917.

H. N. Kellogg, Chairman Special Standing Committee, American Newspaper Publishers' Association, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. KELLOGG—I am enclosing herewith copy of a letter sent to President Rogers, of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

Supplementing the statement as to the number of members of the International Typographical Union now in active service in Europe, this union has paid mortuary benefits in twenty-four cases where members have been reported as killed in action or as missing and unaccounted for and officially recorded as dead.

In view of the critical situation which confronts the United States government in its international relations, the representatives of this International Union on the International Board of Arbitration offer the following resolution and move its adoption by the International board:

"Whereas, It is the sense of the members of the International Board of Arbitration that the parties to the arbitration agreement between the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the International Typographical Union should cooperate in every emergency which confronts the United States government in its international relations; and,

"Whereas, Sections 9 and 14 of the arbitration agreement between the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the International Typographical Union provide that the laws of the International Typographical Union enacted subsequent to the execution of contracts entered into under the International agreement shall not become operative unless accepted by both parties to such contracts; and,

"Whereas, The Baltimore convention of the International Union adopted a rule intended to protect the situations of members who enlist in the government service in time of war, as follows:

" 'In cases where members are admitted as residents of the Union Printers Home, or who enlist for active service in the regular army or navy in time of war, or members of the national guard who may be ordered to war, their situations may be filled by the foreman: Provided, That upon again reporting for duty the situations formerly held by these members shall be restored to them.'

"Resolved, That the above rule is hereby accepted by the International Board of Arbitration as a proper provision to be incorporated in all contracts hereafter entered into between members of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and subordinate organizations of the International Typographical Union under the arbitration agreements of 1912-1917 and 1917-1922; and,

"Resolved, That the International Board of Arbitration hereby recommends the acceptance of this rule by all parties to existing contracts entered into by employers and unions under the 1912-1917 agreements."

The representatives of the International Typographical Union request that a mail vote of the members of the International Board be taken on the adoption of the resolutions above submitted.

The votes of the undersigned are hereby recorded as in favor of the adoption of these resolutions.

Sincerely yours,
MARSDEN G. SCOTT,
WALTER W. BARRETT,
JOHN W. HAYS,
Representing I. T. U. Executive Council.
By M. G. SCOTT, President.

The action of the board was as follows:

First. That the International Board of Arbitration hereby accepts the following as a proper provision to be included in local contracts entered into under the International Arbitration Agreement on and after May 1, 1917:

"Section —. In cases where members of the International Typographical Union enlist for active service in time of war, or members of the national guard who may be ordered to war, their situations may be filled by the foreman. Provided, That upon reporting for duty the situations formerly held by these members shall be restored to them."

Second. The International Board, in accepting the above section, includes under its provisions apprentices who are registered as such at the time of their enlistment or enrollment.

Third. The International Board recommends that publishers and local unions parties to existing contracts entered into under the International Agreement shall amend such contracts to include the section quoted.

Fourth. The International Board specifically directs attention to the fact that the board has no authority to declare that this provision shall be included in any local contract signed prior to May 1, 1917, unless included therein or attached thereto by and with the signed acceptance of both parties to such local contract.

Fifth. It is agreed and understood that if during the absence of an employe there has been a reduction in the force which includes the situation held by such employe, the union can not require the employer to restore a situation which does not exist.

Sixth. The International Board authorizes and instructs Chairman Kellogg and President Scott to prepare a statement to publishers and to subordinate unions covering in further detail the understanding of the board on this subject.

At 12 o'clock noon the board adjourned.

J. W. HAYS, Secretary.

Recommendations Made by President Scott and Chairman Kellogg.

Complying with the instructions of the International Board of Arbitration, the undersigned recommend that the following memorandum be attached to all contracts between employers and typographical unions made prior to May 1, 1917, and be included in contracts entered into subsequent to that date:

It is agreed between the employer (or employers) and the union, parties to this contract, that the situations of employes who enlist or are enrolled for service in time of war may be filled during their absence by the foreman of the department in which they are employed. Provided, That upon reporting for duty the situations formerly held by these employes shall be restored to them.

This provision shall not be construed as requiring the employer to restore a situation which may have been abolished through a reduction in the force, as provided in section 121 of the general laws of the International Typographical Union for 1916, the understanding being that employes covered by this provision shall suffer no loss of priority rights or standing during their absence.

If in restoring apprentices to their situations the total number employed shall exceed the number allowed by the local contract, the parties to this agreement will exert every reasonable effort to make provision for any apprentices who may be displaced.

The above provisions are not intended to require a foreman to fill the situation of an employe who is absent for the reason above given or to compel the re-employment of an employe who because of any physical disability may be unable to perform the duties required in the situation formerly held by him.

We earnestly recommend the acceptance of the above as complying with the spirit of the action taken by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the International Board of Arbitration.

Very respectfully,
MARSDEN G. SCOTT,
President International Typographical Union.
HENRY N. KELLOGG,
Chairman Special Standing Committee,
American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

IN CONCLUSION.

This is the third report of the executive council since it has been increased from three to five members. This report contains but a few of the more important matters with which the council has dealt. A number of other things that have occupied considerable time of the council will be discussed at the convention. The reports of the various officers of the organization show what the general work has been, how it has been carried on and the results.

The executive council desires to express its appreciation for the help received from the membership in its efforts to conduct the affairs of the International Union in a conservative manner, and at the same time protect the interests of all concerned. Respectfully submitted,

MARSDEN G. SCOTT,
WALTER W. BARRETT,
HUGO MILLER,
CHARLES N. SMITH,
J. W. HAYS,
Executive Council.

INTERNATIONAL ALLIED PRINTING TRADES ASSOCIATION

The Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association held three regular meetings during the year. The sessions were held in four different cities, namely, Portland, Me.; Baltimore, Md.; New York city and Cleveland, Ohio. The proceedings of all the meetings of the board for the year are set forth in full in the following pages:

Proceedings of the Meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association, Held at the Hotel Falmouth, Portland, Me., July 10, 11 and 12, 1916.

The Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association met in regular session in the State of Maine room at the Hotel Falmouth, Portland, Me., on Monday, July 10, 1916.

There were present representing the International Typographical Union, President Marsden G. Scott, Vice-President Hugo Miller, Vice-President Charles N. Smith, and Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays.

There was present representing the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, President George L. Berry.

There was present representing the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union, President James J. Freel.

There was present representing the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, President A. P. Sovey.

There was present representing the International Photo-Engravers' Union, President Matthew Woll.

President Woll called the meeting to order promptly at 10 o'clock, and the following in addition to the members of the Board of Governors were reported as being present:

A. P. Williams, a representative of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders.

William L. Reardon, president of the Portland Allied Printing Trades Council and a member of the stereotypers' union.

The secretary read the following communication:

CHICAGO, July 7, 1916.

J. W. Hays:

MY DEAR HAYS—This will introduce our E. F. Kloter, who is representing our brotherhood in an effort to bring about a closer co-operation between the printing trade and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Any assistance you can render him will be greatly appreciated by

Yours sincerely,
F. J. MCNULTY.

It was moved and seconded that Mr. Kloter be invited to address the board on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

William L. Reardon, president of the Portland Allied Printing Trades Council, addressed the board as follows:

A banquet will be tendered this evening by the typographical union. There will also be a sail in the harbor tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock. There will be an open meeting on Wednesday evening next, at which we expect the following speakers: President Marsden G. Scott, of the International Typographical Union; President George L. Berry, of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union; President A. P. Sovey, of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders; President Matthew Woll, of the International Photo-Engravers' Union; President James J. Freel, of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union.

It is the intention of the local allied printing trades council to have this open meeting for the benefit of the non-union people in the trade, and we sincerely hope that you gentlemen will attend that meeting, because it will be of great value to the people interested, I am sure. That is the program, so far as I know.

It has been intimated and conveyed to me from various sources that this session would be a four-day session. Believing that to be true we arranged for the Wednesday evening meeting. I was surprised when President Freel told me that such was not the case. We went ahead and it is impossible now I believe to make the meeting for Tuesday evening, because our circulars have been distributed and it is a question whether we could reach some people or whether we could hold the meeting or not should we change the date.

I would like to make a statement before the board as to the condition of affairs in this city when you wish it.

The board decided to hear Mr. Reardon at once.

Mr. Reardon said:

I want it understood that what I have to say is not said to depreciate the efforts made by local men in the past in regard to the allied printing trades council in this city, but there is an unfortunate state of affairs here. The twenty-fifth of last May I was elected president of the council. The previous meeting to that was held in June, 1914. They had no money and no stationery of any kind. Their organization was merely a nominal one, and practically cut no figure in labor matters in this city. For that reason I say I do not want to discount the efforts of those who tried to keep the thing together.

We have absolutely no money. It was necessary after the meeting of May 25 to reorganize and get funds in order that we could make some show of activity. I saw the president of the local typographical union, and he assured me of the hearty support and co-operation of the local typographical union. He backed it up with a contribution from the union of twenty dollars. We received a donation of ten dollars each from the stereotypers' and pressmen's unions. There is no question in my mind now but what we are going to go ahead and do business, and are going to have some finances to do business with.

I want to speak in regard to the conditions in the city. I came here about three years ago to organize the stereotypers. As a result we got every stereotyper practically in the state of Maine into one union. I do not think there is any exception in that particular. A year ago last June or two years ago last June I was successful in negotiating an agreement with the publishers in this city, getting a closed shop. They wanted to give the wages, wanted to give the hours, but they did not want to close the shops. They cited the local typographical union. The management showed me a piece of paper with two or three paragraphs where the local typographical union received the scale of prices, the hours were satisfactory, but they would not close up the shop. After some considerable negotiations we got the scale signed and closed up the shops.

I was elected in May; we have been holding meetings weekly and we hope to make some progress. We are just beginning to gather the ends of the threads and weave them into some kind of a fabric. Anything the members of this board can do at the meeting to cement the work and interest those in the audience to co-operate is going to redound to the benefit of the men we want to reach, and it will also add to the credit we deserve as union men and men interested in the labor movement in this city.

In regard to the political situation, we have now in the hands of the printer a circular that we intend to send to different nominees. I had expected to have this today but the printer promised me that I could have a copy for tomorrow morning. I was fortunate in reaching two nominees; one pledged me his word that he would not only have the label, but that he was in hearty sympathy with the labor movement in this city. That is the nominee for district attorney.

I have come to this conclusion—the people would be better off if they knew better; they are not bad fellows. They do not seem to have any idea of the fitness of things; in one office alone I know that they refused to buy tickets for the banquet. They have an idea that it should be given to them. They won't spend a few cents to support the movement. Spend money—they don't believe in that. The local typographical union is going to predominate so far as numbers are concerned tonight.

A man says, "What is the use of the organization? He can't do any better than he is doing." He doesn't stop to think that he may work somewhere else some day; he doesn't see that.

A. F. Williams, a representative of the Brotherhood of Bookbinders, addressed the board as follows:

It is little that I can say in regard to the local conditions further than Brother Reardon has told you. I attended the meeting of the allied printing trades council last Thursday evening and was quite surprised at the methods which they had been using in conducting their affairs in the past.

Two years ago I visited this town and got in touch with the secretary of the allied printing trades council. I found they had not held a meeting of the council for two years. Previous to that the meetings, when held, were held in the homes of some of the members, and the only way to have a meeting was to have a little liquid refreshment sent from Boston.

A great many of those employed in the different shops are men who have worked in the one shop nearly all their lives. In the bookbinding industry we have men who have worked in only one shop; their employers give them two weeks' vacation with pay; if a man is sick his pay is granted to him, and it is very hard to do any organization work under the present conditions.

We feel that if we could get the men employed in the printing houses present on Wednesday evening, that you gentlemen could probably show them why they should be members of the organization, but I think there should be more life injected into the allied printing trades council in this town.

John F. Maguire, representing the Boston Photo-Engravers' Union, then addressed the board, as follows:

I would like the attention of the board brought to the unorganized condition in this territory and the result it has on the big cities. When they have any labor difficulties in Boston this is the city they send work to. There was a strike five years ago and they sent a pile of work up here. There are not many men, that is true, but there are something like five two-men shops here; this is detrimental.

In New Hampshire the typographical union is having a showout with the Rumford Press; they say the press is going to buck the union; they are competing with other cities and employers are kicking about unfair competition.

I think an effort should be made to clean up these unorganized territories and eliminate this unfair competition and the conditions we are forced to meet when we have any trouble in large cities.

It was agreed by the board that consideration be given to the reports later during the session of the board.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays read a communication from Secretary Brady, of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Greater New York, regarding a bill that had been presented to that council for attorney's fees by Myles Walsh.

It was moved and seconded that the secretary be instructed to notify Mr. Brady that the board reaffirms its previous decision in the matter, namely that the board has nothing to do with this case.

A communication referring to non-union printing of law briefs in New York, with a list of the customers for this class of work, received from the New York Allied Printing Trades Council, was brought to the attention of the board.

It was the decision of the board that this is a matter that properly comes under the work of the New York Allied Printing Trades Council.

A communication from Tacoma regarding the right of an office using the allied trades label to place the same on a rubber stamp was read.

On motion, the board decided that the allied printing trades council label could not be reproduced on rubber stamps.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays read the following communication:

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 1, 1916.

F. Donahoe, Secretary A. P. T. C., 298 Wellington street, N., Hamilton, Ont.:

DEAR MR. DONAHOE—I have your letter of June 29, reading as follows:

"Kindly let me know by return mail if the allied council of Hamilton has the ruling as to the termination of agreements; the reason I am asking for such information is that stereotypers, electrotypers and web pressmen expires September 1, 1916; news, ad and machine operators, May 1, 1917; job and job pressmen, December 31, 1917. Let me know your opinion if it would be advisable to hold them all over as to such time so as to have them all terminate at the same time.

"Trusting to hear from you immediately, as two unions meet Monday, July 3, and thanking you in advance for your valuable information, I am."

An allied printing trades council has nothing whatever to do with the wage contracts of the unions represented in the council. Each local union represented in the Hamilton council must make its own wage agreements and in accordance with the provisions of the laws of its respective international union. In some cities the various unions comprising the allied printing trades council, by mutual agreement, arrange their scales to expire on the same date. In most places, however, the scales of the unions represented expire at different times. Any union represented in the council desiring instructions regarding the renewal of its scale should consult the president of the international union by which it is chartered.

Enclosed is a copy of the International Allied Printing Trades Association agreement. If you can use a number of these booklets, advise me and they will be supplied without charge.

Fraternally yours,
(Signed) J. W. HAYS.

On motion, President Marsden G. Scott, of the International Typographical Union, and President George L. Berry, of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, were appointed a committee to draft a declaration on the point brought out in the above letter.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays read the following communication:

ST. PAUL, MINN., June 28, 1916.

J. W. Hays, Secretary International Allied Printing Trades Association, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR SIR—Under date of March 27, you informed me as follows:

"No local union can be represented in more than one allied council."

This information was asked for the benefit of the printing pressmen's union. I gave them the information contained in the letter. They now wish to find out, if possible, the reason of the council making such ruling.

Thanking you in advance for any information regarding this matter, I remain,

Yours fraternally,
J. E. CORCORAN.

The board said the reason for the action of the board in deciding that no local council could be represented in more than one allied printing trades council is contained in the last sentence of section 2, article iv, of the allied trades agreement, which reads as follows:

No one shall be at the same time a member of more than one local allied printing trades council.

A communication from the secretary of the Montreal Allied Printing Trades Council regarding the registration of the label in Canada was read by Secretary-Treasurer Hays.

On motion of Mr. Berry, the president and secretary were instructed to take this matter up with an attorney of the board to prepare some measure in harmony with the requirements to be introduced that would give us the desired opportunity of registration, the same to be submitted to respective organizations and councils in Canada for their joint action in passing this law before the House of Commons.

An appeal of the Pittsburgh Pressmen's Union No. 64 against an action of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Pittsburgh was read.

On motion of Mr. Freel, the president of the association was authorized to visit Pittsburgh and endeavor to adjust the situation.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays read a communication from Denver regarding allowing an office to have a separate number to be used with labels placed on jobs which it "farmed out" to other offices.

The following motion of Mr. Berry was adopted:

That the previous decision of the board upon this subject be reaffirmed, and that the action of the Denver Allied Printing Trades Council be also affirmed; if, however, the local council desires to change its ruling, then the Board of Governors should be shown in what manner the request can be granted, and at the same time the use of the privilege be protected from abuse.

On motion of Mr. Freel, the board adjourned to meet again at 2:30 P. M.

MONDAY AFTERNOON.

The board met at 2:30 P. M. as per adjournment, with all members present.

A letter from the president of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Tallahassee, Fla., together with a reply thereto from Secretary-Treasurer Hays, was read to the board.

On motion, the reply of Mr. Hays to the president of the Tallahassee Allied Printing Trades Council was endorsed by the board.

The controversy coming from Denison, Texas, was laid over for consideration at a later meeting.

A communication from Kenosha, Wis., regarding the use of the allied printing trades label was read.

On motion, this was referred to the secretary.

A communication from Waterloo, Iowa, regarding the uniform label agreement was read.

On motion of Mr. Freel, the secretary was directed to repeat to the people in question the advice given in the first instance.

A communication from Duluth, Minn., was read, and on motion of Mr. Freel, the position taken by the secretary-treasurer was endorsed.

A communication from the secretary of the Minneapolis Allied Printing Trades Council regarding the indebtedness of the allied trades council in that city for labels was read.

It was moved and seconded that this matter be left in the hands of Secretary-Treasurer Hays for adjustment.

Charles A. Sumner, secretary-treasurer of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union, who had been authorized to continue negotiations looking to the unionizing of the Methodist Book Concern, made a report showing that the work had progressed to a considerable extent, and that the prospects were good for a favorable result.

At this time the board took a recess of fifteen minutes and reconvened with all members present.

The following motion of Mr. Berry was adopted:

In accordance with the request at the San Francisco convention of the American Federation of Labor a special committee upon the offset press matter, which we all recognize as important, was appointed and they have had hearings, as most of the board know. They have completed the hearings and completed the report. The report is in the hands of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor.

Upon the action of the San Francisco convention the executive council was required to render a decision upon this subject, and the decision is to be founded upon the committee's report. The matter is in the hands of the council. Council convened about the 26th, and I got in touch with Mr. Gompers, asking that the decision be made known as soon as possible, because this thing was getting more serious each day. He advised me that council had not yet reached the committee report; that it had been so busy with other matters that it was not able to get to our proposition.

I think it would be a big mistake for the council to delay this matter any longer. I move that the president and secretary of this board, acting in behalf of the five international unions, wire Mr.

Digitized by Google

Gompers and insist that decision be rendered in this matter by the council immediately.

In conformity with the above action President Woll and Secretary-Treasurer Hays sent the following telegram to President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor:

July 10, 1916.

Samuel Gompers, President American Federation of Labor, Ouray building, Ninth and G streets, N. W., Washington, D. C.:

A meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association held in Portland today took up question of report of special committee on offset presses and amalgamation of lithographers with pressmen and photo-engravers to federation executive council. The board believes that any delay in reaching a decision upon this subject may tend to further complicate matters and urges that the executive council render a decision thereon at earliest possible moment.

MATTHEW WOLL, President.
J. W. HAYS, Secretary.

A communication was read from Winnipeg. It was moved and seconded that the matter of the Winnipeg constitution be referred to the president and secretary.

A communication from the superintendent of the Fostoria Daily Times regarding the use of the allied union label on work that is sublet to another shop was read.

It was moved and seconded that the request be denied and the secretary-treasurer give the reasons why it is denied.

The special committee appointed to draw up the position of the board on the right of local unions to make wage scale agreements reported as follows:

Neither the Board of Governors nor any local allied printing trades council has any jurisdiction or supervision over scale contracts made by subordinate unions. Wage scale contracts and agreements are governed by the laws and regulations of local and international unions having jurisdiction over the department or departments covered by such contracts.

Agreements which include the use of the label of any subordinate union are subject to the laws and decisions of the International Allied Printing Trades Association.

In determining the periods to be covered by wage scales and contracts it is advisable that there should be co-operation between subordinate unions represented in allied printing trades councils to the end that the full benefits of joint action may be obtained where local conditions may make such action desirable.

A communication from El Paso was read.

It was moved and seconded that the subject-matter of the communication be referred to the officers of the International Typographical Union with the request that they try to reconcile their members to the council and advise them if they have any complaint against the local allied council to make an appeal to the Board of Governors, and in the meantime reassociate themselves with the council.

A communication was read from La Crosse, Wis., and on motion the secretary was instructed to notify the organization in La Crosse to proceed in the formation of an allied council as required under the agreement.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays stated that a communication from Montreal had been referred to Representative Berry at Detroit. He made a report which was taken up at the March meeting, and said he expected to hear his plan had been accepted. Mr. Hays stated that he had no information as to whether the plan had been accepted or not, but read a communication from the French union of Montreal.

Mr. Freel moved that in answer to the typographical union in Montreal their attention be called to the fact that Mr. Berry, representing the International Allied Printing Trades Association, appeared before the council of that city and made a proposition that the board understands has been accepted by all the printing trades unions with the exception of No. 145, and the Board of Governors recommend that this proposition of President Berry, representing the International Allied Printing Trades Association, be considered, and the board recommends that the French union go along on that proposition. This motion was adopted.

A communication was read from the secretary of the Allied Printing Trades Council of South Bend, Ind., regarding the use of the new label license on the expiration of existing contracts.

On motion of Mr. Freel, Secretary-Treasurer Hays was directed to notify the South Bend Allied Printing Trades Council that this association has made a new agreement that they expect all the councils to put into effect, and that they be directed as early as possible to have the new agreement signed with the users of the label in that city.

A communication was read from Fresno, Cal., and it was moved and carried that the attitude expressed by Mr. Hays in his letter acknowledging receipt of the communication be endorsed.

On motion of Mr. Miller the board adjourned to meet at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

TUESDAY, JULY 11, 1916.

The board met at 10 A. M., as per adjournment, with all members present and President Woll in the chair.

The first order of business was the special order set for 10 A. M., the hearing of the statement of Mr. Kloter, of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Mr. Kloter appeared and presented the following as his authorization for representing the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers:

NEW YORK, July 8, 1916.

To the Board of Governors, International Allied Printing Trades Association, Portland, Me.:

GREETING—This is to certify that Edward F. Kloter, of the above-named organization, has been duly appointed as a representative of this organization to appear before your honorable body, to lay before you for consideration a matter of importance relative to our trade. We would therefore respectfully request that he be given an audience.

Trusting that the above request for an audience will be granted, and thanking you in advance for any courtesy shown our representative, I am, with best wishes, Fraternally yours,

G. W. WHITFORD, Secretary.

Mr. Kloter said:

Mr. Chairman and Brothers—I call you that by virtue of our union card. It has been the policy of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor in all its departments. It has also been the policy of the International Brotherhood to have its local bodies affiliate with local central bodies. The local which I have the honor to represent, No. 534, of New York, at the present time is connected with the Central Federated Union, Bronx Labor Council, the Brooklyn Central Labor Union and the trades union labor council in the city, so that we practically are affiliated with every central organization that there is in New York with the exception of one.

We have quite a number of our members who are working in printing houses throughout our jurisdiction, and we know from past experience that there are a number of these houses that employ our men, which, while fair for the various branches of the printing trades, are unfair to our organization.

The purpose of my organization sending me here was this: Of course, we do not know the way your board is governed, whether you have full power to act on all matters. If you have, our organization requests this body to see that we are seated in the allied printing trades council in New York. If you have not that power our organization requests that you send out a referendum vote, and that you as the Board of Governors recommend it to your local unions, that we be seated on that board.

I can safely say this—it is not our purpose nor intention if we are seated on that board to cause any trouble or dissension whatever. We simply would be seated there as a matter of reference and as a matter of protection to our own industry. I can assure you that there is no representative of our organization that we would send to your allied printing trades council in New York, who, if we found butting in in any way, shape or form into the affairs of the printing industry, but what we would have him immediately recalled.

If it is within the power of this board to grant that, the organization requests it, because day by day the electrical worker is coming in closer contact electrically with the printing industry, and not particularly with one part of the printing industry, but with all parts of the printing industry. Nearly every shop in New York and vicinity has changed over from the old method to the new. You don't see any belt-driven machinery; almost everything is direct connected.. We feel that we are a factor that is closely allied with the printing industry. That is about all that is to be said on the subject as far as I know.

President Woll made a statement setting forth clearly the objects of the International Allied Printing Trades Association in order that the electrical workers might understand that the only function of the association was the handling and use of the international allied printing trades union label.

On motion of Representative Freel, the president and secretary were directed by the association to communicate with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and explain the character of this organization in connection with the appearance of Mr. Kloter before the Board of Governors.

A communication was read from the president of the Pittsburgh Printing Pressmen's Union in regard to some exhibits, which comprise a part of the records of the International Allied Printing Trades Association.

On motion of Representative Freel the secretary was directed to send Mr. Mielke, the president of the Pittsburgh Printing Pressmen's Union, copies of these exhibits, if he desired them, but to inform him that the originals, being a part of the records of the Board of Governors, must remain in the files of the secretary-treasurer.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays read an appeal from the Philadelphia Pressmen's Union and the Philadelphia Union of Bookbinders from an action of the Philadelphia Allied Printing Trades Council in declining to accept jurisdiction and to take action placing the J. B. Lippincott & Sons Company in "Class B" on the list of textbook publishers.

It was moved and seconded that the appeal be dismissed for the reason that the allied printing trades council has no jurisdiction over the matters in question.

A general discussion lasting some time took place regarding the publication of union and non-union lists by the International Typographical Union, as well as the A B C list on textbooks, after which the following motion was offered by Representative Berry:

That in the consideration as to the joint action in the matter of disseminating information as to fair and unfair publishing houses, it was agreed that the international unions, through their presidents, should prepare their position on the subject and recommendations as to their ideas of joint action and submit them to the president of the International Typographical Union for consideration and discussion upon the matter at some early date.

This motion was adopted.

On motion of Representative Freel the board then adjourned to meet Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, 1916.

The board met at 9 A. M., as per adjournment, with all members present and President Woll in the chair.

The secretary-treasurer read a communication from the McMath Printing Company, of El Paso, Texas, regarding the use of the union label on bank checks.

On motion the matter was referred to the officers of the International Typographical Union with the request that they take it up with the El Paso Union.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays notified the board that he had a copy of an appeal from the officers of the Dayton Allied Printing Trades Council requesting that the Dayton Typographical Union be instructed to reaffiliate with that council. The appeal reached the hands of the secretary-treasurer after his arrival in the city where the board is holding its meeting, and a letter from the officers of the Dayton Typographical Union informs the board that they have not had opportunity to make suitable reply.

The following motion was adopted:

That the secretary be instructed to call the attention of the International Typographical Union to the resolutions that were adopted by the Allied Printing Trades Council of Dayton, Ohio, regarding the withdrawal of Dayton Typographical Union from that council and asking the officers of the International Typographical Union to instruct the Dayton Typographical Union to again affiliate with the Dayton Allied Printing Trades Council in accordance with the terms of the agreement between the five international unions, and also to take steps to vitiate any label contracts signed between Dayton Typographical Union and the employing printers of Dayton since the organization of the allied printing trades council in that city or since its withdrawal from the said council; the secretary of the Board of Governors to at the same time call the attention of the Dayton Allied Printing Trades Council and the Dayton Typographical Union to the action of the board in this case.

Representative Berry moved as follows:

That the secretary be instructed to direct the attention of the officers of the International Typographical Union to the Wichita matter, and they in turn be requested to direct the typographical union of Wichita to proceed in the formation of an allied printing trades council with the other organizations in that city immediately, as is required under the agreement.

This motion was adopted.

Representative Berry also moved that the same action be taken in the Augusta (Ga.) situation, and in the Wilkes-Barre (Pa.) situation, as was provided for in the Wichita matter. This motion was adopted.

The following statement was made by Representative Berry:

I want to read into the records here for the consideration of the board, to be discussed at the next meeting of the board, the question of the use of the allied label generally instead of specifically. This will be an amendment to the present agreement; I do not desire to bring the matter up for discussion now, but want it as a matter of record with the hope of discussing it at the next meeting of the board. This is the action of our convention (reading): "In the matter of the use of individual labels, your committee reaffirms the action of our last convention and directs the president to continue his efforts in the elimination of all individual labels and the insertion of the allied label in their places with a condition prevailing that shall be union in every department for the five international printing trades' unions. The plan for the establishment of councils in cities where there is but one charter of any of the five international unions is entirely practicable if the arrangement as proposed by our last convention is carried out, to wit: The giving of the various trades which have members working in such cities one voice and vote in the affairs of the council, it being understood, of course, that the unanimous consent idea shall prevail in the determination of all issues of said council, except by the provisions to the contrary now found in our International agreement."

President Sovey, of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, brought to the attention of the Board of Governors an action of the convention of the bookbinders referring to the union conditions existing in the office of the Kable Brothers at Mount Morris, Ill. The purport of the action of the bookbinders' convention was that efforts be made to induce the Kable Brothers to permit the organizing of the bookbinders, bindery women and any other non-union labor that may be employed in that institution if they desired to continue the use of the allied printing trades council label.

Representative Berry made the following motion:

That inasmuch as the matter of the use of the allied printing trades council label in Mount Morris has been brought to the attention of the board by Presidents Sovey and Freel and Vice-President Smith, claiming that the firm using the label had denied the organizations represented by the complainants the right of organization, that this board instruct the secretary of the Board of Governors to communicate with the allied printing trades council in Mount Morris, requesting them to make an investigation as to the fact and to report upon the subject-matter prior to their next meeting in November.

This motion was adopted.

President Sovey, of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, reported an interview with A. Victor Barnes, of the American Book Company, in company with Representative Metzger, of the Bookbinders' Brotherhood, at which conference Mr. Barnes stated that the American Book Company was not opposed to the organization of its employes, and that the allied printing trades unions were free to organize all of the printing trades departments of the American Book Company.

The board after carefully considering the report of Representative Sovey instructed the president and secretary of the board to communicate with Mr. Barnes with reference to the attitude of the American Book Company as reported, and also instructed President Sovey to continue the work he has undertaken in this matter.

The attention of the board was directed to a bill introduced by Congressman Dillon, the purport of which is to place an embargo on all shipments of print, book, bond and linen paper pulp and pulp products to any foreign country until the price of the pulp products to the consumer in the United States is fair, reasonable and just.

The board, after carefully considering this matter, instructed the president and secretary to make an investigation of this paper situation and communicate with the employers' organizations and all others directly interested, and if in the judgment of the president and secretary of the board it is deemed advisable to support legislation of this kind, that they be instructed to so report to the five international printing trades unions and urge their co-operation.

The board decided that as there was to be a mass meeting at which the members of the board would appear to take up the printing trades' situation in Portland it would be unnecessary to take any action thereon at present.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that the secretary-treasurer be authorized to levy an assessment on the international unions if it becomes necessary between this time and the next meeting of the board. This motion was adopted.

It was moved and seconded that the secretary-treasurer be authorized to print the usual number of proceedings for distribution in the usual way.

Representative Freel moved that the next meeting of the board be held in the city of Baltimore, the first Monday in November. This motion was adopted.

On motion the meeting adjourned.

J. W. Hays, Secretary-Treasurer.

Proceedings of the Meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association, Held at the Headquarters of the International Typographical Union, in the Hotel Rennert, Baltimore, Md., November 8 and 16, 1916.

The Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association met at International Typographical Union headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind., at 10 A. M., Monday, November 6, 1916.

Some of the members of the board being unable to be present, the meeting was adjourned to Baltimore, to meet at 10 A. M., Wednesday, November 8.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1916.

The Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association met at 2 P. M. on November 8, 1916, as per adjournment, President Woll in the chair.

There was present representing the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union President James J. Freel.

There was present representing the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union President George L. Berry.

There was present representing the International Photo-Engravers' Union President Matthew Woll.

There was present representing the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders President A. P. Sovey.

There were present representing the International Typographical Union President M. G. Scott, Vice-President C. N. Smith, H. W. Dennett and Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays.

For the reason that the correspondence in the possession of the secretary for the consideration of the board had not reached Baltimore at this time, the board adjourned to meet on Thursday, November 16, at 8 P. M.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1916.

The Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association met at the Rennert hotel on Thursday, November 16, at 8 P. M. All of the members of the board were present at the time, but a portion of them were compelled to attend committee meetings for the American Federation of Labor, and it was therefore found impossible to transact any of the business before the board.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays stated that this was the same condition that had existed at every November meeting of the board since it had been organized, and the same was true to some degree with the July meeting, these meetings coming in conflict, one with the November elections all over the country and the work of the Union Label Trades Department convention and the convention of the American Federation of Labor, and the other with the national holiday, July 4. He stated it as his opinion that it would be much better for the board to change the dates of its regular meetings so that they would not come in conflict with the election and the federation convention, and so that the July meetings would not be interfered with by the national holiday.

It was then moved that the board adjourn to meet in New York city on the second Monday in January, 1917, at a place to be selected by the secretary-treasurer, at which time the question of the change of the dates of holding the regular meetings of the board should be taken up. This motion was unanimously adopted and the board adjourned.

J. W. HAYS, Secretary-Treasurer.

Proceedings of the Meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association, Held at the Elks' Home, New York City, January 25 and 26, 1917.

The Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association met in adjourned session in the Elks Home, New York city, on Thursday, January 25, 1917.

There were present representing the International Typographical Union Vice-President W. W. Barrett, Vice-President Hugo Miller, Vice-President Charles N. Smith and Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays.

There was present representing the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union President George L. Berry.

There was present representing the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union President James J. Freel.

There was present representing the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders President A. P. Sovey.

There was present representing the International Photo-Engravers' Union President Matthew Woll.

President Woll called the meeting to order promptly at 10 o'clock, and adjournment was taken to 2 P. M.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The board met at 2 P. M. as per adjournment with all members present, President Woll in the chair.

Vice-President McHugh, of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, was present at the meeting, and the board extended an invitation to the balance of the executive board of the printing pressmen and assistants' union who were in the city to attend the meetings of the board.

The secretary-treasurer presented a communication from the secretary of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers requesting that their representative, Edward F. Kloter, be given an opportunity to appear before the board. The request was granted and Mr. Kloter addressed the board as follows:

I again take up for our organization the matter of affiliation with the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association.

After the explanation that was given to me by President Woll, as well as a number of the other gentlemen present at the Portland meeting of the board, before which I appeared, I saw the futility of our request, and was satisfied with their explanation that the electrical workers did have no part on the board, as the board only handles matters pertaining to the label. In my talk to the board at the Portland meeting I stated to the board that we had made a request of the Allied Printing Trades Council of New York for affiliation, and for some reason or other that privilege had been denied us. I talked about the matter pro and con at that meeting, and to the best of my knowledge there was absolutely no question against our joining; in fact it was stated during that session that if the Allied Printing Trades Council of New York saw fit to seat us that was up to them as a local organization to handle that matter. Our organization feels this way about it. If the organization was not a label trades organization, probably we would not feel that we were as justly entitled to a seat in the allied trades council as we are. The fact of the matter is this, that there is always electrical apparatus being placed in printing houses of various descriptions and some bears our label and some does not. We feel with closer affiliation between the allied printing trades and ourselves that there might be an opportunity to correct this. What I mean by correcting is not calling strikes, but the fact of being seated with the allied trades council would carry so much more weight with our proposition when this is brought to their attention.

As stated on my last visit, the organization is affiliated with every central body, every label trades body that there is in New York or in the vicinity of New York with the exception of the allied printing trades. I bring that to your attention for this reason. At the Portland meeting the proposition, as I understood it at that time, was left in the hands of the president and secretary. When I got back to New York I reported to my organization that I had not met with the success they felt I would meet with, but it was owing to the fact that the Board of Governors was a body that just handled label matters. I stated so far as the local situation is concerned, that is purely and simply up to this organization and the allied trades of New York; that if they saw fit to seat us I did not know that the Board of Governors would have any objection to that. Three or four days after coming back from the Portland meeting a communication was sent to our office. I will read that letter as a quotation in another letter going to Secretary Brady, of the Allied Printing Trades Council of New York.

"INTERNATIONAL ALLIED PRINTING TRADES ASSOCIATION.

"INDIANAPOLIS, IND., September 29, 1916.

"Peter J. Brady, Secretary Allied Printing Trades Council, 924 Pulitzer Building, New York City:

"DEAR MR. BRADY—In response to your letter of September 26, permit me to hand you herewith a copy of the proceedings of the meeting of the Board of Governors held in Portland, Me., in July of this year. On page 6 I have marked that portion of the minutes relating to Mr. Kloter who appeared before the board on behalf of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Acting upon the instructions of the board, I wrote the following letter:

"'PORTLAND, ME., July 12, 1916.

"'G. Whitford, Secretary International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, New York City, N. Y.:

"'DEAR MR. WHITFORD—Your communication introducing Representative Edward F. Kloter, of your organization, was delivered to me by Mr. Kloter during a meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association and appears as a part of those records. Mr. Kloter was given a hearing before the Board of Governors and explained the object of his visit to this city and appearance before the board. After the conclusion of Mr. Kloter's remarks the board in executive session gave considerable time to a discussion of the request made by Mr. Kloter, but it could find no way in which it could justify the council in complying with that request.

"'Mr. Kloter seems to be quite well versed on the laws of the International Allied Printing Trades Association and the joint agreement between the five international unions of the printing trades, and I presume that your knowledge is as extensive. However, for your information I desire to say that the International Allied Printing Trades Association was organized solely for the purpose of handling the union label by the association, that label being the property of the five international printing trades unions. It has no authority to take any action directing any of the subordinate unions connected with these five international unions in the making of their scale of wages, securing hours or improving conditions, all of these matters are relegated to the various international unions and must be acted upon by them when requested to do so by their subordinate unions.

"'The International Allied Printing Trades Association has no authority to order a strike in any office, and it can not even take up the question of a strike or calling off a strike, these matters being relegated to the different international unions so far as they refer to the various subordinate unions.

"'There can be no addition to the membership of the International Allied Printing Trades Association except by a referendum vote of all the international unions concerned therein, and then only providing it is some organization connected directly with the printing business.

"'I think you will see by this that the board found itself in a position where it was impossible that it could grant the request made by your organization through your representative, Mr. Kloter.

"'Assuring you that the members of the Board of Governors have nothing but the highest regard for yourself and your organization, I am,

"'Fraternally yours,'

"From the foregoing you will see that the Board of Governors declined to admit the electrical workers to membership in the International Allied Printing Trades Association because they are not directly connected with the printing business. It is not within the province of your council to permit a representative of the electrical workers to attend its meetings as a fraternal delegate, nor can the electrical workers be allowed to announce that they are members of the allied printing trades council in New York or any other place.

"Fraternally yours,

"(Signed) J. W. HAYS,

"Secretary."

It was a disappointment to the organization to receive that communication after I had made my report to them, because as you know the easiest way to glory is to perform something that your friends want. I explained the proposition to them, and in conjunction with this matter I appeared before the Allied Printing Trades Council of New York. I told of my visit to this organization, and requested that a time be appointed to meet a like committee of ours to take up the matter of affiliation. A few days after that I was in that vicinity on some business and stopped in to find out how things were going. I was somewhat surprised when the secretary or the acting secretary said that he did not think things were going very favorably. I said, "Why?" He said, "The committee that has been appointed has never gotten together." I said I was part of the committee for our organization and realized that. He says, "We received a communication from the Board of Governors." This was appended to the original letter that had been sent out by the secretary, and this had been sent on through to the Allied Trades Council of New York. That letter I have just read.

That was somewhat startling to the organization, inasmuch as we had practically been told that if we sought affiliation with the Allied Printing Trades Council of New York and they saw fit to seat our organization it was up to them. I have seen Mr. Brady, and my business brings me in connection with a number of men working with the printing trades and seated on the Allied Trades Council of New York. The organization couldn't understand a letter of this kind being sent with the proposition that had been advanced in Portland. I said to Mr. Edwards, who acted as secretary at that time, that we would hold the matter in abeyance until such time as I appeared before the Board of Governors, because I feel this way about it,—our organization wants a legitimate affiliation; we do not want to break into any place as burglars; we want to get in fairly, above board and on the level. There is too much promise and not enough tendency to give in the label movement of today, and I think if the representatives of the movement were more on the level with one another that the movement would take a higher place than it has up to date.

If there is any reason why our organization should not be seated on the Allied Trades Council of New York we should like to know it, inasmuch as we were told that if that organization saw fit to seat our representatives there that it was up to them to do it. We feel it is not taking or giving autonomy for an organization to tell us one thing at one time and tell somebody something else at another.

Our reason for wanting the affiliation with the allied trades council is as I mentioned. There are a number of printing houses in New York and vicinity that employ electricians. If it was brought to the attention of the employer that some of the men on the job are not union men we feel the matter would be corrected. We can go and ask for the courtesy of the floor of any central body or council in the city of New York and we are always received very courteously. After they are through patting us on the back then they get the harpoon ready in the other hand and after we get out they throw the harpoon.

We feel if we are seated on the allied trades council that by drawing to the attention of the allied printing trades council that in such and such a plant a non-union man is working and we intend to send one of our representatives to see the employer and try to straighten it out, the fact of being part of the allied trades council would materially assist us in straightening out that plant.

[Later in the session the following reply to the above statement was offered by Representative Freel and adopted. It is placed here so as to connect the two:]

In order to clear up any misunderstanding that may exist relative to the decision rendered by the Board of Governors in connection with the request for the affiliation to this association, made by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers at the Portland (Me.) meeting of this board, July 11, 1916, the Board of Governors desires to state:

"The terms of the agreement under which the International Allied Printing Trades Association was formed and is governed specifically limits the membership in, representation and affiliation to this association and in allied printing trades councils solely to members of the five international printing trade unions.

"The Board of Governors always has, and always will, at its meetings, be pleased to receive representatives of any international or local union affiliated to the American Federation of Labor, and will consider and act upon any proposition they may see fit to present for its consideration and action, and we respectfully urge our local allied councils to follow the same procedure."

Representative Freel moved that the Board of Governors meet with President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, at 10 o'clock Friday morning, at the Continental hotel, at a conference called by him for the purpose of considering the lithographers' matters in connection with the report of the special committee representing the printing trades organizations and the American Federation of Labor.

This motion was unanimously adopted.

President Woll presented the following telegram and his reply thereto:

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 25.

Matthew Woll, Continental Hotel:

Kindly advise if Board of Governors Allied Printing Trades will be in session next week. Would like to appear before board on matter of mutual interest. Answer.

WILLIAM H. JOHNSTON.

Board of Governors meets at Elks Club today and tomorrow, but no later. MATTHEW WOLL.

The action of the president in the above matter was approved.

The secretary-treasurer read a communication from the secretary of the Hudson County Allied Printing Trades Council regarding the right of a newspaper to use a label on a poster that was set in the newspaper office and printed in its job office, both being entitled to the label.

The secretary was instructed to say that the board could not prevent the use of the label under the circumstances mentioned.

The secretary-treasurer read a communication from the officers of Syracuse Typographical Union regarding the illegal use of the label in that jurisdiction and a reply which he made to the communication.

The reply of the secretary-treasurer was endorsed by the board.

A communication was read by the secretary-treasurer from the Capital Typographical Union of Salem, Ore., inquiring as to appeals, and the secretary was instructed to impart the information desired.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays read a communication from Secretary Sullivan, of the Elmira Allied Printing Trades Council, requesting permission to have the American Sales Book Company furnished with a matrix from which it could cast labels for its own use.

The secretary-treasurer was instructed to inform the Elmira council that union labels must be procured from the International Allied Printing Trades Association.

The secretary-treasurer read a communication from the Toronto Allied Printing Trades Council regarding the use of the union label in a paper the supplement of which is produced under non-union conditions.

The secretary was instructed to advise them of the requirements of the allied printing trades council and to investigate further into the matter and apply the facts as he finds them according to the statements made and the requirements of the board.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays presented a communication which asked for information regarding the number of votes to which a union would be entitled under the provisions of section 3, article 4, of the allied trades agreement, and the board agreed that the following would be the number of votes for each individual member of each delegation under the provisions of the law mentioned:

Under any circumstances each member has one vote, and on roll call such as is provided for in section 3, article iv, of the agreement between the five international unions of the printing trades, each member who belongs to a union having 50 members is entitled to one more vote, making two.

Each member who belongs to a union having 76 members and less than 126 is entitled to one more vote, making three.

Each member belonging to a union having 126 members and less than 176 is entitled to one more vote, making four.

Each member belonging to a union having 176 members and less than 226 members has one more vote, making five.

Each member belonging to a union having 226 members and less than 276 members is entitled to one more vote, making six.

Each member belonging to a union having 276 members and less than 301 members is entitled to one more vote, making seven.

Each member belonging to a union having 401 members and less than 501 members is entitled to one additional vote, making eight, and each member from a union having 751 members and less than 1,001 members is entitled to one more vote, making nine.

On this basis, a union having 1,000 members, its full delegation would be entitled to 27 votes. A union having more than 1,000 members, each of its delegation would be entitled to one vote in addition to the above for each additional 500 members or major fraction thereof.

A letter was read by the secretary-treasurer from the Bridgeport Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union No. 175 regarding the withdrawal of the typographical label.

Upon motion of Representative Berry the secretary was instructed to write the typographical union of Bridgeport notifying them that if individual labels are being used in that jurisdiction they should be withdrawn according to the agreement.

A communication was read by Secretary-Treasurer Hays from the Allied Printing Trades Council of Milwaukee regarding the furnishing of linotype matter to offices having a contract with the allied council of Milwaukee.

The secretary was instructed to advise the Milwaukee Union the terms under which labels are permitted to be used.

The secretary-treasurer read communications from the Waterloo Central Labor Union, and his replies thereto, regarding the signing of label agreements and the use of the allied printing trades label in that city.

Representative Freel moved that the action taken by the secretary in his last letter be approved. This motion was unanimously adopted.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays read a communication from the Omaha Allied Printing Trades Council regarding signed label agreements, and the secretary was instructed to advise them of the decision previously made by the board on the union label cuts under the new agreement.

A communication was read by the secretary-treasurer from the Allied Printing Trades Council of Pasadena regarding jurisdictional rights.

It was moved that the officers of the five international unions be requested to write their locals in Pasadena along the lines of this communication, and that the secretary be instructed to furnish these officers with a copy thereof.

This motion was unanimously adopted.

The secretary-treasurer read a communication from the secretary of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Newark regarding the question of extending the jurisdiction of that council to cover the whole county of Essex.

Upon motion the matter was referred to the typographical union for consideration, a report to be made at the next meeting of the board.

The report of President Woll on his trip to Pittsburgh was received, showing that all differences had been amicably adjusted.

A communication was read from the secretary of La Crosse Typographical Union No. 448 regarding the formation of an allied council.

Representative Berry moved that the former action of the board be reaffirmed, and that La Crosse be directed that the council be formed. This motion was unanimously adopted.

A communication was read from the Philadelphia Printing Pressmen's Union No. 4 regarding the appeal of that union from an action of the Allied Printing Trades Council in Philadelphia.

It was moved that the appeal be denied and that the alleged charge made in the appeal of one organization having accepted into membership an expelled member of another organization be referred to the presidents of the two organizations interested.

This motion was unanimously adopted.

The secretary-treasurer presented a financial statement of the association from July to November, 1916, which was referred to a finance committee appointed by the chairman, consisting of Representatives Freel, Sovey and Smith.

A communication was read from the secretary of Kalamazoo Typographical Union No. 122 regarding the use of the pressmen's union label and the typographical union label, and the reply of Secretary-Treasurer Hays thereto.

It was moved that the letter of Secretary Hays be approved, and that the board direct that an allied council be formed and that both the typographical union and the printing pressmen and assistants' union be advised to carry out the decision of the board.

This motion was unanimously adopted.

On motion of Representative Berry the meeting adjourned to 10 A. M., January 26.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 26, 1917.

The board met at 10 A. M., as per adjournment, with all members present and President Woll in the chair.

A communication was read from St. Louis Mailers' Union No. 3 regarding the differences between Mailers' Union No. 3 and Bindery Women's Union No. 55, and the secretary was instructed to advise that the Board of Governors has no right to interfere in this jurisdictional matter.

The secretary-treasurer read a communication from the Denver Allied Printing Trades Council regarding the mailing of The Western Farm Life. The board instructed the secretary to say to the Denver council that any publication bearing the union label must be produced entirely by union labor, which includes the mailing. Further that the mailers are covered in the universal license for the reason that they are part of the International Typographical Union.

The secretary-treasurer read an appeal of Omaha Typographical Union No. 190 against an action of the Omaha Allied Printing Trades Council. After an extended discussion the following motion was adopted:

That the Board of Governors direct and authorize its president to proceed to Omaha as early as possible and take up the two matters that were presented to the board and endeavor to bring about an adjustment satisfactory to all parties concerned.

On motion of Representative Berry the board adjourned to meet at 2 P. M.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

The board met at 2 P. M., as per adjournment, with all members present.

The secretary-treasurer presented a communication from Grand Rapids, together with an advertisement published in a non-union paper and containing copies of two letters bearing the union label. Action was deferred until a future meeting and the secretary and president were instructed to try and secure information as to where the matrices from which the labels in question were cast were made. President Woll, of the Photo-Engravers' Union, stated that a letter would be sent to his subordinate unions warning them against making reproductions of any documents bearing the union label unless such label was eliminated, except with the consent of the local allied printing trades council.

An appeal from Duluth Typographical Union No. 136 against an action of Duluth Allied Printing Trades Council and denying the right of the Socialist Publishing Company to have the label put on its publication printed in the Duluth News-Tribune Company's office was read by Secretary-Treasurer Hays. The appeal was sustained.

A communication was read from the secretary of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Milwaukee, in regard to the Red Cross Christmas seals not bearing the union label.

On motion of Representative Berry the secretary was instructed to communicate with the central office, calling their attention to the fact that the matter came up before the board and was given serious consideration by them; that he express the hope that they will conform to the wishes of the printing trades association by having that done, and that he be instructed to have a personal interview if occasion should warrant it.

President Woll reported at length on a dispute existing between the Bookbinders' Union of Chicago and the American School of Correspondence.

On motion of Representative Berry the president was instructed to appear before the Bookbinders' Union of Chicago in response to the invitation which he received and to continue his efforts in the adjustment of this matter, and that the board transmit through the president the hope that the bookbinders will co-operate with him to the end that this matter may be adjusted amicably and equitably to all parties concerned.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays presented a communication setting forth the deplorable conditions existing in the allied printing trades council in Canton, and the following motion was adopted:

That the matter be brought to the attention of the organizations affected with the request that they see that their organizations perform their duties.

William Edwards, of the New York Pressmen's Union, addressed the board as follows:

We have a situation in New York which we regard as serious or which may bring serious consequences, and some of the unions affiliated with the local union thought the board should know the situation. The firm of Martin Brown & Company, a large printing and binding house, has always been 100 per cent union with the exception in recent years of some who were employed in the binding department. This has been confined to the work the girls do. About three years ago a number of girls who were affiliated with the Bindery Women's Union No. 43 left the organization and since then have not been affiliated with any local union. No demands were made on the Martin Brown company because originally, as far as our knowledge was concerned, they were not responsible for the trouble.

After the dispute between the mailers' union and the bindery women's union was settled an agreement came up, and steps were taken to have the girls reaffiliated with the bindery women's union or to have them replaced by members in good standing in the bindery women's union. We have never been able to bring that about. Since we made that effort we have found—either a member of the firm or a man in high authority—the superintendent of the bindery was originally instrumental in having the girls taken out of No. 43. He is just as active now in doing everything he can to get them to return to a legitimate organization. That is the obstacle in the way. The suggestion is that the girls are being unduly penalized.

Local Union No. 43 insists that they shall pay arrearages, which in some cases amounts to about $60; they have placed a fine or reinstatement fee of $25. Some of the girls do not make more than $12 a week, and feel as though the amount of money required to be paid is exorbitant. That is a matter the council felt they had nothing to say about; that it was for the local union to decide, and whatever they decided we would have to stand by them. After we failed to have the Brown company comply with the provisions of the label contract we notified them the question of revoking their label license would come up before a meeting of the council. The council set a date upon which the revocation should become effective. The date passed and the matter was not adjusted. We demanded a return of the labels. They refused to return the labels, stating they were acting under advice, but we did not get any information as to who this was. * * *

We have some members in some local unions who are assisting, who went to the Brown company and advised them to stand pat and defy the council.

Messrs. Mulroy, Stein and Edwards all appeared before the board representing the New York Allied Printing Trades Council. Mr. Edwards made the following statement:

We have received information that a magazine known as Every Week is to be taken from the American Lithograph Company and removed to the Crowell Printing Company in Springfield, Ohio. The matter was brought up at the meeting of the local council last night, and this committee was instructed to request the Board of Governors to take some action in the matter, to either prevent the publication from going to the non-union Springfield (Ohio) shop or to bring about the organization of the departments that are not union in the Crowell company. The pressroom is not union.

A communication from Tallahassee, Fla., was read as to the use of the label in that city.

Representative Berry moved that the communication be referred to the president of the International Typographical Union and the president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, with the request that they endeavor to reach a settlement, and if unable to do so that they report to the next meeting of the board.

Upon motion of Representative Berry the president and secretary were authorized to draft a letter to the Crowell Publishing Company of Springfield, Ohio, on the question of the removal of Every Week from the American Lithograph Company, a union office of New York, and request a conference looking to the unionization of the non-union departments of that company.

President Woll presented a communication from the Chicago Federation of Labor. The matter referred to therein was referred to the president of the board for the purpose of trying to bring about an adjustment of the controversy between the machinists and Workmen Manufacturing Company of Chicago.

Representative Freel brought to the attention of the board a communication from Harrisburg, Pa., regarding the formation of an allied trades council in that city, which contained a statement that the typographical union there had agreed to affiliate through its committee and later withdrew its sanction from the petition sent to the secretary of the allied printing trades council.

The letter was referred to the officers of the International Typographical Union.

Representative Berry moved that the board reaffirm its declaration made at Portland, requesting that the secretary be instructed to notify the unions at Wichita, Wilkes-Barre, Augusta and Dennison to proceed in the formation of an allied printing trades council in accordance with the agreement, and that the international presidents of local unions represented in those cities be requested by this board to communicate with their organizations, asking that they proceed to co-operate in order that the contract may be carried out.

The motion was adopted.

It was moved that the papers in the Dayton case be referred to the executive council of the International Typographical Union for investigation.

This motion was adopted.

Representative Sovey reported to the board that the Allied Printing Trades Council of Dallas, Texas, was not attended by the delegates of the various organizations, and the secretary was directed to call the attention of this condition to the officers of the various international unions and ask them to communicate with their organizations in Dallas upon this subject.

The question of second-class postage rate was taken up and discussed. The board directed the president and the secretary to at any time in the interim between meetings of the board when any question before Congress sought to increase second-class postage, to do everything possible to prevent its passage.

A letter was presented by Secretary-Treasurer Hays from the Allied Printing Trades Council of the State of New York containing a number of recommendations.

On recommendation number one the board agreed that no action was necessary, as the matter contained therein is now being taken care of on a report made by a special committee appointed by the American Federation of Labor.

On recommendation number two the position of the board was that it has and will continue to co-operate with all of the printing trades unions in securing the use of union-label schoolbooks made under union conditions.

On recommendation number three the Board of Governors agreed that it would co-operate with the New York Allied Printing Trades Council in securing the adoption of free schoolbooks.

Recommendation number four was referred to the five international presidents.

On recommendation number five the committee agreed with the last paragraph of that proposition, believing that that covered the other paragraphs under the same number.

The following report of the finance committee was adopted:

NEW YORK, January 26, 1917.

Board of Governors International Allied Printing Trades Association:

GENTLEMEN—Your finance committee has examined the financial report of Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays for the period of March 3 to November 6, 1916, and find the same to be correct.

We find that on November 6, 1916, there was a balance in the hands of Secretary-Treasurer Hays to the credit of this association of one thousand two hundred and twenty-two dollars and seventy-seven cents ($1,222.77).

We also find that this association is indebted to the International Typographical Union in the sum of one hundred and seventy dollars and eleven cents ($170.11) for money that union advanced or expended for rent, typewriting, postage, expressage, telegrams, etc., in behalf of this association.

Your committee recommends that this sum ($170.11) be repaid the International Typographical Union.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) JAMES J. FREEL,
A. P. SOVEY,
CHARLES N. SMITH.

It was moved and seconded that the secretary be authorized to print the usual number of copies of the proceedings for distribution in the usual way.

Action on the changing of the time of the regular meeting of the board was deferred.

The following invitations relating to the place of holding the March meeting of the board were read:

BUFFALO, N. Y., October 25, 1916.

John W. Hays, Secretary Board of Governors, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. HAYS—At the last meeting of this council I was instructed to invite the Board of Governors to hold the March meeting in Buffalo.

I sincerely trust you will use your influence to induce the members to favorably consider this invitation. We believe it will be of benefit to Buffalo to have the heads of the different organizations meet here, and you may rest assured they won't regret it.

Trusting to hear from you favorably on this matter, and with best wishes, I am

Yours fraternally,
W. J. MCLAUGHLIN,
Secretary Allied Printing Trades Council of Buffalo.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, November 6, 1916.

J. W. Hays, Secretary Board of Governors International Printing Trades Association, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. HAYS—At the last monthly meeting of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Cleveland I was directed to invite the Board of Governors of the Allied Printing Trades Association to hold its next session in Cleveland.

There are a number of reasons why you should favor us in this respect and the chief one, we believe, is that we are free from trouble of any nature whatever in the printing industry in Cleveland.

Such an atmosphere should serve as a good tonic to the Board of Governors while straightening out the troubles that come before your body.

Hoping that you will give our invitation favorable consideration, and with best wishes, I remain

Very sincerely,

F. W. STEFFEN,
Secretary Allied Printing Trades Council of Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, November 8, 1916.

J. W. Hays, Secretary Board of Governors International Printing Trades Association, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. HAYS—At the November meeting of Cleveland Typographical Union No. 53 a motion was unanimously passed extending an invitation to the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association to hold its next regular session in Cleveland.

We sincerely hope that your body will honor Cleveland by meeting in the sixth city, and assure you that we will not burden you with any local troubles.

With best wishes, and a fervent desire that our invitation will receive favorable consideration, I remain

Sincerely,

JAMES J. HOBAN,
President No. 53.

Cleveland was selected as the place of holding the next regular meeting of the Board of Governors, which occurs on March 5, 1917.

Representative Berry, of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, notified the board that he would move at the March meeting that the July meeting of the board be held at the Pressmen's Home in Tennessee.

Invitations were received from the Allied Trades Council of Syracuse, the Typographical Union of Syracuse and the New York State Allied Printing Trades Council to hold the July meeting of the Board of Governors in Syracuse.

On motion the board adjourned to meet the first Monday in March in Cleveland, Ohio.

J. W. HAYS, Secretary-Treasurer.

Proceedings of the Meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association, Held at the Hotel Statler, Cleveland, Ohio, March 5, 1917.

The Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association met in regular session in the Statler hotel, Cleveland, Ohio, on Monday, March 5, 1917.

There were present representing the International Typographical Union Vice-President W. W. Barrett, Vice-President Hugo Miller, Vice-President Charles N. Smith and Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays.

There was present representing the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union President George L. Berry.

There was present representing the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union President James J. Freel.

There was present representing the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders President A. P. Sovey.

There was present representing the International Photo-Engravers' Union President Matthew Woll.

In addition to the members of the board above named there were present Vice-President William Glockling and Secretary-Treasurer Walter Reddick of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders. Secretary A. W. Kramer, of the Dayton Allied Printing Trades Council, was also present. These gentlemen were invited to seats upon the floor.

Secretary Kramer, of the Dayton Council, stated that he was present for the purpose of taking up a controversy from Dayton that was before the board, the controversy consisting of a dispute between the Allied Printing Trades Council and the Typographical Union of Dayton. No representative of the typographical union being present, the Dayton case was made a special order for 2 P. M.

President Woll informed the members of the board that he had received a communication from President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, containing the information that representatives of the lithographers' international organization were unable to attend a meeting in Cleveland at this time and a request that the conference between the lithographers and the allied printing trades organizations be postponed to a meeting of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, which would be held during the month of April.

The board decided that President Woll should inform President Gompers that the representatives of the allied printing trades would be present to take up the lithographers' question at the April meeting of the executive council.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays presented to the board a communication from the secretary of the Brockton Allied Printing Trades Council regarding a difficulty which that organization was having in securing signatures to the universal label license adopted by the International Allied Printing Trades Association. The secretary was instructed to inform the Brockton Council of the previous action of the board upon the same subject.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays then presented a communication from the secretary of the San Francisco Allied Printing Trades Council inquiring as to the status of the controversy between the lithographers and the printing trades organizations.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays then presented to the board a communication from Secretary Frank E. Bell, of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Cincinnati and Vicinity, reading as follows:

In signing up the label licenses for 1917 one of our employers has noticed the blank lines at the bottom that was evidently intended to be filled in by an officer of the Printing Trades Association.

He is the only one that has requested me to have the license countersigned by an international officer, and I of course cheerfully agreed to forward it to you for your signature. Will you kindly sign both copies and return to me so that I can return one copy to this firm?

Not having received any instructions to that effect, I have not heretofore forwarded all licenses signed up to you for your signature, but if such a procedure is intended by the Board of Governors I shall be very glad to comply.

Accompanying the above letter were copies of the contract and license governing the use of the label of the International Allied Printing Trades Association and on which signatures were desired. This license contains at the top the following:

Know all men by these presents: That the local allied printing trades council, of the city of .... in the state of ....., by and through its president and secretary, is hereby authorized and empowered by the International Allied Printing Trades Association in its name and in its behalf to sign, execute, do, act, transact, determine, accomplish, complete, carry out and perform all and every act and thing whatsoever which is or may be proper and necessary to be done in carrying out and effectuating the terms, conditions and agreements of the following contract in strict accordance with the subject at all times to present and all future laws, rules, regulations, orders or instructions of the International Allied Printing Trades Association or its Board of Governors.

In witness whereof the International Allied Printing Trades Association has hereunto set its hand and seal the ..... day of ....., A. D. .....

INTERNATIONAL ALLIED PRINTING TRADES ASSOCIATION,

Attest:

MATTHEW WOLL,
President;
J. W. HAYS,
Secretary-Treasurer.

As is expressly stated in the infroduction to the contract and license, the president and secretary of the local allied printing trades council are authorized to sign the contract and license for the label as agents of the International Allied Printing Trades Association.

Another communication from Secretary Bell, of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Cincinnati and Vicinity, was presented to the board by President Woll. His reply to the communication was endorsed by the board.

Representative Woll then moved, seconded by Representative Freel, that the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union be requested to investigate the ink makers' organization and ascertain if the pressmen desire to secure jurisdiction over the ink makers. If it is determined that the pressmen do desire this action, it is to be recommended by the officers of the Board of Governors.

President Woll then made the following report upon his efforts to adjust differences that existed between the Allied Printing Trades Council of Omaha, Neb., and Omaha Typographical Union as per the instructions of the board at its last meeting:

CLEVELAND, OHIO, March 5, 1917.

To the Members of the Board of Governors:

GENTLEMEN—Pursuant to instructions I visited Omaha, Neb., during the month of February for the purpose of removing difficulties having presented themselves by reason of the label license for the use of the allied label and, if possible, bring the local unions of the Omaha Allied Printing Trades Council into a better understanding with each other and advance the interests of all concerned.

I am pleased to report that after an extended conference with the Beacon Press and the National Printing Company, all misunderstandings regarding requirements of the label license were removed and these concerns agreed to the signing of the label license. The Snell and Zimmer Printing Company was also interviewed. This conference evidenced quite clearly that five or six local printing concerns entered into an agreement not to use the allied union label unless a satisfactory understanding might prevail. Apparently the misunderstanding regarding the label license related to a misconception of that provision requiring that only union-made photo-engravings, electrotypes, etc., enter into the printing handled by the licensee of the allied union label; that a strict enforcement of this rule would compel the local publisher or printer to investigate the origin and character of each engraving or electrotype as it was received and that such a requirement could not possibly be complied with from a business point of view.

Upon being advised that the licensee was not required to make such investigation, that he may assume that the printing plates sent him and over which he had no control were union-made until advised to the contrary by the interested unions, and that the burden of proof in determining whether such plate matter was union or non-union rested on the union or unions making the complaint, but that he was required in all instances to send whatever work over which he had control to union offices, all further objections to the label license were removed.

Serious complaint was also entered against the unfair competition local employers were compelled to meet from the very small printing offices. Being advised of the board's ruling on the one-man shop, satisfaction was expressed, though the local employers believed our restrictions should go still further in order to do justice to the larger employers of printing tradesmen.

While I was unable to secure the assent of the Snell and Zimmerman Printing Company to the label license contract, and while unable to interview all local printing concerns, I am confident that with the two largest printing concerns having signed the label contract little difficulty will be experienced in signing up the balance. This is also the opinion of the officers of the local allied printing trades council.

I also arranged for a special meeting of the local allied printing trades council. All unions were represented at this meeting. A full report of my activities was presented to and approved of by the allied council. I informed the members in attendance that a ruling on the appeal pending was secondary to the necessity of all local unions taking a greater interest in the allied printing trades affairs. I advised them that the procedure of the local council against which the local typographical union complained was wrong. I also informed them that the local rule setting forth conditions under which the local council could legally transact business was in conflict with the spirit of the agreement of the International Allied Printing Trades Association and that conditions as evidenced by the records of the local allied printing trades council would warrant the Board of Governors in dismissing both the appeal and the answer to the appeal without prejudice to either party to the appeal.

The membership present expressed themselves as being in accord with these views and after extended discussion as to methods of label propaganda and the necessity of a more harmonious and more aggressive attitude of all local unions to advance the work of the local council and the allied label the meeting came to a close, all present seemingly pleased of the friendly, harmonious and cooperative understanding arrived at.

Reflecting upon the local difficulties as they unfolded themselves to me, I am led to believe the local rule establishing restrictive and in many instances prohibitive conditions in the calling of a legally constituted meeting of the local council is the chief cause of this council's difficulties, and I recommend that the local council be informed that the present rule in question is contrary to the intent and spirit of the International Allied Printing Trades Association agreement.

I also recommend that the appeal of the local typographical union and the answer of the local allied printing trades council be dismissed without prejudice to either appellant or appellee and that all local unions to the allied council be advised by their respective international unions to join in the inauguration of an active and aggressive label campaign to the end that local employers who fail voluntarily to enter into an agreement with the local council for the use of the allied label with the understanding herein reported on, will be compelled to enter into contractual relations in order to hold that trade which is susceptible to and sympathetic with the aims, ideals and purposes of organized labor.

Fraternally submitted,

(Signed) MATTHEW WOLL, President.

On motion of Representative Berry, seconded by Representative Miller, the report of President Woll was accepted as an adjustment and solution of the difficulties in Omaha.

The appeal that was before the Board of Governors and because of which President Woll was instructed to visit Omaha was then on motion of Representatives Berry and Freel dismissed without prejudice to either side, it being the understanding from President Woll's report that the question of difference on what should constitute a quorum at a council meeting would be adjusted by the Omaha Council. In event this did not transpire, the question was to be further taken up by President Woll and Secretary-Treasurer Hays with the Omaha Council.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays then called attention to portions of the minutes of the last meeting of the Board of Governors and they were approved.

Representative Sovey, of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, then stated that in the city of Dallas, Texas, the bookbinders were on strike in two offices, both offices having the allied printing trades council union label. He stated further that the bookbinders' local in Dallas had requested that the allied trades council take the labels from these offices and that the Dallas Council had declined to do so. On motion of Representative Berry and Representative Freel the president and secretary were instructed to send the following communication to the secretary of Dallas Allied Printing Trades Council:

March 8, 1917.

Z. M. Duckworth, Secretary Allied Printing Trades Council, 1707 Main Street, Dallas, Texas:

DEAR MR. DUCKWORTH—At a meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association held in Cleveland, Ohio, during the present week, President A. P. Sovey, of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, reported to the Board of Governors that in two offices in Dallas the bookbinders are on a legitimate and properly authorized strike, and that the Allied Printing Trades Council of Dallas refuses to remove the labels from these offices, although requested to do so by the bookbinders' union.

The Board of Governors decided that if the statement of President Sovey, of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, is correct the Dallas Allied Printing Trades Council must remove the labels from the shops in question.

Kindly write me upon this subject at once.

Fraternally yours,

Representative Smith, of the International Allied Printing Trades Association, then stated that there was a possibility that a similar situation would arise in Chicago where the mailers had strikes in one or more offices. The president and secretary were instructed that if necessary to take action in the case brought by Mr. Smith the same action should be taken as in the Dallas case.

The time having arrived for the selection of the place of meeting for the Board of Governors at its regular session in July, the secretary presented a communication received at the last meeting inviting the board to hold its July meeting in Syracuse, N. Y., and also the statement made by President Berry, of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, that he would invite the board to hold its July meeting at the Pressmen's Home in Tennessee. It was moved and seconded that the Pressmen's Home in Tennessee be selected as the next meeting place. A roll call was ordered upon the question and the vote in favor of the Pressmen's Home in Tennessee for the July meeting was adopted unanimously.

President Woll then declared the place of meeting for the July regular session of the board to be at the Pressmen's Home, Tennessee.

The time having arrived for the nomination and election of officers for the ensuing year, Representative Freel nominated for president the present incumbent, Matthew Woll, of the Photo-Engravers' International Union.

On motion Representative Hays was instructed to cast the ballot of the board for Representative Woll as president of the Board of Governors for the coming year. Vice-President Freel put the motion, which was adopted unanimously, and Secretary-Treasurer Hays cast the vote as ordered. Vice-President Freel then declared Matthew Woll duly elected as president for another year.

Representative Sovey then nominated Representative Freel, of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union, for re-election for the coming year as vice-president of the board. By unanimous vote Secretary-Treasurer Hays was instructed to cast the ballot of the board for Representative Freel as vice-president. Secretary-Treasurer Hays, following the instructions, cast the vote for Representative Freel and President Woll declared him re-elected for the coming year.

Representative Berry, of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, then nominated Representative J. W. Hays to succeed himself as secretary-treasurer of the Board of Governors. On motion Vice-President Freel was instructed to cast the ballot of the board for Mr. Hays. Representative Freel did as instructed, and President Woll declared Mr. Hays elected to succeed himself as secretary-treasurer for the coming year.

The officers elected were then duly installed.

On motion of Representative Freel, the board adjourned to meet at 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The board met at 2 P. M. as per adjournment, all members being present.

James J. Hoban, president and business agent of Cleveland Typographical Union No. 53, was present and was invited to sit with the meeting.

Max S. Hayes, representative of the International Typographical Union, was also present and was invited to sit with the body.

J. E. Duncan, secretary-treasurer of the Typographical Union of Dayton, Ohio, and A. W. Kramer, secretary of the Dayton Allied Printing Trades Council, were also present for the purpose of appearing before the Board of Governors on a controversy existing between the two organizations in Dayton.

The Dayton controversy having been made a special order of 2 o'clock, the case was at once taken up and Secretary Kramer opened for the Dayton Allied Printing Trades Council, setting forth the contentions of that body.

Mr. Duncan, of Dayton Typographical Union, followed Mr. Kramer, and set forth the position of Dayton Typographical Union.

After the two representatives from Dayton had concluded their arguments, a general discussion lasting for some time was held upon the Dayton controversy, after which the board went into executive session.

During the executive session Representative Freel moved that the president and secretary of the Board of Governors visit Dayton at their earliest convenience and make an effort to straighten out the difficulties existing between Dayton Typographical Union and Dayton Allied Printing Trades Council.

This motion was adopted.

President Woll then submitted the following report upon the controversy between the local Bookbinders' Union No. 8, of Chicago, Ill., and the American School of Correspondence of the same city, having reference to the binding of books in the office of the Cuneo Company:

CLEVELAND, OHIO, March 5, 1917.

To the Board of Governors:

GENTLEMEN—You will recall that at the last meeting of the Board of Governors I reported fully my activities in endeavoring to adjust a grievous situation confronting the allied printing trades unions of Chicago by reason of a controversy which had arisen between the local bookbinders' union and the American School of Correspondence. At that time I apprised the board of the several meetings and conferences held and that through the good offices of Mr. Miller, president of the American School of Correspondence, further concessions were obtained from the Cuneo Company of Chicago, in behalf of the local bookbinders' union, which concessions were considerably more favorable than even those urged for acceptance to the local bookbinders' union by A. P. Sovey, president of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders. I also informed the board at that time that the local allied printing trades council of Chicago had considered these later proposals and, with the exception of the bookbinders' union's representatives, fully approved same, urging upon and recommending to the local bookbinders' union their acceptance of these proposals, together with their assurance of prompt joint action against the Cuneo Company in event this concern failed to live up to the conditions set forth in their entirety and in absolute good faith.

At this meeting of the Chicago Allied Printing Trades Council the representatives of the local bookbinders' union assured the members of the council and me that the proposals would be submitted to their local union for consideration, together with the recommendation of the local allied printing trades council and that I, as president of the Board of Governors, would be welcomed in attending the meeting of the local bookbinders' union when these proposals were being considered in order that I might present the viewpoint of the printing trades unions and their recommendations and assurance for joint action in the event good faith was not maintained by the Cuneo Company, to their membership directly. I was also assured that an invitation to this effect would be sent me.

The Board of Governors thereupon approved all my activities in this matter and that of the local allied printing trades council of Chicago, and instructed me to continue my efforts in the same manner as reported on at that time and in addition instructed me to appear at the meeting of the local bookbinders' union for the purposes herein indicated.

To my great surprise, on the day I returned to Chicago, after having just attended the Board of Governors meetings above referred to, and on the day of the local bookbinders' union meeting which I was instructed to attend, I was called on the telephone in the morning and advised by the secretary of the local bookbinders' union that I was not wanted at their local union meeting, and that the members of this local union did not care to hear from me. I recalled to the local secretary the invitation extended me and also directed his attention to the instructions and wishes of the Board of Governors, but without encouragement on the part of the local secretary. I then advised him that I would present myself at their meeting that night in accordance with the wishes and as per instructions of the board and that if his local union had no respect for the wishes and instructions of the Board of Governors that they would be given the opportunity of turning down the board's request, wishes and instructions.

I presented myself at the local union meeting that same night, submitted my card and written request on the part of the Board of Governors to be heard on this subject as president of the Board of Governors.

About fifteen or twenty minutes thereafter I was informed by the local officer designated for this purpose that the request of the Board of Governors was denied and that I was not to be allowed an opportunity to present the viewpoint of the other printing trades unions on this subject to their local members.

At noon of the next day I received by special delivery a letter informing me that if I cared to talk to the officers and members of the local bookbinders' union I should come to the next meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor, at which time and place I might address their officers and members on this subject.

I have yet to understand the purpose of this later action other than that it was directed toward further humiliation and disregard for the wishes and instructions of the International Printing Trades Unions, comprising the International Allied Printing Trades Association and the Chicago affiliated local unions and the Chicago Allied Printing Trades Council. No other logical deduction can be drawn because the local bookbinders' union has no authority over the Chicago Federation of Labor, its members are not present at meetings, the local bookbinders' union is represented in this central body merely by delegates and has no power or authority to invite any one to address the federation on any subject.

Having arranged to visit Omaha as per instructions of the board on another subject referred to me as president of the board, and to avoid not giving consideration to even this humiliating and second invitation of the local bookbinders' union, I informed the officers of the Chicago Federation of Labor of the letter sent me, of my enforced absence from the city at the federation's next meeting and requested that if this subject came before the meeting of the Federation to withhold any action until I had been given an opportunity to be heard in behalf of the Board of Governors. To this the officers of the federation agreed. Upon my return to Chicago I inquired if the local bookbinders' union had submitted the subject-matter in question to the federation for consideration and I was informed in the negative. It is thus apparent that the local bookbinders are unwilling to have their entire local membership know the viewpoint of all other printing trades unions on this subject—a matter in which the interests of all unions and that of the Chicago printing craft are vitally interested and concerned.

The situation as it now presents itself is wrought with very great and grave dangers to the best interests of the printing craft in Chicago. The friendly attitude of local fair employers is jeopardized, particularly that of the local bookbinders' union. Some of the local allied printing trades unions feel that the local bookbinders' policy of rule or ruin on this subject and their flagrant disregard of the interests of others warrants a future attitude on their part similar in character to that displayed by the local bookbinders' union and its officers. I must also report the fact that if the action of the local bookbinders' union is allowed to go unchallenged the local employers will feel that the local allied printing trades council is entirely without power or authority and that the influence, prestige and power of the Board of Governors and that of the International Printing Trades Unions is not worthy of its name; that we have an irresponsible combination in which international authority is subordinate to local rule and disrespect.

I regret that circumstances impel and compel me to submit this kind of a report. I hesitated long before finally concluding to do so. The best interests of all international and local affiliated local unions demand that full light be thrown on this entire subject in order that some action may prevail which will for all time to come avoid a similar humiliating spectacle in our local and allied affairs.

I believe the subject upon which this controversy is founded can yet be dealt with in a manner so as to overcome all the harm which has been done and avoid further difficulties and evils. However, strong and determined action is required. To this end I recommend that the Board of Governors and all affiliated international unions do everything in their power to have the authority of the Board of Governors respected and adhered to; that the Board of Governors again approve the method of adjustment in the manner herein reported on and that in addition to the president of the board, A. P. Sovey, president of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, be likewise appointed and empowered as a special representative of the board for the purpose of carrying out the instructions and recommendations of the board on this entire subject.

Fraternally submitted,

(Signed) MATTHEW WOLL,

President Board of Governors, International Allied Printing Trades Association.

On motion the report of President Woll was accepted and the recommendations concurred in.

It was then moved by Representative Berry, and seconded by Representative Freel, that Secretary Hays be instructed to bring to the attention of the officers of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders the action of Chicago Local No. 8 of the bookbinders' union as regards an insult to the president of the International Allied Printing Trades Association, which association is composed of the International Typographical Union, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union, the International Photo-Engravers' Union and the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, and all their members. President Woll was acting in behalf of the International Allied Printing Trades Association, and the Board of Governors looks to the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders for such action as may be necessary in establishing the proper respect due to the association by Chicago Local No. 8 of the bookbinders and that will prevent a repetition of any such outrageous and indefensible action in the future.

This motion was adopted by unanimous vote.

A question that was before the board on a previous occasion, being that of the menace to the printing trades through a situation that had been existing in connection with the white paper industry was again taken up, and on motion the Board of Governors reaffirmed its previous action upon the paper situation and the officers of the board were instructed to continue their efforts as provided at a previous meeting.

Secretary Reddick, of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, then addressed the board, stating that he was pleased to have had an opportunity to sit during the sessions of the board and saying that it had been of great benefit to him. He returned thanks to the board and its members and to the officers of the Cleveland Allied Printing Trades Council for courtesies shown him while in the city of Cleveland.

Vice-President Glockling, of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, also expressed his appreciation of the work of the Board of Governors and of the opportunity given him to be present at the meeting. He also desired to return thanks to the board and its members for courtesies received.

James J. Hoban, president of Cleveland Typographical Union, spoke briefly on the work of the board and expressed the hope that its deliberations in Cleveland had been beneficial, stating that he was satisfied the meeting of the board in Cleveland would be beneficial to the printing trades unions in that city. He returned thanks for courtesies received.

Representative Freel and Representative Sovey moved that the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association extend its thanks and appreciation to the officers and members of the Allied Printing Trades Council of Cleveland and the various printing trades organizations of the same city for courtesies extended to it during its meeting. The motion was adopted unanimously.

Representative Brady, of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, being present at the close of the meeting, made a few remarks, expressing the hope that the members enjoyed themselves while in the city.

On motion of Representative Freel, seconded by Representative Berry, the secretary-treasurer was instructed to call the regular meeting of the Board of Governors for the first Monday in July, as is provided in the agreement, with such members as are located in Indianapolis, and that these members then be instructed to adjourn the board to the second Monday in July.

On motion the board then adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,

J. W. HAYS, Secretary-Treasurer.

REPORTS OF REPRESENTATIVES

REPRESENTATIVE BAKER.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—In submitting my report for the year just brought to a close I shall undertake, for your information, to briefly summarize the work of the twelve-month period and to advise you of results in the several localities to which I have been assigned.

The most signal success we have achieved in that portion of our International jurisdiction which I have the honor to represent is that of securing the adoption of union-made textbooks for use in the public schools of Montana. For many years past the typographical unions of Montana have endeavored, without success, to secure the adoption of textbooks made under fair conditions for Montana schools. We are now able to report the complete success of our 1916-1917 campaign.

As early as September of last year President Scott instructed me to take charge of an aggressive campaign for the adoption of union-made textbooks for the public schools of Montana, and, with the earnest co-operation of our locals in this state, together with that of many of the central bodies, we have achieved most splendid results.

Our success in this undertaking is largely due to the work of the executive council in codifying and preparing in simplified form accurate and definite information, so essential in the conduct of such a campaign. The little textbook pamphlet issued by the executive council contains information which heretofore we have been unable to gather. It classifies every textbook publishing house in such a way as to make it easy to determine the status of every textbook publishing firm in the country. In previous campaigns lack of information of this nature, definite in character, has proved a severe handicap in our interviews with the representatives of the state on the textbook commission.

This pamphlet places all textbook publishing houses in three classifications, thus:

Class A—Union.
Class B—Union and non-union.
Class C—Non-union.

In volume 4 we find there are fifty-nine class A (union) textbook publishing firms, giving the names of the publishers, and the offices in which their work is done, as against twenty-two class B (union and non-union) and twenty class C (non-union). There were in the United States at the date of issuance of volume 4, seventeen more union textbook publishing firms than all others combined, class A publishers representing the very best texts obtainable. I earnestly commend this book to those who may contemplate similar campaigns to that recently conducted in Montana. It contains information without which we can not hope to succeed.

In the awards made by the Montana State Textbook Commission all basal texts to be used during the ensuing six years will be supplied by firms whose work is performed in strictly union establishments. Aside from a very few of the supplemental texts (and these in most instances were provided for in previous contracts), all the books used in the public schools of Montana will be manufactured under fair conditions.

The result of this campaign should be most gratifying to the International Typographical Union, and certainly must be a source of much discomfort to the non-union establishments which have largely profited in this field in former years.

In former campaigns for union-made textbooks we have been confronted with many obstacles which made success impossible. Such information as we have heretofore been able to gather has, in many instances, been unreliable and even conflicting, but the little booklet above referred to, issued at intervals by the executive council, giving a complete revision of the various classes and the standing of each textbook publishing firm, has solved the problem and contributed much toward success in these undertakings.

MINOT, N. D.

In January I was called to Minot, N. D., to assist the local there in negotiating a new scale. We were successful in securing an increase and in adjusting a number of minor affairs which were causing some friction at that point. When leaving Minot we carried with us the assurance that conditions had been improved and that the union and its employers were mutually sharing most friendly relationship.

TWIN FALLS, IDAHO.

Early in February I visited Twin Falls, Idaho, where a scale controversy had been in existence for some time. I assisted the local in further negotiations which resulted in securing an increased scale for the year 1917.

FARGO, N. D.

I visited Fargo during the month of February.

Conditions in the job printing branch in Fargo are not what we would like them to be, though there is reason to believe that an improvement will be shown in the near future.

The newspapers of Fargo are all operated under union conditions.

Since the eight-hour strike what have been the principal job printing establishments of Fargo have remained non-union. The principal difficulty in combating this situation has been due to the lack of well-equipped union job offices, capable of competing with the non-union establishments in the general run of commercial work, the best-equipped offices being non-union. However, increased equipment, together with general expansion by one or two union job printing establishments, affords an opportunity to stimulate interest in a label campaign which will undoubtedly prove its effectiveness.

Fargo Union has in its ranks many wide-awake, active members, whose best efforts are being exerted to establish better conditions, with particular reference to the job printing branch of the business, but they are laboring under a severe handicap, and have been for many years.

The trade union movement in North Dakota received a severe setback a few years since, but wonderful changes have taken place in the past two years in this state, politically and otherwise, which have operated to the advantage of legitimate trade unionism, and our members have not been slow to grasp the opportunity to materially strengthen their position throughout the state.

IDAHO FALLS, IDAHO.

A charter was issued to Idaho Falls early this year. Many other crafts were organized about the same time and the town is now pretty well organized in most branches, though all charters are yet in their infancy.

After our charter had been placed in Idaho Falls negotiations with the employers for a wage contract met with the reply from all except one of the employers that it was their purpose to conduct open shops. I was assigned the duty of endeavoring to conclude negotiations with these employers. My first answer from them was, as they had previously advised the local union, that they intended to conduct open shops. After a series of interviews with the proprietors of the various offices involved we were successful in signing contracts with them for the ensuing year. Thus Idaho Falls started off under its new charter 100 per cent union.

BUTTE AND MILES CITY, MONT.

Within the past year I have visited Butte and Miles City and assisted in bringing about an understanding in controversies not affecting scales or working conditions. In each instance we were successful in securing a satisfactory understanding.

BISMARCK, N. D.

On June 4 I arrived in Bismarck to investigate a situation quite unusual, at least in so far as my own experience extends. Nothing similar had ever been called to my attention previous to this time.

A letter was received, addressed to the business manager of the Tribune, which apparently laid bare a plot to disregard the contract existing between Bismarck Typographical Union and the Bismarck Tribune and to declare for an open shop and to have the men on hand to take the places of our members at the appointed hour. By reason of a conflict of authority in the business office, in opening the mail, a copy of the letter fell into the hands of the typographical union. On the surface a deep-laid plot was revealed and an air of suspicion prevailed. Among other things, the letter, dated at St. Paul, contained the following:

* * * we will plan to have any number of the crew ready for your letter, and if you can give us a definite date when you want the changes made will have their transportation ready. As soon as you learn when your man is to go on his trip wire us and it will all be over before the union wakes up to the fact that it is let out. * * *

The local union, unable to throw any definite light upon the affair, notified President Scott, who instructed me to visit Bismarck and to clear up the hazy situation, if possible, and, at all hazards, to defend the existing contract between the union and the Tribune Publishing Company, the manager of the Tribune, up to this time, having held the original and the envelop in which this letter was inclosed for the purpose of meeting an anticipated investigation.

In making my investigation I was permitted to examine the original letter and the envelop in which it was received, both of which looked suspicious to me. I enlisted the aid of the postal authorities, who declared the letter to be a fraud, and that the same, bearing a St. Paul date and stamp on the envelop, had been mailed in Bismarck and not in St. Paul. It was found that the envelop previously used was one in which literature of some character had been enclosed and mailed in St. Paul. A stamp had been placed alongside of the canceled St. Paul stamp and an address erased and the address "Business Manager of the Bismarck Tribune (confidential)" written underneath. Pretty crude work, but, nevertheless, "started something."

There has of late been some friction, besides conflict of authority, in the management of the Tribune Publishing Company, but, nevertheless, all seem agreed that the letter, which gave rise to such a threatened disturbance of the relations existing between Bismarck Union and the Tribune Publishing Company, was a fraud, and assurances given that there is no disposition to set aside the contract with the union, which will be effective for more than two years from the present time, or to in any way disturb the relationship existing between the Tribune and the local union. Our union, of course, is not interested in the quarrels existing between the managers of the Tribune themselves.

It is unfortunate that I am unable to name in this report the person guilty of the perpetration of this affair, though I have my own opinion as to the source from whence it emanated, but in the absence of direct proof on this score must of necessity report the facts without making a positive charge against any particular individual. I am gratified to say, however, that there is not even a remote possibility that any member of our craft was in any way associated with the perpetration of such a contemptible act.

The investigation has cleared the atmosphere and we are assured that our contracts with the Tribune were entered into in good faith and that they will be fulfilled in every particular.

The fiscal year just drawing to a close has been eventful in many ways. A great world-war has cast its shadow of gloom over the civilized world. Great organizations, such as ours, almost daily, are called upon to meet contingencies heretofore undreamed of. Long before conscription became the order of the day our members were voluntarily responding in vast numbers to the country's call. Many of them are today bearing arms "somewhere in France" in defense of a righteous cause—yea, many, many of them are numbered among the heroic dead. These, and countless other events are momentarily transpiring, adding to the responsibilities of those whom we have chosen to direct the affairs of our magnificent trade-union organization. President Marsden G. Scott and Secretary John W. Hays, together with the executive council of the International Typographical Union, are meeting with untiring zeal and patriotic spirit the marked and changed conditions confronting ours, as well as all institutions of whatever name or character throughout the land. They deserve to receive, and I believe are receiving, the unanimous co-operation of every local within the jurisdiction in holding aloft the banner of the International Typographical Union as a symbol of patriotism.

Many thousands of dollars have already been paid in mortuary benefits to the beneficiaries of our members who have given their lives to their country, and we must be prepared to do our "bit" in whatever way we may be called upon.

The monstrous increase in the cost of the necessaries of life is a staggering proposition in itself as well as the advanced cost of all material entering into the production of newspaper and every character of printing.

Digitized by Google

In times like these the duties and responsibilities of our executive officers are greatly multiplied, and our local unions are in a position to do much, by way of co-operation, in aiding in the successful conduct of the affairs which confront us and make our organization truly great.

We are blessed with having as our chief executive, secretary-treasurer and executive council at the present time men who, through their known abilities, strengthened by experience and training, measure up to the standard necessary to pilot us through the world-wide crisis, and may the membership at large realize the duty which is theirs of co-operating in the fullest degree with those upon whom rests the monstrous responsibilities, abnormal at this time, of piloting us, with patriotic impulses, through the storms and upheavals of an unsettled world.

The forthcoming convention will undoubtedly be the most important gathering of our fellow craftsmen in the history of the International Typographical Union. In the many and great questions which will present themselves for determination, our best thoughts and noblest impulses must guide us in the performance of duty. May co-operation, fraternal regard and patriotic devotion to our country and our flag be the inspiration which shall guide you in your deliberations is my earnest wish.

With best wishes for a pleasant and profitable meeting, I am Fraternally,

Helena, Mont. JOHN BAKER.

REPRESENTATIVE BRADY.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—I herewith submit the following brief report on the organization work I am assisting Boston Typographical Union No. 13 to promote in Greater Boston covering the fiscal year ending May 31, 1917:

In presenting my report a year ago the results secured for the betterment of conditions in the book and job branch of the trade were given in detail from the inception of the work in April, 1913, to the close of the fiscal year of 1916.

On April 1, 1916, an arbitration and wage scale agreement, providing for a substantial increase for the book and job printers, was entered into with the Boston Typothetæ. For the benefit of those not familiar with the organization plan and its accomplishments in Greater Boston, and to demonstrate the importance of No. 13 having an agreement with the typothetæ, the following from my report of last year is reproduced:

Never before has Boston Typographical Union had an arbitration agreement with the Boston Typothetæ, and never before has there existed a signed form of contract covering a wage scale between the two organizations. One of the most important things accomplished to date is the fact this agreement has been entered into. Since the start of the work in 1913 we have put forth every effort to bring about this agreement, believing that once the union and the typothetæ entered into this sort of relationship it would mean the beginning of the end of unsatisfactory conditions the union desired to remedy—conditions that kept out of the union the majority of the book and job printers employed in Greater Boston, created low wages, made it impossible to guarantee to many printers steady employment because of an overstocked and, to a certain extent, inefficient labor market; and established apprentice conditions that were deplorable from the standpoint of the number employed by many shops, and the absence of any serious effort to properly instruct and make them competent journeymen printers. To the typothetæ it means industrial peace in the composing rooms of its members, and a gradually better and more efficient labor market. But the most important of all is the undisputed fact that through this agreement the typothetæ can secure for its members the co-operation necessary and desirable to finally bring about fair competitive conditions in the trade. When all legitimate competitive employing printers are making a fair profit on every job handled, the book and job printer will be able to share in this profit to the fullest extent in further increased wages. This co-operation with the important factor in the trade as far as the composing room is concerned will make it possible for the employers to better and more rapidly eliminate the evil of price-cutting. It is going to take time to thoroughly bring about these changes and make the industry what it should be. But it will be brought about. The union is gaining in membership, and the typothetæ is gaining in membership. This will continue all during the life of the five-year agreement. The union will have as members practically all the remaining non-union printers, and the typothetæ will have accomplished the same result among the employers. The union wants thorough organization and all employers to conduct union composing rooms. The typothetæ wants thorough organization and legitimate competition to make a fair profit. The agreement to bring about all this now exists. Because of this fact, I make the prediction that in the final outcome nearly if not all important printing concerns of Greater Boston will be members of the Boston Typothetæ and conducting union composing rooms through an agreement with Boston Typographical Union.

It has taken three years to bring about this agreement; three years of hard work. And the principal reason making it possible to bring it about was the typothetæ fully recognized the constructive business policies of the International Typographical Union and Boston Typographical Union No. 13. The typothetæ knew it could rely upon the union to fulfil its part of the contract in every particular, and the co-operation promised to make better conditions in the trade would be fully given. The typographical union knew the typothetæ would do likewise. This mutual confidence and effort mean a full measure of success. It is big business and is going to accomplish big things. There is much work for the union to do, and it will be continued along the same lines which has brought this success.

The result of our efforts during the past year more firmly convinces us that our relations with the Boston Typothetæ will ultimately establish conditions for our members employed in the book and job printing industry equal to those enjoyed in any locality in the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union.

The union has gained in membership and so has the typothetæ. It has not been necessary to have a meeting of the joint standing committee provided for to adjust any differences arising over any provisions of the agreement. What few minor matters have come up have been easily adjusted with the management of the concern. All typothetæ shops are meeting the wage, hour and other working conditions of the contract, and many firms not members of the typothetæ are doing likewise.

Interviews with the proprietors of the remaining non-union shops have been had during the year, with the result that few of them are now antagonistic to the union. Our organization work in the composing rooms of these concerns has made such progress as to permit several new chapels being formed, and to this action there has been no objection on the part of the management.

Negotiations are now on with several non-union concerns to unionize their composing rooms, and the indications are we will be successful in doing so.

Numerous meetings as well as personal interviews have been had with the remaining non-union printers, with the result that many new members have been secured for No. 13. Our plan of holding meetings of the non-union printers is to invite those employed in a certain shop to come to the union rooms some evening immediately after the day's work is finished. The time of these meetings is limited to not more than three-quarters of an hour, which we find is ample to explain our proposition thoroughly. The meetings are generally well attended and good results secured. Experience in this work has proved to me it is difficult to get non-union printers to attend meetings held at a time in the evening which would compel them to return to some central point in the city after they had finished their work for the day and gone home.

Many meetings with the officers of the local typothetæ have been held at which matters of mutual interest were thoroughly discussed, and plans formulated and carried out for the general betterment of conditions in the commercial printing industry.

The first increase provided for in the new book and job contract became effective the first of last October. All of the shops where we have members employed, but with whom no agreement exists, paid the increase. In only two or three instances was it necessary to take this matter up direct with the management, and in these we were successful in securing the increase for our members.

In previous reports on the Boston situation I outlined in detail the low wages paid to the hundreds of women compositors employed in many of the book and job composing rooms of Greater Boston, stating this condition had existed for many years. This agreement entered into with the typothetæ and other employing printers last April provides that when women are taken into the trade they are to come in only under the regular apprentice provisions of the contract. It is further provided that those now employed are to receive an increase in pay each year, which in the final outcome will establish for them the regular scale for journeymen. The observance to date of this most important provision is proving satisfactory, and the union will finally succeed in eliminating an undesirable condition it has been striving to do for years. The majority of the women are now members of No. 13, and many have been able to secure increases in their wages in excess of the amount provided for in the agreement.

Complying with instructions from President Scott, I visited Portland, Me.; Keene, N. H.; Providence and Worcester, Mass., and addressed organization meetings. These meetings were well attended, and good results obtained as the results of holding them. I also attended the convention of the New England Typographical Union, held in Worcester, Mass., last June, and addressed the delegates on the organization work being promoted in Greater Boston.

The apprentice committee of No. 13 has been actively engaged during the past year in furthering this important work in accordance with the provisions of the existing International Typographical Union apprentice laws. I have assisted the committee with its plans to provide proper training for the apprentices employed in this jurisdiction.

Albert W. Finlay was chairman of the joint scale committee of the Boston Typothetæ and Boston Typographical Union that negotiated the existing contract, which became effective April 1, 1916. At that time Mr. Finlay was president of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America. At present he is chairman of the board of supervisors of the Boston Typothetæ. Mr. Finlay has the following to say concerning the existing relations between the typothetæ and the typographical union:

Dear Mr. Brady—In reply to your inquiry as to the operation of the wage scale and arbitration agreement negotiated between Boston Typographical Union No. 13 and the Boston Typothetæ, covering the members of the typothetæ who conduct union shops, permit me to say:

I am glad to state the relations between the two organizations as a result of this agreement are entirely satisfactory. I think the best evidence of these relations is the fact that it has not been necessary to arbitrate a single difference for the very good reason that none has arisen.

Yours very truly,
A. W. Finlay.

The following is by Edward M. Martin, president of No. 13:

A year ago Boston Typographical Union closed a wage scale and arbitration agreement with the Boston Typothetæ. This document meant the resumption of friendly relations between the two factors in the book and job composing rooms of Greater Boston. The passing of the first year has proved the soundness of the International Typographical Union policies in the organization campaign conducted by Representative Brady. Industrial peace and co-operative action has been the result of the organization work, and wage and working conditions in the commercial branch of our trade have been steadily bettered.

Like other jurisdictions, Boston has suffered in its book and job industry because of business depression and high cost of materials. Employment has not been as permanent as normal times would insure. But the results of our organization campaign are gratifying.

The question of low-wage female help in our composing rooms was one of the principal conditions we hoped to eliminate through our new contract. That this has been gradually adjusting itself is evident to those conversant with the situation. The stopping of indiscriminate employment of female help in our composing rooms has resulted in those women already in the trade receiving increased compensation. Many of the women members of our union are enjoying advances in wages over the amount provided for this class of labor in our scale. The experience of the past year would seem to assure us that when the present contract expires equality of the sexes on a wage basis will be easy of accomplishment through negotiation with our employers.

Looking back over the past year, Boston Typographical Union No. 13 can be satisfied with the organization work conducted by Representative Brady under the direction of the executive council, and we shall continue to follow these policies to the end.

The monotype keyboard school operated jointly by No. 13 and the Lanston Monotype Company is proving entirely successful. It is located at 44 High street. None but members of the typographical union are permitted to enroll as students. The equipment consists of six keyboards and one caster, and the instruction is given in afternoon and evening classes. The instructor in charge is an expert. The school has been in operation since February, 1916. Thirty-seven members have graduated, and fifteen are now taking the course. The monotype company is greatly pleased with the success attending the school in its work of teaching competent hand compositors the operation of the monotype keyboard. Many graduates have secured positions.

Upon the request of President Martin I acted on the committee that negotiated an increase in the newspaper scale, which became effective November 15, 1916.

Since the first of the year I have been acting as chairman of the International Typographical Union Committee on Apprentices. Following the death of A. W. Thomson, who had been the chairman of the committee since its origin, the executive council appointed me to fill the position. A considerable portion of my time has been devoted to this most important work.

In conclusion I desire to extend my sincere thanks to President Scott and Secretary-Treasurer Hays for the valuable assistance given in promoting the work. The co-operation of President Martin and the other officers of No. 13 is fully appreciated.

Fraternally,

Boston, Mass. BERT G. BRADY.

REPRESENTATIVE BROWN.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—I herewith submit my report for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1917:

For the greater part of the past year, I have been stationed at New Orleans, in charge of the "lockout" situation in that city.

The membership will recall that at the Baltimore convention, the entire New Orleans proposition was turned over to the executive council with full power to act. Since that date, there has been but very little objection developed among the membership of No. 17 in so far as the lines that we have been working on, in an attempt to reclaim the daily newspapers of this city.

Much could be written here regarding the work accomplished during the past year and as to the present conditions in the different newspaper composing rooms, but, in my opinion, anything that bordered upon a detailed report at this time would be bound to do us more harm than good. There has been an improvement in the local situation and no doubt further gains will be made during the coming year. Those members who are, to any extent, familiar with our proposition in New Orleans fully realize that we have a fair-sized job on our hands and that it is going to take a little time to straighten matters out.

I am of the opinion that the vast majority of our local members feel that what is most needed at this time is the earnest co-operation of all the members of No. 17, the elimination of selfishness on their part and refraining from what might be termed "peanut politics."

The American, which was originally started by No. 17, at the inception of the "lockout" in this city, but which later was turned over to other parties and soon became an unfair office, experienced a "lockout" the last week in February. The sheriff forced the said "lockout" by stepping around to the plant and nailing up the doors. This action placed a "bunch of imported rats" on the streets, which certainly did not help our cause in this jurisdiction. This "outfit" was held intact in New Orleans by some of "our friends, the enemy," and used against us in the "ratting" of two small newspapers at Jackson, Miss.

On February 25 I received wire instructions from President Scott to get to Jackson, Miss., to assist in avoiding a threatened "lockout" in that city. The scale which was in force at that time in both newspapers and book and job offices expired on March 6. A new scale had been proposed by No. 363, which carried with it an increase of $1 per week.

I reached Jackson on February 26 and immediately took up the proposition with officers of our local organization. The publishers had absolutely refused to meet with a committee from No. 363 to discuss any objections they might have to the new proposed scale. Both of the publishers gave me an audience, but declined to talk about the new contract. They stated that they had decided to lock the union men out on March 6, and had already made arrangements to man their composing rooms.

Every effort possible was made to avoid the trouble. With the local officers of the union, I visited the governor and attorney-general of the state, the mayor and commissioners of the city, all of whom received us in a friendly manner and agreed to do everything possible to bring about a settlement, but failed.

On Sunday, March 4, the "rats" from the New Orleans American were "unloaded" at Jackson and the following day the lockout was in force with twelve journeymen and one apprentice involved. The foreman on the News and three other members of No. 363 remained at work and have been expelled.

We were successful in reaching an agreement with the book and job branch and a new contract was signed up for one year.

From reliable information received, I feel certain that the publishers are very much disappointed with the class of men that they are now compelled to do business with in their composing rooms and I look for a settlement of this trouble at an early date.

In conclusion, I desire to express my sincere thanks to President Scott and Secretary-Treasurer Hays for their valuable assistance in my work, to the officers and members of local unions in the cities I have visited for courtesies extended.

Fraternally,

Toledo, Ohio. CHARLES S. BROWN.

REPRESENTATIVE CAMPBELL.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—I herewith submit report of work performed by me as your representative during the past year.

In the latter part of May, 1916, Plymouth and Tarboro, N. C., were visited in an effort to organize locals, but was unable to secure the necessary signatures.

The Virginia State Typographical Association met in Roanoke the first Sunday in June, and I was present to render assistance in mapping out the campaign of work for the coming year. This meeting was very largely attended and was addressed by men prominent in the newspaper branch of the craft in this state, and also by State Senator Addison, chairman of the printing commission of the state legislature, who promised us his aid in legislation affecting our interest. The officers of this association have at all times been ready and willing to render every assistance in organization work, and it has been largely due to their efforts such good results have been obtained in Virginia.

On instructions from Secretary Hays, Johnson

City, Tenn., was then visited in an effort to organize a local. Fourteen signatures were secured to the petition, and a charter was placed in this city, and the local president has since been instrumental in having other locals chartered, a central body was being formed at last reports, and all unions there were in flourishing condition.

From Johnson City I returned to Roanoke to assist that local in securing contracts with the local employers. Conditions were found to be very bad; the label was being used in offices where no union men were employed; others were using it without paying the scale. With the assistance of the local officers several contracts were secured, and the labels were taken from offices not entitled to same. An effort was made to have conferences with the non-union offices in that city, but this was unsuccessful.

Returning to North Carolina, Newbern and Greenville were then visited in an effort to organize locals in those places. There were not enough men employed at that time in either, but since that time Newbern has another daily, and the prospects are bright for a local in that city.

While at Newbern word reached me that the secretary of Goldsboro-Kinston Union had left the city without a successor having been elected. I proceeded to that city and found this true. I went to Wilmington, secured the books from the secretary, and returned to Kinston, had a new secretary elected and started the union off in good shape.

Oxford and Henderson, N. C., were then visited in an effort to place locals, but enough men were not employed in either place to obtain a charter.

I received instructions from President Scott to assist Petersburg Union in scale negotiations. This union had been formed only six months. Contracts were secured with the two dailies in that jurisdiction, and both are carrying the union label at the head of their editorial columns.

Reidsville and Burlington, N. C., were then visited, and while there were enough men in the two cities to form a union, they objected to having one charter cover both towns.

Instructions were then received to assist Fredericksburg Union in straightening out its affairs and negotiating contracts. Contracts were secured with two job shops in this jurisdiction.

I then received word from Elizabeth City Union, stating the secretary had left the city, and was requested to come there and straighten out the affairs of the local. This matter was given attention as requested.

Hearing High Point, N. C., was ready to organize a local, I went to that city, but found only nine printers, several with cards, but since that time the number has been reduced.

At Salisbury the local was having difficulty maintaining union conditions in the office of a weekly. This matter was adjusted to the satisfaction of all parties concerned.

Upon request of Newport News Union, President Scott instructed me to represent the International Typographical Union at the celebration to be held in that city on Labor day under the auspices of the typographical union.

Under instructions from President Scott, Charlotte Union was then visited, in an effort to secure a contract with one of the papers of that city. The composing room of this paper is operated under union conditions to the extent that a man must have a card to work there. I had a conference with the president of the company, and he told me confidentially his reasons for not signing a contract at this time, but assured me that in the near future he would enter into a contract with the typographical union.

I then received word from Secretary Hays, stating the affairs of Goldsboro-Kinston Union were not in the proper shape, and was instructed to straighten them out. This town was visited, a new secretary elected, a meeting held with 100 per cent of the members present, and every one pledged cooperation in making it a success.

Rocky Mount-Wilson Union was then visited, the secretary having removed to Raleigh and no successor having been chosen. I went to Raleigh, secured the books of the organization and a financial settlement with the secretary, returned to Rocky Mount and had a new secretary elected.

Fayetteville, N. C., Florence and Anderson, S. C., Statesville and Hickory, N. C., were then visited in an effort to organize locals, and while there were not enough men in these cities to form locals, quite a few applications were received.

Instructions were then received from President Scott to assist Johnson City Union in scale negotiations. Upon arrival there I found the members working nine hours a day, one man receiving as low as $12 per week. Contracts were negotiated with every shop in the city, providing a minimum scale of $14 per week and the eight-hour day. This local had been organized only about five months.

Under instructions from the executive council, I took up organization work in West Virginia early in November. Martinsburg was first visited. There are about twelve printers employed in that city, but owing to opposition from the employers they would not organize. At Grafton ten printers are employed, receiving very small wages, and have agreed to form a union at some future date. Elkins, about six. At Fairmont there are about thirty printers employed, some having cards. A fairly good wage is paid. We were informed the proprietors of the two papers preferred to secure union men when in need of printers and operators, but would oppose the organization of a local. Those familiar with the conditions in this section of West Virginia will not wonder at this. Moundsville and Montgomery were visited without success. At Montgomery the proprietor would be willing to unionize his shop provided he could get the typographical label, but claims he could not comply with the regulations of the allied council. This city is near Charleston, and the shop would be unionized but for the reasons stated. At Parkersburg there are about twenty-five printers employed, and I have been handling the proposition there by correspondence, with the prospects of placing a union in that city in the near future. Hinton, W. Va., did not have enough printers to organize.

While in West Virginia I received instructions from President Scott to return to Norfolk and assist Secretary Fentress of the Virginia State Typographical Association in his efforts to have a union instructor appointed in the printing course to be installed in the high school in that city. Mr. Fentress and I appeared before the school board on two occasions, and we were assured that a union printer would secure the position of instructor when the course was installed, which will be at the beginning of the new term.

Instructions were then received from President Scott to proceed to Charleston, S. C., and assist in negotiations being conducted between that local and the Charleston American. After several conferences an agreement was reached satisfactory to both parties.

I visited Courtland, Va., the White Printing Company, of that city, desiring to obtain the use of the label. Norfolk secured jurisdiction over this city and secured a contract with that firm.

Charleston (S. C.) Union petitioned President Scott to permit me to return to that city after the Christmas holidays and assist in negotiating contracts with the job shops and the Charleston News and Courier, which had been run as an open shop for a number of years. Contracts were secured with the job shops. Conferences were held with the management of the News and Courier, and while they would not at this time sign the contract, they agreed to pay the scale of the union, employ none but union men, and took under consideration the question of a contract. Unstinted praise is due President Lide, of Charleston Union, and the members of the News and Courier chapel for the masterly manner in which they have handled the situation. What was once an open shop in that city is now being run strictly on a union basis, and it will be only a short time before a contract is forthcoming.

While in Charleston I received a request from the chairman of the scale committee of Norfolk Union to return to that city and assist in scale negotiations with the job offices in that city. After conference with the employers of that city an increase was secured for the handmen employed in this branch of the industry of $2.16 per week, and $2.56 for machine operators. At the time of the eight-hour strike Norfolk secured the shorter workday without any difficulty, but the proprietors declined to sign contracts with the union. With the inauguration of this scale nineteen-job offices in this jurisdiction signed the contracts.

Cumberland, Md., requested a representative at this time to assist in adjusting some differences in that city. These matters were settled with little difficulty.

Fredericksburg (Va.) Union was then visited to give assistance to the secretary in the conduct of his office.

Instructions were received to hurry to Columbia, S. C., and assist in scale negotiations. With the assistance of the local officers an agreement was reached in this city, providing an increase ranging from $1 to $3 per week for newspapers and book and job men.

At the request of Greensboro (N. C.) Union, I visited that city to adjust several matters between that local and the employers. These differences were readily adjusted.

While in Greensboro, Winston-Salem was also visited, in an effort to unionize the only non-union shop in that jurisdiction, and the matter was left in the hands of the local officers.

The president of Elizabeth City Union informed Secretary Hays the members of that local were taking no interest in the affairs of the union; the secretary having moved to another city. Upon visiting this city I found conditions unsatisfactory, and the charter was taken up and forwarded to headquarters, traveling cards being issued to all the members.

At the request of Savannah Union, President Scott instructed me to visit that local and assist in scale negotiations and organization work. Upon arrival in that city I found no contracts in existence, and quite a few of the members in a state of coma regarding union affairs. There were, however, several live wires there, including the president, secretary-treasurer and members of the executive committee. With the assistance of these members contracts were secured with several shops, including the largest office in the city, providing an increase in the hand scale of $4 per week and the machine scale $1.50 per week; overtime being increased from time and one-third to time and a half. The afternoon newspaper scale was increased $3 per week for both machine and hand men. The union is now conducting a live-wire label campaign, with the prospects of good results.

I received instructions to go to St. Augustine, Fla., where the management of the largest shop in the city had informed the local union he did not care to renew his contract, but desired to run as an open shop. After several conferences the contract was renewed, and an increase of $1 per week for all men employed was secured.

Instructions were received from President Scott to assist Jacksonville Union in scale negotiations. An increase was secured in the book and job branch of $1.50 per week for handmen and 50 cents per week for machine men. Owing to the depression in the newspaper business in that city at that time, it was agreed to continue the present scale until December.

Deland, Fla., was then visited, in an effort to form a local union in that town and Daytona, but owing to the fact quite a number of printers had left the city for the summer it was deemed advisable to postpone the organization until next fall.

At Orlando, Fla., a local was formed with fifteen charter members. This union will also have jurisdiction over the town of Kissemmee, fifteen miles distant. All the proprietors were interviewed after the union was formed, and the prospects are for contracts being obtained in the very near future.

Arcadia was then visited. This union has been formed only about a year. The men were working nine hours a day, and after several conferences the eight-hour day was secured with the nine-hour pay, and time and one-half for overtime.

St. Petersburg was then visited, looking to the organization of a local, but owing to the opposition of the proprietor of one of the dailies in that city, action on the proposition was postponed until a later date.

At Tampa, a non-union shop was visited in company with Secretary Atkinson, of that local, and the proprietor agreed to sign contracts with the union.

While in Jacksonville the Tristate Printers' League held their annual convention, which I attended. The conditions in the southeastern section of the jurisdiction were thoroughly discussed at this meeting, and much valuable information obtained concerning organization work. This organization is now well officered, and with the proper interest shown by the various locals, it will become a valuable asset of the International Typographical Union. The southeastern section affords a fertile field for organization work for the typographical union, and the past year has proved that valuable results can be obtained if the members of the locals in that section will only wake up to the opportunities presented for real constructive work. The conditions in the territory visited during the past year are not altogether ideal from a union standpoint. In fact, in some instances they are the opposite. It has been very forcibly demonstrated, however, that these conditions can be remedied very quickly if the membership of the locals in this section will wake up, get together and do some real hard work.

In the state of Florida there is an opportunity for the organization of several local unions. Numbers of the smaller towns in this state have one and two dailies, and in the winter season employ quite a number of printers. If these towns are organized and a living wage inaugurated and maintained it will relieve the surplus of printers in the larger cities of the state.

In conclusion, I desire to express my sincere thanks to the officers of the locals for their hearty co-operation and assistance in my work in their jurisdictions, as without this my efforts would have been in vain.

I also wish to thank the officers of the Tristate Printers' League and the Virginia State Typographical Association for their assistance. These organizations, although in their infancy, are accomplishing much good for the union printers in the south, and I trust their careers may be long and their progress unimpaired.

To President Scott and Secretary Hays I also extend my thanks and appreciation for the many courtesies extended to me. Our International officers are at all times alive to the interest of the craft in every section, and they have made a special effort to improve conditions in the south, and we of the south should show our appreciation of their efforts by giving them our hearty co-operation and assistance.

Trusting your deliberations at the Colorado Springs convention will be of a most pleasant nature and will result in a continuance of the real progress now being made by the International Typographical Union, I am,

Fraternally,

Norfolk, Va. D. I. CAMPBELL.

REPRESENTATIVE CORLESS.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—The past year has been exceptionally successful among the unions in that section of the International jurisdiction where I have had the honor to represent you. While our local unions have not been able to secure all they have asked for, in all jurisdictions where the unions have made a decided stand for better wage and working conditions, splendid gains have been made in the conditions under which our membership is employed. In every union where a demand has been made for increased wages we have been able to secure a substantial advance.

In every case where new contracts have been negotiated, we have succeeded in initiating apprenticeship agreements which offer reasonable protection to those who are to swell the ranks of our organization in the future. While the wage conditions of apprentices have been vastly improved by the conditions secured for them under the provisions of these contracts, a matter of infinitely greater importance is the guarantee of better opportunities for developing a higher degree of proficiency in craftsmanship. I view the progress thus made with a keen sense of pride, for it bespeaks a stronger and more effective organization of our craft as the years advance.

In a few instances the demand for an adequate protection for our apprentices has been met by the employer in a spirit of resentment, the question being raised by the employers and their representatives as to the right of the union to interfere with the regulation of apprenticeship. In one instance the opposition of employers to this feature of a proposed scale agreement threatened a break in the negotiations. However, a firm stand on the part of the representatives of the union brought the employers to a recognition of the importance and absolute fairness of our position in the matter.

In every instance where our right to negotiate a contract defining conditions under which apprentices may be employed has been questioned by the representatives of employers, I have assumed the position that this was one of the most vital questions at issue—that no matter what else might be eliminated from the proposed contract, real and practical protection to the apprentices must be guaranteed. The further we go along with the work of establishing adequate protection for our apprentices, the more apparent becomes the wisdom of the International Union in the decisive stand which it has taken on this important question.

It may be interesting to you to know that in every instance where objection has been raised to a rational system of protection for apprentices, investigation has shown that the conditions under which apprentices had been previously employed were simply infamous. Clearly the objectors had not the best interest of the boys at heart, nor did they have a clear conception of the importance of this question to the future welfare of the craft. It was manifestly then our duty to lend our aid in clearing their vision, and if this were impossible, to make a decisive stand for justice and fair play for the boys.

In one instance in the negotiation of a scale contract, the charge was made by an employer at the very beginning of our conference, that he had members of the union in his employ who were not worth the scale already in force in his office. I made inquiry as to where these men came from and how they had gained admission into the union and learned that they were natives of the town, and had learned their trade in the office where they were employed. I then informed the employer that if this incompetency of which he complained was the development of conditions which he had permitted or insisted upon in his own office, the remedy was entirely within his own control, if he would join with us in our effort to make such conditions impossible.

In this particular case, for years, boys had been taken into the office under a pretense of learning the trade, and were employed at almost every conceivable work about the establishment except the work of our craft. This condition of affairs was permitted to continue till about the last year of apprenticeship, when an effort was made to crowd four or five years' work into one year, resulting in a journeyman who was not competent for membership in the union, but who was dangerous to the welfare of the union if allowed to remain on the outside.

Hence, in jurisdictions where this condition prevailed, on the occasion of each negotiation for a new wage scale, we were confronted with the charge that we had members in our union who were not worth the scale. The work of the past year in Pennsylvania has accomplished much toward the overthrow of this unfairness toward the apprentices, and toward our organization. I look forward with pleasing anticipation to our future progress as a result of our recent achievements along this line.

In this report I shall not attempt to recite the experiences encountered in the negotiation of scale contracts in various local jurisdictions, but shall deal only with those incidents and experiences which I believe will be of value in a general way to our membership in the negotiations with the employers of our membership.

An interesting phase of our experiences during the past year is the peculiar attitude of some employers on the question of arbitration, and the reluctance of many of our local union membership to familiarize themselves with this method of adjusting disputes and scale contracts. A case in point is the experience in connection with the negotiation of a scale contract in Hazleton in October.

In the first conference which I attended the employers pleaded the high oost of paper as a reason for not granting an increase of $2 a week, requested by the union. At the conclusion of this conference they made clear their determination to grant no increase in wages at that time.

In lieu of the $2 per week increase asked for by the union I suggested as a compromise that the employers grant an increase of $1 for the first year, and an additional $1 at the beginning of the second year of a three-year contract. This the employers declined to do, insisting that the high cost of paper precluded the possibility of any increase in the wages of their employes.

In vain I pointed out that the high cost of living made it impossible for men to live under the low-wage conditions prevailing in that jurisdiction, and insisted that it was possible for the publishers to so adjust their business as to meet this very reasonable request on the part of the union. All argument at that time met with a flat refusal of any increase in wages. Later the employers declared their intention of appealing the matter to arbitration, and made a request that the union join with the employers in placing the matter in dispute in the hands of a board of arbitration for adjustment.

When this proposition came before the members for consideration they were not favorable to a reference of the case to arbitration, because some one had pointed out to them the possibility of losing the case before the board, with an alarming suggestion of an enormous bill of expense connected with the work of arbitrating the case.

Some of the members were disposed to let the scale go over for another year, rather than go to arbitration. Others felt that an increase in wages must be secured to the membership, either by arbitration or other means. For a time it looked as though the controversy might be settled by a postponement of the scale demands for another year.

Later I took the subject up with a representative of one of the daily newspapers and went thoroughly over the situation with him, and at the conclusion of our talk informed him that if required to we would go to arbitration. I volunteered as my opinion that the employers had no chance in the world to win out, citing the fact that so eminent an authority on arbitration as Judge George Gray, of Delaware, had volunteered the opinion, while acting on an arbitration board in Scranton, that the ability of an employer to meet a demand for increased wages was not a dominant or controlling factor upon which the board was to reach its conclusions as to the merits of a demand for increased compensation for labor. At that time he stated that the real issue was the ability of the wage-earner to maintain the American standard of living under his present compensation.

I then offered another compromise, which involved a two-year contract with $1 a week increase each year. He refused to consider a contract for a longer term than one year, but agreed to go along with an increase of $1 a week, preferring to thresh out the proposition for an additional increase in wages at the expiration of that term. He also agreed to take the matter up with other employers in the city and advise them to accept that proposition. The matter was later adjusted on that basis.

I have noted this fear of arbitration among the membership of many of our smaller local unions, due no doubt to lack of personal experience with this splendid method of adjusting industrial disputes. I am of the opinion that we could have secured the two-dollar increase demanded by Hazleton Union had arbitration been resorted to, but with the membership divided on the subject, it seemed a doubtful expedient.

Another interesting experience in the negotiation of scale contracts was that in connection with the adjustment of a scale in the Scranton jurisdiction in December. In this case the representatives of the employers and the local scale committee became deadlocked after several conferences, covering a period of nearly two months.

The union had ratified a scale prepared by the committee, among the provisions of which was a $4 a week increase in wages, a Saturday half-holiday, and a two-weeks' vacation with pay. The representatives of the employers seemed to view the Saturday half-holiday and the two-weeks' vacation with pay as a joke, and strongly protested their inability to meet any increase in wages because of the enormous increase in the cost of paper.

The scale committee was very much in earnest in the presentation of the demand for a forty-four-hour week in the form of the Saturday half-holiday, and the members of the committee were reluctant to forego the two-weeks' vacation with pay. Owing to the vast increase in the cost of living, however, they were willing to concede much, that the increase in wages might be secured.

After several conferences the employers receded from their position of no increase in compensation and offered an increase in wages of $2 a week. This offer was promptly rejected by the committee as inadequate, and the action of the committee was unanimously approved by the union. The scale committee was then instructed to proceed with the negotiation of the scale, with such modifications as in the judgment of the committee were proper.

At the next conference the employers refused to go further in the matter of increasing wages, and made a request for arbitration under the International arbitration agreement. The local officers immediately wired President Scott for the assistance of a representative, and I was assigned to the work.

On my arrival in Scranton I went over the situation with the scale committee, and suggested that we make further efforts to reach a compromise agreement, rather than go to arbitration. I pointed out the fact that the increase offered by the employers would give Scranton the highest job scale in the state, and it might be difficult to convince an arbitration board of the justice of a higher rate than that which had been rejected by the committee. I also called attention of the committee to the fact that but one concern in Scranton had an arbitration agreement; hence it might be possible for us to reach an amicable agreement more favorable than we could feel assured of under arbitration.

The committee then authorized me to negotiate a compromise along certain lines. On the following day I took the matter up with the publisher with whom we had the International agreement. I pointed out to that gentleman that his was the only arbitration contract we had in the city, and assured him that we were willing to arbitrate the scale contract with him, provided the other employers would agree to abide by the award.

I also called his attention to the fact that the scale committee was reluctant to go to arbitration with him, because the members of the committee felt that it was going to place him in the unenviable light of being the only employer who was opposing the union in its efforts to secure better wage conditions for our members. He expressed his appreciation of this sentiment on the part of the committee, but said that there seemed no other way of reaching an adjustment of the controversy.

I then suggested that a compromise might be effected on a basis of $2 a week increase on January 1, 1917, with an additional increase of $1 a week at the end of the second year on a three-year contract. This proposition seemed to meet his approval but he expressed a doubt of its acceptance by the local scale committee. I assured him that the committee was more than likely to fall in with this plan of adjustment in view of the fact that all other efforts had failed, and he agreed to go along with the proposition and to urge its acceptance by the other employers.

We then agreed on a date when the representatives of the employers and the scale committee should get together and complete the details of a settlement, but before I left he requested that a contract be entered into for a period of five years instead of three years. I declined to recommend this proposition for acceptance by the committee with the suggestion that it was my opinion that a five-year contract was inadvisable at this time, owing to the unsettled industrial conditions throughout the world.

Two days later, on the afternoon of the evening fixed for the conference which was to make the final settlement, I was again called to his office. He then stated that the employers were not entirely satisfied with the compromise agreed upon between him and I, and renewed the proposition for a five-year agreement. I again told him that I could not recommend to the union the acceptance of a five-year contract at this time, but would not attempt to influence the local committee against its acceptance if the matter was presented to the committee in the conference to be held that evening.

He expressed a doubt as to the possibility of getting anything across with the committee if I would not join with the employers in its recommendation, and then stated that he was authorized by the employers to offer an additional $1 a week increase at the beginning of the fifth year of a five-year contract.

This, of course, placed an altogether different aspect on the five-year contract proposition, and I told him that while I was still opposed to the long-term contract, if the employers wanted it enough to pay an additional $1 a week to get it I would assure them of my co-operation in the matter.

This proposition was communicated to the committee, and at a joint conference held that evening the compromise was accepted by both parties and the scale negotiations completed. Later the agreement consummated was ratified by the union by a unanimous vote. Although arbitration was not resorted to in this case, this was clearly a victory for the International arbitration agreement.

The position assumed in the Scranton case in refusing to permit employers who were not parties to the International arbitration agreement to participate in the arbitration, won the full monetary demands of the union. It also had the effect of securing another arbitration agreement with the management of another daily newspaper, affiliated with the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

The contract in Scranton brings the book and job scale to $23 a week, and a flat newspaper scale of $25 for day work and $28 for night work, with an additional increase of $2 a week all around before the expiration of the contract.

Immediately after the adjustment of the Scranton scale, I was instructed by President Scott to go to Altoona and assist in the adjustment of a scale contract in that jurisdiction. Altoona is one of a few local unions which have never fully recovered from the effects of the set-back received during the memorable eight-hour struggle, and I was not disappointed in my anticipation of much trouble in reaching a settlement of the trouble there.

On my arrival in Altoona I was surprised to learn that the organization had come forward with a demand for an increase in wages which was apparently calculated to offset the vicissitudes of all the years intervening from the inception of the organization to date. The scale presented was for a flat increase of $6 a week. The fertile brain which had conceived this radical, though essential increase in wages, had also realized the necessity of so binding the situation as to make impossible the negotiation of any reasonable compromise in the peaceful negotiation of a contract.

On taking the matter up with the local scale committee I learned that the amended scale had been adopted by the constitutional three-fourths majority, and had been submitted to and received the approval of the International president. This left the matter where by a strict interpretation of International law it would take a three-fourths vote to amend the scale.

In company with members of the scale committee I secured a conference with the representatives of the two large employing concerns, and made an effort to reach an agreement. The representative of the Times was satisfied to go along with a substantial increase in wages, though he declared his belief that the demands made by the union might be beyond the ability of his office to pay. He stated, however, that his office would be satisfied to meet any figure which their competitors were required to pay.

The manager of the Tribune stated that he was willing to grant an increase of $1.50 a week to all employes of that office, but declined emphatically to discuss any other feature of the proposed contract. I called the gentleman's attention to the fact that he was adopting an arbitratry attitude which all employers loudly condemned in the representatives of labor, and urged him to try to get into a conciliatory frame of mind and join with us in an effort to reach an amicable adjustment of the trouble.

He persisted in his refusal to enter into the consideration of the contract, and taking a rubber band from his pocket snapped it around the copy of the scale which had been presented to him at the opening of the conference, and threw it contemptuously upon the table. He seemed to assume that this was the end of the matter so far as he was concerned.

As a compromise the scale committee permitted me to offer a proposition for a $4 a week increase on day work, and $5 a week increase on night work, instead of the $6 a week increase as originally proposed by the union.

The manager of the Times promptly agreed to go along with this proposition, but the manager of the Tribune continued to refuse to discuss any compromise, and adhered to his original offer of $1.50 increase, supplementing his rejection of our proposition with the declaration that we had his ultimatum, and the assurance that it was final.

At a meeting of the union called the following day the scale committee reported the results of the conference, and at my suggestion recommended the union to reduce the scale to conform to the proposition acceptable to the Times management. This compromise would bring the scale to $22 and $24 a week instead of $18 and $19 a week respectively for day and night work.

This proposition came to a vote and failed of adoption, the vote being about equally divided. I then suggested that the union take a vote on the acceptance of the proposition of the manager of the Tribune. This proposition met with a like fate, the vote again being about evenly divided. I then suggested that a vote be taken on a proposition to order a strike for the enforcement of the scale as originally adopted. This proposition also failed of adoption.

After putting in a week in the city and resorting to every possible scheme to induce a settlement of the controversy, the union appeared to be firmly deadlocked. It was impossible to amend the contract to conform to either of the compromise offers received, and equally impossible to establish a strike to enforce the scale as adopted. I then wired President Scott that it was impossible to induce the union to do anything which was likely to assist in any manner in bringing about a settlement of the trouble, and that unless otherwise ordered I would leave Altoona on the following day and remain away until the organization was willing to decide on some one of the propositions before it.

In answer to my message President Scott advised me to use my own judgment in the matter, agreeing with me that it seemed useless to remain in Altoona if the union continued in its apparent unwillingness to agree upon any line of settlement. I then arranged with the scale committee to continue its negotiations with the employers and to advise me of any change in the situation.

After the February meeting I was informed that the union had amended the scale to conform with the compromise to which the manager of the Times had agreed. Later I returned to Altoona and took the matter up with that gentleman, and he stated that he would sign a contract provided the Tribune signed. This, of course, left us in the same position as before and I again left the scene of disturbance, returning to the city to attend the March meeting of the union.

At this meeting about half the members present insisted that the scale as originally adopted had been amended as a result of misrepresentations made by members of the union in debate on the floor, and on this ground claimed that the scale had been illegally amended. They insisted that the scale remain at the impossible figure as originally presented or be reduced to conform to the offer made by the Tribune management.

A request was made that the secretary again read that portion of the minutes of the February meeting referring to the action taken in amending the scale. The records showed that the scale had been reduced in accordance with the provisions of International law, and I informed the members of the union that regardless of what any member of the union may have said in his discussion of the proposition, the scale now provided for $22 for day work and $24 for night work and must remain at that figure till again legally amended.

Motions to again amend the scale and to order a strike for the enforcement of the scale failed of adoption. I then instructed the union that the scale must now be enforced as adopted or action must be taken for the withdrawal of the label from all offices which were not working under signed contracts with the union.

This proposition brought forth a bitter and heated discussion, in the progress of which I was charged with coming into the city and fomenting a strike. I informed the members that a strike was the last thing desired by an International representative of any experience; but that it was impossible to permit a continuance of the conditions then existing. The labels had been permitted to remain in the office for more than ten weeks after the expiration of the contract, and it was now up to the union to either enforce the contract or withdraw the labels.

At last the matter was brought to a close when I informed the members that if a definite time was not fixed at that meeting for the signing of contracts or the withdrawal of labels from the unsigned offices, I would take the initiative on the following day and withdraw the labels from the unsigned offices myself. A motion was then adopted instructing the officers of the union in conjunction with the scale committee to withdraw the labels from all offices not signed up at the end of three days.

The result of this action was that on the fourth day the last of the union offices were signed up, and a contract was made with one job shop not heretofore working under union conditions. I discuss this subject at considerable length, not for the purpose of parading the weakness of Altoona Union, for Altoona has had some pretty hard knocks in its experience during the past ten years, but rather with the purpose of bringing out more forcefully the power of the typographical union label as a promoter of the welfare of our craftsmen.

In the course of the discussion of the scale negotiations on the floor of Altoona Union, the declaration was made by a number of our members that the label was of no value to the employers in that city—that if the labels were withdrawn from these offices they could never be replaced therein.

The fact that the employers exhausted the last day of grace prior to the withdrawal of the labels, and then signed up, indicates that they placed a higher valuation on the labels than did our own membership. This condition of affairs is unfortunately true in many of our smaller jurisdictions. It is food for serious thought on the part of our membership, and in every local jurisdiction efforts should be put forth to enhance the value of the label rather than to belittle its actual effectiveness.

During the past year I have worked earnestly to break the lockout which has been in force on the newspapers published in Pottsville for the past several years. In my report last year I referred to the evident purpose of J. H. Zerbey, publisher of the Pottsville Republican, to spread his non-union propaganda throughout the state of Pennsylvania. While he was president of the Pennsylvania State Editorial Association, I am informed that he made repeated efforts to arouse opposition among the members of that association against the International Typographical Union.

Fortunately for our organization we have many friends in the state editorial association, some of whom have been under contract with our union for many years; hence it was difficult for Mr. Zerbey to induce a general movement against the International Typographical Union. His influences in this direction have been strong, however, in many towns in this state where our organization has not secured a strong foothold. The first positive evidence of his movements to disorganize union towns came to us at a time when we were trying to initiate a scale contract in the jurisdiction of Shamokin Union. This evidence was conclusive, and I immediately reported the matter to President Scott, who instructed me to proceed with the preparation and execution of plans which would prevent the further spread of the pernicious influences of that gentleman.

The first week in May, 1916, we begun an active campaign to unionize the Pottsville Republican, published by Mr. Zerbey. While there are two other non-union daily newspapers in Pottsville, we concluded to direct our efforts against the Republican alone, convinced that if this paper is unionized the other two will be glad to sign up.

From statements made by the publishers of both these other papers I am convinced that Mr. Zerbey is the key to the situation, as both have told me that if Mr. Zerbey would sign up they would be willing to go along with the proposition of unionizing their plants. While all these publishers declare that there is no bond or forfeit holding them to their agreement with Mr. Zerbey to not enter into a contract with the union, they persist in their declaration that they can not sign a contract with us till Mr. Zerbey grants them permission to do so.

Last May, at the beginning of this movement to unionize the Pottsville Republican, Mr. Zerbey was quite arrogant and declared his ability to wear out the patience of the union representatives, and win more laurels for himself and the non-union combination which he represents. One of his first acts when our activities against his newspaper began was to send out a circular to all agents telling them to sit tight, that the opposition would soon play out and business would go along as usual.

Eleven months of persistent and determined effort on the part of the general labor committee to unionize the Pottsville Republican has withered his arrogance, and his confidence has given way to a pessimism, which is as painful to himself as it is amusing to the people of Pottsville, who have long suffered from the bullying tactics of the Pottsville Republican.

Having lived for many years in a community where union men have dared to say and do those things which was clearly within their rights to say and to do, I was astounded at the timidity of representatives of organized labor in Pottsville, when we began a real opposition to the newspaper published by this enemy of trade unionism.

The campaign against the Republican began by the distribution throughout the city of thousands of little cards announcing that the paper was unfair to organized labor. This was followed by covering the billboards of the city and vicinity with full-sheet posters bearing the same announcement. Immediately after the appearance of the posters, I was warned that I had better go slow, as the publisher of the Republican had employed Pinkerton detectives to trail me with the purpose of securing evidence on which to base a prosecution against me for my alleged attempt to destroy his business.

I assured these people that the gentleman was entirely in error in his conclusions as to our mission in Pottsville; that we had neither intention nor desire to ruin Mr. Zerbey's business; but that we were simply going to try and keep him so busy attending to his own business in Pottsville as to make it impracticable for him to continue his efforts to ruin our business throughout the state of Pennsylvania.

These warnings came regularly to me for a couple of weeks and as often as two and three times a day. At last a warning came to me from a party whom I believed to be in close touch with the Republican management, and I informed him that since the memorable Homestead strike, Pinkerton detectives had no terror for the old guard in the labor movement in this state.

These attempts at intimidation were followed by threats of arrest, the intimation being that they had secured the necessary data upon which to institute proceedings. The turn was called on this bluff and the campaign went on with greater vigor on the part of the local committee, the members beginning to have more confidence.

In April, 1916, Mr. Zerbey, owing to the rapidly increasing price of news print, called a meeting of all publishers in that section of the state, urging upon them the necessity of increasing the price of subscriptions. But before the date on which the increase was to go into effect, the fight on the Republican had become so strong that the publisher of that paper dared not go along with his own proposition. With him it had become a case of maintaining his circulation at any price, and instead of increasing the price to his subscribers, he was forced to send out vast numbers of unpaid papers, and to expend a vast sum of money in the employment of agents to make a canvass in an effort to maintain his circulation at the old price.

While the management of the paper was busily engaged in the work of following up "stops" the general committee began a movement to enlist the aid of advertisers, with the result that a considerable loss in advertising patronage followed.

In September we learned that Senator Charles A. Snyder, republican candidate for auditor-general of Pennsylvania, had been using non-label literature in his campaign, and the Pottsville Central Labor Union issued a circular letter addressed to one thousand labor unions throughout the state, protesting against the use of non-union literature by Senator Snyder, and requesting that the officers of these unions write letters to the republican leaders of the state, and to Senator Charles Snyder in particular, requesting them to discontinue the use of non-union literature in the campaign, and asking that they use their influences to aid in unionizing the Pottsville Republican.

The responses to the requests embodied in this circular were so numerous and so persistent that they aroused the wrath of the senator, and he forthwith proceeded to send a constable with letters addressed to the president and secretary of the central labor union, in which he demanded an immediate retraction of the facts set forth in the circular letter, intimating that prosecution would follow their failure to make a retraction. The central labor union officials resented this mild attempt at intimidation on the part of the senator and informed him that inasmuch as they were in possession of non-union literature sent out from his office, they had no retraction to make.

kill county republican committee met a committee of union representatives and promised that thereafter no advertising or printing of any character, controlled by the republican party, would be given to any of the non-union Pottsville newspapers. He also stated to the committee that if we could influence the sale of one of these newspapers at a figure mentioned by him, he would purchase the paper and guarantee that it would then be published under union conditions and bear the union label.

Having confidence that we would be able to secure an option on one of these papers at the price fixed by this gentleman, and being convinced that he would carry out his part of the agreement, a quietus was put on any further political activity in that campaign. A few weeks later I induced the owner of one of these newspapers to agree to dispose of his plant at the price fixed by our political friend, and arranged a conference between the two. They got together but that was all.

I never was able to learn just what transpired to call off the deal. But assume that the election having passed into history, the county chairman felt no immediate need of a display of friendship toward organized labor. Nothing came of this scheme except that it aroused the interests of the democratic leaders in the county, and they began to talk of the necessity of securing control of a daily paper in that county.

Interest on the part of the democratic leaders seemed keen, but it was clear that the matter of finance was a serious obstacle to their plans. In order to further the success of this proposition to secure a newspaper in Pottsville, I went to Harrisburg in February and took the matter up with the chairman of the national democratic committee and with officials of the state democratic committee.

The subject of financing a daily newspaper in Pottsville was thoroughly discussed, and it was the opinion of some of the state leaders that two-thirds of the capital necessary could be secured through the influences of the state democratic committee. Returning to Pottsville I placed this information before some of the leading democrats of the county, but to date nothing has been accomplished which indicates an early consummation of our plans.

Along with our efforts to promote an active campaign against the Pottsville Republican, I have been particularly anxious to see a new daily newspaper started in that jurisdiction, because of the opportunity it would afford for a demonstration of the powers of organized labor. To the credit of the union organizations of Pottsville and vicinity, it must be said that in the general labor committee to unionize the Pottsville Republican we have the strongest committee it has ever been my pleasure to be associated with in the labor movement.

For the first time in my experience we have all the railway brotherhoods actively affiliated with the general labor movement for the promotion of the general welfare of the wage-earners. On this committee we have 125 members, representative of all organized crafts. The efforts put forth by the members of this committee have been of the most determined and untiring character. Night after night the members of this committee have gone out, making a house-to-house canvass in the distribution of literature. While the results have not yet been conclusive, we are confident of success. Already there is an acknowledgment on the part of members of the employers' non-union combination that we are certain of success.

As a matter of fact, we must win this fight because of the moral effect defeat would have upon the smaller local unions in this state. The evil influences of the promoter of this non-union combine have been felt in every section of this state. The greatest opposition which we encounter in organization work is the much vaunted success of our opponents in the Pottsville jurisdiction.

I am pleased to note, however, that one result of our efforts during the past year has been to curb the boastfulness of the promoter of this non-union combination. He no longer points with pride to the success of his opposition to our union, but is now frequently quoted as saying that he is not opposed to organized labor. That is a decided victory for us, and I am confident that the day is not far distant when he will again be willing to negotiate a contract with our union.

After a postponement of more than a year in his plans, Mr. Zerbey a few weeks ago announced his purpose of increasing the subscription rates for the Pottsville Republican. Preliminary to this action on his part I was approached by the manager of one of our union daily newspapers in an adjacent city, who urged that the union should offer no opposition to Mr. Zerbey's plans for increasing his revenues, because of injury which might be wrought to the interests of union newspapers in that vicinity, the management of which contemplated similar action.

I informed him that our mission in Pottsville was to unionize the Pottsville Republican and that there would be no cessation in our efforts till that work was accomplished. I also told him that it was not clear to me how our opposition to this notoriously unfair publication could in any manner affect union newspapers in that section of the state. Two days after the subscription rate on the Republican had been raised we distributed the following circular throughout the territory:

FACTS ABOUT TWO-CENT NEWSPAPERS.

The non-union Pottsville Republican is not justified in its demand for increased earnings for its publisher.

Low wages on Pottsville newspapers are a substantial offset to the much heralded increase in the cost of paper.

Read and be convinced.

The purpose of this circular is to call the attention of the public to the unqualified nerve of a combination of newspaper publishers, headed by the publisher of the Pottsville Republican, to mulct the public for an increase of 100 per cent in the price of newspapers.

While there is ample reason for an increase in subscription rates for newspapers where an adequate and living wage is paid in compensation for the labor which produces them, there is no excuse, in fact, for an increase in the price of Pottsville newspapers.

We say, unqualifiedly, that this is a clean-cut hold-up. We say, unreservedly, that the wages paid to the printers who produce the Pottsville newspapers do not justify or necessitate an increase in subscription rates.

Low wages and inferior workmanship on the newspapers of Pottsville, during the past seven years, have given the people of this city newspapers which were not worth a cent. Hence, instead of being forced to pay an increased price for these newspapers, the publishers actually owe the public a credit balance of many thousands of dollars of overcharge for cheap and inferior production.

It is unquestionably true that there has been an enormously large increase in the cost of material entering into newspaper production, just as there has been in the cost of all commodities of life.

Digitized by Google

But the saving to the publishers of Pottsville newspapers, as a result of the low wages paid to their employes during the past seven years is an abundant offset to the increased cost of production.

It is more than a year since the publisher of the non-union Pottsville Republican began a movement to force an increase in the price of newspapers. At that time many publishers, who had not violated their contracts with paper mills, were securing paper for 2¼ cents a pound, as low a price as had prevailed for many years.

During the past year substantial increases in wages have been accorded the printers in the union offices in Pottsville, Shenandoah, Mahanoy City, Ashland, Coaldale, Lansford and elsewhere in this county. Hence, there would be valid reason for increase in the price of circulation and other products of these printing offices.

This argument does not hold good in the non-union newspaper offices of Pottsville, however.

The price boosting on the newspapers published in Pottsville is clearly a proposition to line the pockets of these publishers with unjust gains.

If the people of this city and vicinity are to pay two cents for a local newspaper, they have a right to demand that the men who produce these papers shall be employed under union conditions and receive union wages.

The effect of this circular was splendid, and, contrary to the expressed hopes of the management of the Republican, it clearly demonstrated that we dared attack their efforts to increase circulation rates, and the attack was most effective. The circular also demonstrated that we could attack these efforts to increase earning on the part of a non-union publication without serious injury to the interests of union newspapers.

For several years repeated efforts have been made to establish a local union in Lebanon. This city is situated midway between Harrisburg and Reading, and about sixty printers are employed there. I have visited that city on numerous occasions and attempted to interest the printers in an organization. Harrisburg and Reading at different times have had special committees at work, joining their efforts to unionize the town.

All these efforts were without results, and it was then decided to hold the November convention of the Eastern District Union in Lebanon, and thus bring the forces of all the delegates in eastern Pennsylvania to bear upon the printers of that city in an effort to organize them.

A few days prior to the date for holding the convention I went to Lebanon and called on a number of the printers and sent out invitations to all the printers whom I could locate addresses for in the city.

We had a good attendance of local printers at the convention and they became so enthusiastic that ten of their number were induced to sign an application for a charter. These ten suggested that we hold a meeting later in the week, and they would guarantee to have a majority of the printers of the city present, when it would be possible to secure a more representative charter list.

My report to the February convention of the district union completes the story of our latest effort to organize Lebanon printers. That portion of the report referring to the Lebanon situation follows:

When the Lebanon convention adjourned in November I felt confident that we were going to establish a local union in that city. The Lebanon printers were loud in their declaration of the great necessity for a union in that city, that the welfare of the printers might be protected. This enthusiasm indicated not only the organization of a union, but betokened an organization that would put older organizations to the test in maintaining their reputations as leaders in this work. With the charter application in my pocket, and with each of the ten signers pledged to bring from one to five additional recruits to the meeting to be held later in the week, I felt a confidence that at last Lebanon was going to rank among the cities blessed by the benign influences of the International Typographical Union.

But, to put it briefly, the day after the convention the employers got their printers together and offered them an increase in wages of such magnificent proportions as was absolutely irresistible to the thrifty natures of our Lebanon craftsmen. That 50 cents a week increase in wages must have looked as big as a wagon wheel to Lebanon printers, for they grabbed it off, clearly satisfied that their efforts to organize a union had been a huge success, and therefore they pied the union form and threw the pi in the hellbox.

Some day, perhaps, Lebanon will awaken to the necessity for a union to protect the interests of our craftsmen in that city, but there seems no immediate prospect of accomplishing anything in the way of organization in that city.

The results being accomplished through the medium of the district organizations in this state are all that could be wished for. Of the sixteen unions in eastern Pennsylvania, ten have secured increases in wages during the past year ranging from $1 to $4 a week; three are working under unexpired contracts, and three are not sufficiently strong to have confidence in their ability to compel the payment of adequate wages to our craftsmen employed in their jurisdictions.

The more recently organized Western Pennsylvania Typographical Conference is doing a splendid work in arousing the interests of our craftsmen in the western part of the state, to the importance of maintaining greater activities in our efforts to promote the welfare of the wage-earners in the printing crafts.

Five years ago, when the Eastern Pennsylvania District Union was organized, there were but four unions in that district union with a minimum job scale of more than $15 a week. There were but three unions with a minimum job scale higher than $18 a week. Soon after the organization of the district union we started the slogan, "eighteen dollars minimum," for job printers, and have since kept that slogan at work.

As a result of this plan we now have but three unions in the district with a job scale as low as $15 a week. Nine unions have a job scale of $18 or more. Five unions have minimum job scales contracted, ranging from $20 to $25 a week. The minimum scale for operators and newspaper work ranges from $1 to $3 above the job rate.

I desire to express my great appreciation of the splendid support accorded me by the officers and members of the unions throughout Pennsylvania, and for the uniform courtesy extended to me. Their loyalty and determination has on many occasions been a material factor in hastening to a successful conclusion problems which have confronted us.

In conclusion, I desire to thank the International officers and executive council for the splendid support and timely assistance rendered on many occasions. Their advice has at all times been an invaluable aid to a successful carrying on of the work entrusted to me.

Fraternally submitted,

Scranton, Pa. WILLIAM CORLESS.

REPRESENTATIVE DALLAS.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—The following report is respectfully submitted as a summary of the work in New England during the year. The district includes Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, is thickly populated and has fifty-two typographical unions. Five of these unions are in Maine, five in New Hampshire, three in Vermont, twenty-one in Massachusetts, five in Rhode Island and thirteen in Connecticut. Most of the unions have been in existence for many years, and many of the printing offices were established from fifty to one hundred and fifty years ago. The newer unions have shown the right spirit and the progress has been creditable.

MAINE.

Auburn-Lewiston—These two cities have a population of about forty-five thousand and support two daily papers and eleven commercial shops. The membership of the union has averaged sixteen, twenty members being the maximum up to 1916. Former Secretary Campbell reported last fall that there was a marked falling off in interest and activity and talked of giving up the charter and having Lewiston taken into the Portland jurisdiction. I arranged to get there in January and started a campaign. The Daily Journal, the largest office there, employed women operators who had repeatedly declined to join the union, and the men, believing these operators were the key to the situation, also kept out of the union. With the assistance of one of the members of the union was able to arrange a conference with these operators, and in view of the wages they had been getting was surprised to find them young, intelligent and spirited. Explained the policies of the union and the possibilities of results if they organized, advised them how to meet developments in their office and left them to think matters over a few days. The management, as I had predicted, immediately got busy and made an offer of more money to keep them from organizing. They had been getting from $7.50 to $11 per week and the first offer was a minimum of $13. This was rejected, as was an offer of $14. The final offer was $15, which the girls accepted with the distinct understanding that it would not interfere with them becoming members of the union. After getting this increase they displayed their sound judgment by joining the union in a body, and immediately put new life into the organization, which made further progress possible. No one meeting these new members can understand how they submitted to former conditions for so many years. With their influence nearly all the other printers in the Journal and some in other offices were induced to take cards, and the campaign to date has added thirty-one new members. When the first organization circular was mailed the following letter was sent to the business manager of the Journal:

DEAR MR. STAPLES—Herewith find copy of circular mailed today to the non-union printers of this city. The campaign will be along conservative and fair-play lines, and is not intended to antagonize any employers. The relations between the union and employers in other cities are evidences of mutual respect. For information regarding the policies of the union and the business value of these policies you are referred by permission to any publisher conducting a union office in New England. Will call in a day or two and will appreciate an opportunity to explain more fully the attitude of the union.

Had several conferences with Mr. Staples and others interested in the Journal and found them reasonable, but wofully misinformed about our methods. They have been courteous and fair in the negotiations and in no way interfered with the organization work after the first day or two. As the office was entirely non-union and conditions in the other offices about the same the uncertainty as to what might happen naturally disturbed all concerned. The management is now frank in approving the methods of the work, and with time to adjust itself will undoubtedly welcome the advantages of a contract.

The Morning Sun, which employed most of the old membership, was also given some attention, and is now entirely union.

The conditions in the commercial shops of Lewiston and Auburn are deplorable. Every proprietor complains of the others cutting prices and thus preventing fair returns. All express a willingness to meet and organize. I called this situation to the attention of prominent typothetæ members in Boston, but previous experiences in Maine have not been successful. Will make an attempt to get them together later, and try to impress on them the importance of standardizing labor cost as the first step toward putting the industry on a business basis.

Much credit is due to the members who for years, under most discouraging conditions, retained their cards and did what they could to make the union stronger. President Morrissey and Recording Secretary Lugrin, both of the old school, have served faithfully and been examples and inspiration for the younger members. Secretary Shaw, now back in the harness again after a short vacation from the secretaryship, is a marvel. Every organization in the two cities looks him up when there is any real work to be done. Despite the demands thus made on his time and energy he is always ready to apply his ability and untiring zeal to the affairs of the union. No. 532 owes much to Bert Shaw. The enthusiasm of the new members is sure to bring results, as they are unusually active and desirable. Morel Calligan and John Campbell were especially helpful in the organization work. The coming year is sure to be the biggest and best for the printers of Auburn and Lewiston.

Augusta—President Thompson and Secretary Coombs are still the only members who appear to take any interest in the union. During the year a new scale was negotiated, and while it is not a satisfactory one the fact that they made any progress is a tribute to their courage and refusal to be disheartened by lack of support. In January, with President Thompson, met Messrs. Flint and Burleigh, publishers of the Kennebec Journal, and proprietors of the largest commercial shop in the city, to explain the advantages of the union label. They were figuring on a weekly paper which required the label and were to communicate with me later. Have had no word since, but will see them when I again visit Augusta. There are possibilities in this city, but they will never be realized until there is a different spirit shown by the membership.

Bangor—This city is handicapped by conditions in the Daily Commercial. This is a combination plant and the printers work long hours for low wages. The operators are women and work hard and faithfully. They have been repeatedly urged to join the union and thus secure better conditions, but either lack the courage or hope for a substantial remembrance when the will of the proprietor is read. As said proprietor is in robust health the remembrance will probably not be available during the present struggle with high prices. An active campaign is now being started and it is hoped that the example set by Lewiston will help these girls to see the light. Ex-President O'Leary, ex-Secretary Jordan, Charles Johnson and "Tack" Connors have always been willing to help in any movement to better conditions, and the new secretary, Elmer E. Roberts, looks like a serious, level-headed young man who is sure to make his mark in union matters or other activities.

Portland—The International Allied Printing Trades Association met in this city in July and one of the features was a mass meeting at which the international officers of all affiliated unions made addresses. Extreme heat and a strike of the street railway employes made a large attendance impossible, but those who were present learned of the aims and accomplishments of the different unions. The entertainment provided by the local union was much appreciated and the beauties of the city made a splendid impression on the visitors. The contract with the newspapers demonstrated its worth when it eliminated the menace of non-union operators on the day sides of the morning papers. A $1 increase also became effective on January 1. As is usual in cities where open-shop conditions have always prevailed, the value of the closed-shop contract was not at first apparent to all the members. Developments during the past few months must have impressed even the more dense. There is much to be done on the book and job shops in Portland. A committee started out to do something a year ago, but have not heard the extent of its success. Miss Gilliard is still writing her encouraging and newsy letters in THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL, and they are read with interest throughout the district.

Waterville—This little union of twenty-two members is always active in the interests of the trade and has the respect of employers which always comes when affairs are handled with good courage and judgment. In January they secured a one-year contract increasing the day scale $1.50 and the night scale 50 cents. Working conditions were improved and the negotiations were entirely without rancor or hair-splitting. President Barton and Secretary Fitch have the support of the membership at all times and the progress and harmonious co-operation shown there is appreciated by all who have relations with the union.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Berlin—This union has ten members and although far away from other typographical unions is active and progressive and shows the right spirit.

Concord—There were several interesting developments in the campaign to unionize the Rumford Printing Company and the Evans Printing Company in this city. Secretary Ellis, who had been active in the campaign, was discharged by the Rumford management and the impression given that it was because of his activity. Immediately had an interview with the directors and they emphatically denied having any such intention. Said they were willing to have their printers join the union. I sent a circular to the non-members in this plant setting forth the position of the directors on the Ellis discharge and also their statement that no members would be discriminated against. Shortly after this incident the firm issued a circular calling attention to "the brotherly sympathy and substantial help" they always extended to their printers and enclosed a ballot allowing the printers to choose between the following: "(1) An annual outing of one day, all expense to be borne by the firm. (2) A two-weeks' vacation for each employe without loss of pay. (3) The reduction of the working week from fifty-five hours to fifty-three." You can see that they were willing to give anything except the seven hours per week which they were taking from the printers. It was a foregone conclusion that in a shop only one-sixth organized the vacation proposition would be favored in the vote. The circular contained many clauses which have become familiar in similar campaigns, for example: "The campaign of the union was instigated by Boston competitors who want to put the firm out of business and take your employment away." "The union offered to furnish help to take your jobs." "We give you steady employment now, but in union offices the printers work one day and are laid off the next." The printers employed in the Rumford, however, while lacking the courage to join the union, freely expressed the belief that the vacations, etc., would never have been given but for the campaign of the union. This development surprised the management, and was a lesson which will not have to be repeated. At a conference held later the manager said they were considering our proposition, but had recently contracted for some extensive work requiring larger quarters and the installation of improved equipment and new departments. This meant a reorganization of the entire plant, and he requested that the question of the forty-eight-hour week and a union contract be taken up later. A few new members have been secured and conferences will soon be resumed with the management.

The Evans Printing Company, which was also a fifty-five-hour shop, recently secured a member of the union as a partner. This member has repeatedly shown good business judgment and is convinced of the advantage of a union shop. The other owners have been antagonistic, and it will take time for the new man to show them the soundness of his views. Since his advent the working week has been reduced from fifty-five to forty-nine hours, and it seems reasonable to expect this office to be entirely satisfactory within the next year.

With President Brussa, Secretary McCauley and ex-Secretary Phaneup at the helm, this obstinate situation is in good hands. Few small unions have had such discouragements, and the progress made is greatly to the credit of the members of Concord Union.

Keene—Nearly two years ago the A. E. Martell Company, manifold printers, moved from Boston to a fine new plant in Keene and began on a fifty-five-hour basis. It had been a non-union concern in Boston but had observed the forty-eight-hour week. Believing this experiment, if successful, might lead other concerns to try it, I determined to visit Keene and attempt to interest the printers in the union. After the usual obstacles had been overcome a union of sixteen members was organized. Had induced Organizer Williams of the bookbinders and Organizer Dart of the pressmen to co-operate, and they also formed unions of their crafts the same evening. Our union elected the following officers: President, C. Leslie Kent; vice-president, Aubrey C. MacWha; recording secretary, William H. Blackhurst; secretary-treasurer, John J. Hudson; sergeant-at-arms, John W. Gallagher. President Kent is now in the naval reserve and Secretary Blackhurst died about a month ago. The foreman in the Martell plant tried to discourage the new members, but when it was seen that they were convinced of the value of organization a concession of two and a half hours per week was granted. This action impressed the printers and they are now showing a splendid interest in the affairs of their new organization. The officers are earnest and faithful and Secretary Hudson is young, enthusiastic and level-headed, and has the respect and confidence of all who meet him. The progress in Keene will necessarily be slow, but the spirit which brings success is there. The Daily Sentinel is on a fifty-four-hour basis, but the publisher, Mr. Woodward, has assured me that he is to reduce the hours within a few weeks. He is a courteous and fair gentleman, but had known little about the policies of unions, and frankly approves of the way the Keene situation was handled. I feel sure he will eventually become an admirer and friend of Keene Typographical Union, and with his great influence in that city such friendship will be very welcome and helpful.

Manchester—This is a city of about 80,000 population and has about seventy members in the union. There are two evening papers and one morning paper. The members have been engaged during the year on plans to entertain the 1917 convention of the New England Typographical Union, but found time to negotiate a new scale. The scale in Manchester has for years been too low for a city of such size, and while the committee which negotiated the recent increase undoubtedly did all it could there is still much room for improvement there.

Portsmouth—Made one visit to Portsmouth and met President Clarke and Secretary Jellison. This little union has made good headway in the past few years and is now preparing a new scale.

VERMONT.

Barre—President Maker and Secretary Wiley still maintain the standards of former years and have an organization which is a credit to the membership. Relations with the employers are friendly and conditions satisfactory.

Burlington—This city has a population of about 22,000 and is the largest city in the state. The union has thirty-two members, most of whom are employed on the two daily papers. While conditions there are fairly good, there have been evidences of lessening enthusiasm which should be given serious attention. A few years ago this union was active in all matters affecting the organization, and thus provided encouragement for the other Vermont unions. It is hoped there will be a revival of this activity in the near future.

Rutland—Unionism is not popular in this section of the state, which is near the great marble quarries and other large non-union industries. Under the conditions the union has done well to hold its membership so well, but there is opportunity for progress if the right spirit could be aroused. Secretary Rainville has done what he could alone for years, and now a few of the younger members show indications of ability and willingness which should be encouraged. Correspondent Stearns, of the Daily News chapel, looks especially promising and should be given an active part in the affairs of No. 326.

During the winter I prepared an amendment to the laws relating to the state printing, which sadly need revision. Was able to interest proprietors in Barre, Montpelier, St. Albans, Burlington, Bellows Falls and Brattleboro in my amendment, and many of the newspapers agreed to support it. Was unable to give it personal attention because of work elsewhere, and tried to get the typographical unions in the state to attend to some of the details. Barre Union showed interest and President Maker did all he could. Was unable to get any response from Burlington Union, and Rutland was in no position to help. While the experience this year was not encouraging, another attempt will be made and it is hoped that the importance of this legislation will impress the officers and members of No. 580. They owe it to themselves, their employers and the union to show they have some influence in their community and the ability to use it to advantage.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Boston—Representative Brady is still engaged in organization work and his progress is beneficial to all unions in the district. President Martin, formerly New England representative of the International Typographical Union, while busy with the affairs of No. 13, is at all times interested in the welfare of the smaller unions of the district and cheerfully co-operates in all attempts to build them up. Secretary Battis and Assistant Secretary Stephenson are frequently called upon to advise and assist the officers of the other New England unions and their responses are helpful and encouraging to their less-experienced brother officials.

Brockton—With President Hallissey and Secretary Hancock I interviewed F. H. Tolman, of the Tolman Print. This office is splendidly equipped and does the highest grades of commercial color work. It is the largest job shop in that section of the state, and while most of the printers are members of the union there has never been any contract. I had met Mr. Tolman before, and the interview mentioned was to get him acquainted with the local officers, as I felt sure these young men would make a good impression and establish friendly relations which would eventually bring good results. As Mr. Tolman is interested in the advantages of a union shop, and Messrs. Hallissey and Hancock are sincere and capable, the prospects are bright.

The Evening Journal, a new daily paper, was started last November in Plymouth, Mass., which is in the jurisdiction of Brockton, as a strictly union shop at the Brockton scale of $24 for day work and $27 for night work. With the greatly increased cost of paper and other materials the expenses of this little sheet have been extraordinarily heavy, and as Plymouth (famous as the landing place of the Pilgrims) is a summer resort, the advertising field is small during the winter months.

During the year the union went to local arbitration on a new newspaper scale and secured an increase of $1.50 per week, making the present scale a flat rate of $24 for all members.

Fall River—Went to Fall River to take up a dispute as to whether job scale expired or called for an increase. Found there has been a misunderstanding between the report of the scale committee and the contracts sent out. After conferences, in which President Turner and Secretary

Clarke participated, was able to secure an adjustment calling for a $1 increase. The adjustment was unanimously accepted by the union, and was for a term of one year.

Fitchburg—President Tiefenthal and Secretary Farnsworth, besides devoting much time to local conditions, have visited towns in their vicinity for organization purposes. In Gardner, with the president, I interviewed Manager Murdock, of the Means Printing Company, of Gardner. This is a good-sized plant and the progress at the conference opened the way for results which now seem near at hand. Secretary Farnsworth has secured members in Leominster and has others on the way. In December was called to adjust a dispute on the Daily News. Business was dull and the manager wanted to lay off two members, but wished to retain one who had been there but a short time in preference to others who had been there longer. Was able to convince the management that this would lead to decreased efficiency and harmony and he agreed to observe priority. In February received a hurry call to the office of the Finnish Socialistic Publishing Company over an interpretation of the scale as applying to Finnish work. The management claimed they had not agreed to the scale as adopted by the union, although the scale committee had reported them as accepting it. The dispute was over the standard of competency and the scale for foremen. After discussion a settlement was suggested which opened the way for the union to reach an adjustment satisfactory to all concerned. The incident furnished a lesson as to the importance of scale committees having a clear understanding with the employers before reporting to the union. On the Daily Sentinel the scale committee was unable to get anything definite, as it was claimed that it was impossible to get the directors together. Although the scale was to go into effect on January 1 it was not being paid on the Sentinel when I arrived there late in March. With Secretary Farnsworth I saw the manager and insisted upon definite action. As a result of this interview the scale was paid the next pay day, and in view of the weakness of our organization in this office the union decided to waive the back pay. The union officials fully realize the importance of getting this office into line with a contract, and will not neglect any opportunities.

Greenfield—Despite the discouraging outlook, Secretary Russell keeps his little union going along, adding a member now and then. During the year there was a reduction of hours in the Morey plant, and if grit and persistency will avail No. 687 will yet have the gratification of unionizing this office.

Haverhill—President Young still has his little organization intact, and the spirit shown there is wonderful in view of the setbacks the membership has had. The Daily Gazette, the only newspaper in this city of over 50,000 population, is entirely non-union and the attitude of the printers there is very much to their discredit. Although they have openly used the union scale to raise their wages and secure the forty-eight-hour week, they have neither courage nor decency enough to join the organization. President Young has made many attempts to induce them to affiliate themselves, and while he has little regard for them now he appreciates the advantages of strengthening his union numerically. A smoke talk held in October showed the membership to be enthusiastic and full of a spirit which is sure to show results.

Holyoke—Advancement on the job end of the trade in this city has been greatly handicapped by two large non-union plants, the Baker-Vawter Company and the National Blank Book Company, both of which work fifty-one hours and pay as little as possible. Neither of these shops do any local work, securing their orders from all over the United States. Despite these handicaps the union was able to negotiate new scales during the year which provide for substantial increases for both newspaper and job members.

Lawrence—The big event during the year in Lawrence was the celebration of their twenty-eighth anniversary. Former representative "Bob" Maloney was active in the preparations and the occasion was graced by the presence of Governor McCall, Mayor Hurley and other notables from all over the state, who by their attendance and in their addresses paid tribute to the union. In January the increase provided for in the contract became effective, bringing the scale to $20.

Lowell—Negotiations with the printing department of the Shaw Stocking Company were showing some results when the manager, with whom we had been conferring, resigned to enter the advertising business. This necessitated practically a new start, as it was necessary to go over the matter again with his successor. President Donoghue has the negotiations in hand and will take advantage of any opportunities which present themselves.

Lynn—This efficient union had another year of substantial advancement and now has a job scale of $21 for hand compositors and $24 for operators. The contract expires July 1, 1918, and is another victory for the Shoe City and its hustlers.

Marlboro—No. 281 was successful during the year in reclaiming the Esterbrook shop, which has been outside the fold for some years. The spirit shown in this little union should inspire larger unions where there is so much to be done.

New Bedford—Was called here to arrange for a meeting between the publishers and scale committee. The committee, while inexperienced, desired to handle the negotiations without assistance, and after arranging for the conference I left for other work. While the experience was undoubtedly educating to the committee the results were not entirely satisfactory, as their report to the union was a recommendation to extend the old scale six months. This the union accepted, evidently through a misunderstanding, as an attempt was made to reopen the scale two months later. This was in violation of their agreement to extend the old scale until May 1, and the publisher took the matter up with President Scott, who decided the scale must continue unchanged until the date of expiration, which was May 1. There was also an illegal section in their job scale which was later eliminated. The publishers voluntarily granted increases about the first of March of $1 on the day side and $2 on the night side.

Newburyport—Called here to take a label case. Found there had been a change of ownership in the only label shop in the city and the union refused to grant the label to the new owner. After a meeting of the union and conference with all the ones concerned was able to effect an adjustment which put the label into the Herald Job Print. The local officials have started to interest other employers in the advantages of the label. Secretary Foster is still faithfully looking after the affairs of the union and President Leiber uses his influence to good advantage.

North Adams—Called here to take up difference with the Excelsior Printing Company regarding a non-union operator. Made an arrangement satisfactory to the union. Later the manager refused to carry out this agreement and the label was taken away from his office. The attitude of this manager finally made it necessary to call the members out of his shop, and after a few hours matters were adjusted.

Northampton—As is the general rule in college towns there is little to encourage unionism. This city is the home of Smith college, where about a thousand girls are taught the details of so-called "higher education." No. 711 has held its own for some years and will eventually make advances.

Pittsfield—The year 1916 was in all ways the greatest year in the history of the typographical union there. In July they negotiated their first standard scale, securing substantial increases and incidentally their first real recognition. The committee handling this scale is in many ways responsible for the surprising and important developments which came later. The Daily News had been almost all unionized, but attempts to get the operators and some of the hand compositors on the Daily Eagle had been futile. In September I arrived there and on advice of the local officers interviewed the publishers once more. With the assistance of Foreman Tanner was able to get the non-union man on the News and as this made that paper eligible for the label I advised the manager to adopt it. This he agreed to do. Then took up the matter with the management of the Eagle and found them also receptive. I obligated the non-union printers, had the publisher sign the contracts, and on September 30 both papers carried the label at the head of their editorial columns. The negotiations were entirely cordial and the result naturally very pleasing and important to the members of No. 109. The Daily Eagle is the oldest and most prosperous and influential daily in western Massachusetts and the News is fast making a name for itself. Both have good buildings and new and complete equipments of all modern appliances. In my report last year I said the way the scale committee, Messrs. Duffy, Reagan, Fitzgerald, Drennan and Bills, had conducted the conferences with the publishers was sure to bring results in the future, and this prediction has proved true to a greater extent than any one believed possible. While there were other circumstances which helped in unionizing these offices, none of them could have brought about the result but for the creditable work of the members mentioned above. One fair-sized job shop is but partly union, and the manager is sure to sign up soon.

Framingham—In my report of last year I mentioned an agreement with the Dennison Manufacturing Company, in which appeared an increase of wages and an understanding regarding the reduction of hours. Over 2,500 men and women are employed by this company, and they had been working fifty-one hours. Mr. Dennison, when our agreement was negotiated, stated that it would be inadvisable to put the printers on shorter hours than the other departments were working, but agreed to pay overtime rates for the extra three hours until such time as he could arrange to put the whole factory on forty-eight hours. This readjustment he said would take some time, but would become effective not later than January 15, 1917. The first increase provided for had been given a week before the agreement called for it, and the forty-eight-hour week was also granted a week ahead of schedule, thus evidencing the fairness and integrity which has characterized all our dealings with Mr. Dennison. Employing Manager Reilly has expressed himself as pleased at the promptness with which his calls for printers have been answered and the grade of workmen furnished. One of the foremen is alleged to have made statements which would suggest that he is not entirely in sympathy with the agreement between Mr. Dennison and the union. This attitude, while having a disquieting effect upon some of our members, has not as yet assumed serious proportions, but will be taken up with Mr. Dennison soon if necessary. The union now has about forty-five members and their social and union activities have placed No. 495 on a firm foundation.

Springfield—In last report stated negotiations were on here over newspaper scale. The final adjustment was a five-year contract providing for an increase of $1.50 for the night shift and $1 for the day shift during the first three years and an additional dollar then for both shifts. These negotiations were unusually trying and the committee, President Dunham, Secretary Hardwick and Lawrence Divily showed creditable ability.

A very important victory for the policy of intelligent and persistent conciliation was achieved when the Phelps Publishing Company office was unionized. This firm published or printed the Northwest Farmstead, 100,000 per week; Orange Judd Farmer, 125,000; American Agriculturist, 125,000; Southern Farming, 75,000; New England Homestead, 55,000; Current Events, 600,000, and has the equipment necessary to handle such work. Very little progress had been made in this office since the eight-hour strike, but the organization committee started with the right spirit. After the usual incidents and discouragements twenty-two of the Phelps printers became members of No. 216. The proofroom was also unionized. Messrs. Cooke, Connell, Dare and Worth constituted an unusually willing and effective committee, and President Dunham and Secretary Hardwick displayed their regular efficiency.

Taunton—Spent some days here revising their constitution, their scale and their contracts. Took up several other local matters and interviewed the manager of the printing department of the Weir Stove Company. Much room for improvement in Taunton conditions, but the two largest non-union offices get their business from other centers and are thus indifferent to local influences. William Carr, one of their most active and valuable members, died in November, after being threatened with blindness. Mr. Carr was secretary at the time of his death. President Fitzgerald is still bearing the brunt of the work, as he has done for years.

Waltham—Talk of taking Newton from Waltham and putting it under the jurisdiction of Boston has seemingly stirred No. 259 up, and in view of the fact that it was impossible to get even a response to a letter from there it is hoped that the awakening may be permanent. Unless they show some signs of life it might be advisable to include Waltham itself in the Boston jurisdiction.

Worcester—The convention of the New England Typographical Union was held here with headquarters in the million-dollar Bancroft hotel. The arrangements were elaborate and dignified and the sessions were well attended. As usual many of the Worcester members who had been indifferent during the preparations worked hard during the convention to identify themselves with the affair, which was in all ways a credit to the ones responsible for its details. Worcester is the headquarters for a very active and powerful anti-union organization, and this is undoubtedly responsible for conditions in the job printing offices there. The convention made a lasting impression on the public officials and business interests and is sure to add to the influence of the union. Addresses were made by Mayor Wright, the late A. W. Thomson and Dr. Frederick W. Hamilton, national apprentice director of the typothetæ. The New England Union is a well-directed and remarkably effective organization, and the annual conventions have done a great deal to educate New England members. Secretary Sullivan is still indefatigable in the interests of No. 165 and his example is developing other good workers.

RHODE ISLAND.

Newport—Conditions here about the same as last year, with the News still non-union. T. Edward Ritchie, who contributed good work when the West Warwick Union was started, has become secretary of No. 295 and immediately started to increase the activities there. Newport is an important naval station and a popular summer resort, and Secretary Ritchie will take advantage of the season to advance the interests of the union.

Pawtucket—Called here in December to assist scale committee on newspaper scale. Was able to negotiate a one-year contract granting an increase of $2 per week. President Stevenson and Secretary Anderson are splendid types of earnest officials and have a fine organization which has implicit confidence in them.

Providence—The way No. 33 has "come out of the depths" during the past few years is one of the most gratifying developments in the district. Including in its ranks so many members of experience and ability, the absence of a real spirit of progress was lamentable. The courage and efforts of the wise and sincere members have recently shown results which are sure to greatly increase the influence of the union in many profitable ways. President John F. Murphy has given service which justifies all the predictions of his supporters. His administration has been marked by initiative and policies which show a high degree of executive and organizing ability. His negotiations with the Master Printers' Association have earned the respect of that organization for himself and the union. While progress is necessarily slow because of antagonism created previous to his incumbency, it is reasonably certain that he will eventually secure an agreement or understanding which will mean the end of controversies and unprofitable quarrels between the job members and their employers. In ex-President O'Connor and John J. Murphy he has two co-workers who have demonstrated their worth through many years of activity in the interest of No. 33. Both have the respect and confidence of the members and heartily approve the policies of President Murphy and are ready at all times to do all they can for the success of these policies. While the situation in Providence is better today than ever before, there are even greater things to come, and it is to be hoped that when these betterments come the membership will not forget the good work which made them possible.

West Warwick—During the year this little union negotiated its first scale and secured a $1 increase without any friction. It has shown a steady and healthy growth and its annual banquets have become one of the functions of the Pawtuxet valley.

Woonsocket—No. 245 negotiated a new scale during the year and I was called to adjust a difference over one of the members employed in Uxbridge. With the assistance of President Fairbanks and Secretary Gahan was able to secure an adjustment satisfactory to the union, to the employer and the member affected. Woonsocket has thirty members and its affairs are handled exceptionally well.

CONNECTICUT.

Bridgeport—The Post-Telegram, the Standard, the Connecticut Press and a large number of private printing plants situated in this city serve to make up a series of obstacles which would have discouraged most unions. No. 252, however, despite these great handicaps, has steadily increased in membership and strength. The Telegram is the only morning paper, and the Post, owned by the same company, a prosperous evening paper. The spirit of the union is clearly shown by their incessant efforts and anxiety to get these papers unionized. They have tried all the old-time methods and are naturally impatient while the conciliatory plan is making its sure but slow progress. As in most chronic cases the treatment seems to be ineffectual and there is little in the way of visible results to justify its continuance. Only the confidence engendered by success in other similar cases makes the outlook with these papers hopeful. The policy has never been a complete failure, and it will not be one in Bridgeport. This can not be said of any plan which includes precipitate action along antagonistic lines, and Bridgeport has had some experience with such methods. The scale progress here shows another phase of the activity of the members, and with President Bennetto, Secretary Cooper, Messrs. Tarring, Coates, Cherry, Brennan and others constantly on the firing line it is safe to assume that Bridgeport Union will continue to advance. Tarring's letters are bright and intelligent.

Danbury—President Andrews, who is active in the affairs of every public movement in his city, finds time to keep his union up to the mark. The manufacture of hats is the principal industry here and the hatters' union is active and strong. President Andrews is one of the active coterie of trade unionists who have made the city nearly 100 per cent union in all ways.

Derby—This is the smallest union in New England, although there is a chance to grow if there was some one with energy enough to get busy. Until at least one live member deposits his card there the situation will be about as it now is.

Hartford—Called here in February to adjust a dispute over the payment of fines imposed for not parading on Labor day. Found three members employed on the Morning Courant, which had no contract, had not paid the fines. Interviewed them and got a tentative agreement to comply with the laws of the union, which was afterward repudiated. Took the matter up with the management so as to make the position of the union clear. The three members concerned claimed there had been discrimination in exempting some members from payment of the fine. A satisfactory adjustment was not reached until President Scott visited Hartford and suggested a settlement which included the payment of the fines, which were remitted at the next meeting of the union. One development was the decision that the fines had not been levied in accordance with the local laws. While there may have been some justification for the attitude of all concerned in this affair, compliance with laws provided for such matters would have prevented the feeling engendered, and the case presented another example of the folly of allowing disputes to continue for weeks and months with an inevitable increase of rancor. A difference regarding the scale for proofreaders on the Courant was also adjusted by President Scott, and a verbal agreement to recognize the scale and laws of the union was made. The Daily Times asked for and was granted an arbitration contract with the union, being the first Hartford paper to do so. This paper employs over fifty of our members, including President Flynn and Secretary Miles, and these officials are largely responsible for the new agreement because of the good judgment they have shown in their relations with the management. Miles has been a good secretary for some years, and Flynn has shown ability which well merited his unanimous re-election for another term.

Meriden—The new job scale negotiated early in the year showed what can be done when the negotiations are carefully planned and in good hands. It is better than many much larger unions have been able to get. Secretary Maydwell, an active member of the union for about forty years, again demonstrated his value to No. 314. It was unnecessary, however, for him to add to his laurels, for he has always had the confidence and respect of all who know him.

Middletown—This young union has done all that was expected of it by its friends, and disappointed its opponents by finishing its first year of existence with flying colors. With little real progress to encourage them the officers and members have shown a most commendable courage. In President Trott and Secretary Peterson two unusually capable officials have been developed. The current year is almost certain to show the results which always come from such well-directed efforts.

New Britain—There is opportunity for organization work in some of the job offices here. It will not be easy work, but the sooner a determined start is made the better. The annual banquet was graced by the mayor and other prominent men, and was up to the high mark set in 1916.

New Haven—Some months ago a newspaper scale committee was appointed consisting of the following members: M. F. Shea, F. L. Neebe and G. H. Sanders, of the Register; J. S. Donahue and J. J. Martin, of the Times-Leader; C. W. Warner and B. J. Lynch, of the Union; T. Roche and I. Jacobs, of the Journal-Courier. President C. N. Ballard and Secretary E. R. Ottarson also were included in the committee. After carefully preparing a proposition, which was approved by the union, the committee presented it to the publishers and asked for a conference. The reply was a letter setting forth the inability of the papers to consider anything in the way of increased operating expenses, setting forth the cost of paper, etc. Was able to arrange a conference which served as an opportunity for the spokesman of the publishers to reiterate the statements in their letter. As the president was due in New York, it was decided to have him attend a conference later. On arrival President Scott met with the committee and with them had two conferences with the publishers, which finally resulted in getting an increase of $1 and making another dollar increase effective May 1, 1919, provided paper reaches a price of 2.25 cents per pound. The first dollar brings the day scale to $24 for day work and $27 for night work. The contract is for three years. While the scale in New Haven will stand comparison with other cities of the same size, there are some practices which should and must eventually be eliminated. There are three evening papers, the Times-Leader, the Union and the Register, and one morning paper, the Journal-Courier. Not one of them has the circulation which would be expected in a city of over 150,000 population. Advertising conditions and rates sadly need revision, and it seems almost certain that these conditions must change before the present scale expires. The experiences of the committee were most exasperating, and their conduct all through the negotiations was in marked contrast with that of some others present at the conferences. While the outcome of the negotiations was not entirely satisfactory, the union showed its appreciation of the efforts of the committee by a unanimous vote.

Conditions in the commercial shops are to receive attention through an organization campaign recently started. Messrs. Frank W. Smith, William F. Dahlquist, Frank Wiggin and Albert Chapman have been appointed and have mapped out a line of action which is sure to get gratifying and important results. They fully realize the work ahead of them and have started with a most commendable thoroughness. The New Haven employers were particularly bitter and aggressive during the eight-hour strike. President Ballard and Secretary Ottarson, who have made splendid records for energy and good judgment, will serve with the organization committee.

New London—Had a communication some months ago asking me to assist in organization work. Replied by outlining a plan to get the campaign started, and presume this is being attended to. This union has members of experience and good judgment, but little progress can be made until their relations are more harmonious.

Norwalk—Norwich—Stamford—The former has a population of 27,000 and the union has sixteen members. Norwich has a population of 30,000 and a membership of thirty-one. Stamford has a population of 30,000 and a membership of twenty. Have had no occasion to visit these cities during the year. There are chances for organization work in all three, and when the local unions show an inclination to get busy they may be sure of help.

Waterbury—This is a city of about 90,000 people and the union has sixty-seven members, all three daily papers working under contracts. President Gorham continues to give the serious attention which has characterized his long service, and Secretary Lynch has recovered from his long illness and resumed his duties. Frank Wiggin, who served as secretary while Mr. Lynch was sick, showed the ability and willingness which made him so valuable to No. 329 in other capacities. He is now located in New Haven, where he was immediately recruited to serve on their organization committee.

IN GENERAL.

Business conditions throughout the district have been good during the year, and the local unions have made progress with scales and other betterments. The last report of the employment bureau of the New England Typographical Union showed a total membership of 4,646, of whom but thirty-eight were unemployed.

Negotiations over scales and conferences about disputes have been uniformly successful and without serious friction. The Hartford difference had all the elements of another New Orleans, but the level-headed local officials held tight until President Scott arrived and settled it. It was a lesson in modern unionism which might be profitably learned in other cities. The New Haven scale negotiations also developed some tense moments when serious trouble seemed unavoidable. President Scott is entitled to credit for securing an increase and averting what looked so much like a strike. When it is realized that the settlement secured added about $8,500 to the wages of the members there during the first two years and provided for about as much more during the third year of the contract, whereas a strike would in all probability have meant the expenditure of many thousands and the loss of wages amounting to as much more, the real value of the policy of conciliation to our membership should be beyond dispute.

There is still much indifference apparent in many localities, and it is strange that such conditions exist. The trade surely requires a little above ordinary education and intelligence, and with these advantages it should follow that our members would appreciate their opportunities. There are hundreds of members in New England who have not attended a meeting for years. That the work still goes on is a tribute to the workers, but this is in part accounted for by the fact that these workers are the more intelligent element in the organization. When the others realize the returns sure to come from their investment of a few hours per month at meetings many seemingly insurmountable obstacles to progress will be readily overcome.

With fifty-two unions in the district only about an average of twenty have been able to find a member capable of getting a monthly letter into THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL. The value of these letters has been recited many times.

Whatever success has attended my efforts is largely the result of the courtesy and promptness of our International officials, who have advised and co-operated at all times. The local officials and members have shown a loyalty and devotion to the work which they may be sure is sincerely appreciated and will not be soon forgotten.

Fraternally yours,

Boston, Mass. JOSEPH J. DALLAS.

REPRESENTATIVE DRURY.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Herewith I am submitting my report for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1917:

The continued uncertainty of organization work, as a result of the European war, and a severe attack of illness, prevented me from devoting as much time to the work in this jurisdiction during the past year as was intended. It is pleasing to note, however, that some increases have been secured, but the gains are a small percentage when compared with the high cost of living problem.

MONTREAL, P. Q.

In my last report I referred to the Montreal newspaper scale negotiations, then in progress, and the uncertainty of the pending arbitration award. After ten sessions the arbitrators unanimously granted an increase of two dollars per week to the ad, floor and make-up men on the evening papers, making the scale a flat one of $23 for operators and handmen alike. The award also provided for the same increase to the men working on the night shift of the evening papers, but as the old scale read $25 for operators and $22 for handmen, there is still a difference of one dollar per week in favor of the operators on this shift. It is hoped that this difference will be wiped out next time, and that a flat scale will then prevail in both the morning and evening fields.

The morning newspaper publishers, although not protected by an arbitration clause in the old contract, insisted that the award given by the arbitrators in the case of the night shift of the evening papers be extended to them, instead of the scale presented, and after some difference of opinion had been exchanged between the publishers and the union it was finally agreed that the award be allowed to cover the morning end of the situation for the time being, seeing that the contract was for a period of one year only.

The members of Jacques-Cartier Union No. 145 also secured an increase of $2 per week, making their scale read $24 all round for day work and $27 for night work.

QUEBEC, P. Q.

The situation in Quebec city has not changed much since my last report. The L'Action Catholique, where it was necessary last year to withdraw the men, owing to a violation of contract, is going on in the same way, and the boys and girls are still working there. Besides this establishment there is the plant of Dussault, which is non-union, and across the river, in Levis, there are quite a few non-unionists.

Received instructions from President Scott on May 12 to visit Quebec to try to straighten out a grievance complained of by President Paradis, of No. 302. The casterman in L'Evenement gave notice of his intention of leaving, and, while completing the two-weeks' notice, consented to instruct a keyboard operator as to the working of the casters, with a view of the operator securing the position with an increase of $2, the contract providing $20 per week for operators and $22 for castermen. During the period that the operator was under instructions he received the operator's scale, but as soon as the casterman had left town he wanted the extra two dollars. This the management refused to concede for at least three months. The outcome of the dispute was that the operator returned to the keyboard and a practical monotype machinist was placed in charge of the casters. A few other minor matters were adjusted to the satisfaction of all concerned.

ST. JOHN, N. B.

Conditions in St. John, N. B., have not improved greatly during the year, neither has there been any material increase or decrease in the membership. No. 85 still holds around the eighty mark. It is to be hoped that some day the dream of the secretary-treasurer will be realized, and the union will have passed the century mark in membership. The newspaper end of the union is well organized, but the same is not true with regard to the jobmen. There are a couple of union job shops, but the rest are open shops, employing boys and girls and a few stray men. The job end is No. 85's weak point, and an effort will be made to better conditions in the near future.

Owing to the increased cost of living, and the fact that $16 per week was not sufficient for a man to live on nowadays, the members of No. 85, on the suggestion of Secretary-Treasurer Campbell, appointed a committee in October to petition the bosses relative to an increase of pay, to take effect January 1, 1917. As a result of a couple of conferences with the bosses the membership was made happier by an increase of $3 in the scale, said increase running over a period of three years, from January 1, 1917, to December 31, 1919. The following is the new scale of prices:

Day work	$18.00	$18.00	$19.00
Night work	20.00	20.00	21.00
Book and Job Men—
Day work	18.00	18.00	19.00
Foremen, Machinists and Operators—
Day work	20.00	22.00	22.00
Night work	23.00	25.00	25.00

Overtime and work on holidays time and one-half. Sundays double time. Apprentices in third year shall receive two-fifths of the floormen's scale, in the fourth year one-half, and in the fifth year two-thirds.

Since the formation of the allied trades council in St. John it is reported that nothing has been done along the line of signing up any more shops or pushing the label; in fact, the number of signed shops is less now than when contracts were made under the banner of No. 85 alone. In short, ground has been lost. It is to be hoped that during the coming year more interest will be shown in the matter than in the past, and that under the joint banner of the council some real live work along label lines will be accomplished.

FREDERICTON, N. B.

In Fredericton, N. B., the majority of the members are paid over the scale, it is reported, and there has been no idleness whatever. As a result of the local government printing being transferred to the Daily Mail office, where only one cardholder was employed, three applications for membership have been presented and two union operators have secured positions. It is thought the transfer of the government printing from the office of the Daily Gleaner will not lessen by more than one or two the number of union men employed there, so that the net result will be an increase of membership and two union offices in the city.

HALIFAX, N. S.

Recent news from Halifax, N. S., states that trade is very good at present. The papers are getting plenty of advertising and the book and job offices seem to be having their usual run of work. Halifax, it is stated, does not know what hard times is. If it was not for the fact of the men being away, and the high cost of living, Halifax would not know there was a great war on. No. 130 is in better shape now than it has been for some time. There are eighty members on the books, and at the close of the year, I am informed, every one of them was paid up to date, a thing that was never known of before in the history of the local. There are seven union offices working under label contracts. While most of them are small offices, the largest one in town is among them. Quite a few non-unionists have joined the local from the newspaper offices during the past year. No. 130 is the only local in Nova Scotia, and the master printers are complaining of the trouble they experience in securing work in competition with such places as Truro, and other surrounding towns of like nature, where cheap labor is employed.

ST. JOHNS, N. F.

Lack of interest accounts for the slow progress made by No. 703 since affiliating with the International. I understand that it is a hard proposition to secure a quorum at the meetings and little or no progress has been accomplished for some time back. It is said, also, that most of the members are still working a nine-hour day. It is the intention of your representative to investigate this matter and make an effort to remedy this state of affairs.

The booklet, "Somewhere in France," proved a good advertising medium in this part of the country. Your representative mailed copies to the publishers in the provinces of Quebec, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, with the request that notice be given same. Many of the publishers complied with the request, and there is no doubt but that the publicity given President Scott's booklet will work to the advantage of the organization.

In conclusion, I desire to thank the members of the executive council for the many courtesies shown me, and to the members of the locals in the towns visited for the able assistance extended to me.

Fraternally yours,

Montreal, Can. JAMES DRURY.

REPRESENTATIVE GADD.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Herewith I submit my report for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1917:

Complying with a message from President Scott on October 2, I proceeded to Coffeyville, Kan., to assist in scale negotiations. The local union desired a four-year contract with increases of $1 the first year, $1 the second year and two years without increase, submitted as a compromise proposition. The employers desired the old scale renewed for one year, claiming that the high cost of print paper prevented any increase of wages in the composing room at that time. The union decided to ask for strike sanction to enforce its demands, which arrived on October 5. They failed by one vote to receive the required three-fourths vote of six-months' members necessary to withdraw the men. The old scale was signed the following morning for one year.

My next assignment was at Amarillo, Texas, on October 21, where I found the union and employers deadlocked over a new scale of prices. The membership at Amarillo had not asked for an increase in eight years and no contract had been signed with the employers for two years. They were receiving a wage in excess of their last scale of prices through bargaining individually for their services with the offices. The proprietors were desirous of letting things continue as they were, rather than consent to an increase of the minimum scale. After numerous conferences the employers agreed to pay the amounts then drawn by the men as a minimum scale for one year, which the union declined to accept. Feeling that the membership would accept a reasonable compromise proposition rather than withdraw the men, I made another appeal to the employers for a better proposition, which resulted in an offer of a three-year contract with varied increases, ranging from 40 cents to $2 over the minimum scale the first year, a 75-cent increase all around the second year, third year without increase, in figures as follows:

	Old Scale	First Year	Second Year	Third Year
Day job and ad men	$18 00	$19 50	$20 25	$20 25
Day machinist-operators	24 00	25 00	25 75	25 75
Day foremen	24 10	25 00	25 75	25 75
Night job and ad men	21 00	23 00	23 75	23 75
Night machinist-operators	27 60	28 00	28 75	28 75
Foremen (newspapers)	27 40	28 50	29 25	29 25
Assistant foremen (newspapers)	26 00	26 00	26 75	26 75

On October 31 President Scott wired me to investigate the discrimination among employes of the Oklahoma Publishing Company, in the mailing department, where the "baby" organization in the printing industry of Oklahoma City was struggling along in an endeavor to weather the first year without attempt to antagonize their employers in any way. The matter was satisfactorily adjusted to all parties concerned and No. 30 continued to grow in membership throughout the year.

On November 6 I visited Muskogee, where a controversy had arisen over the back pay of an apprentice, who had not received the advance due him between the fourth and fifth year apprentice scale, as provided in the scale of prices. The executive committee and the apprentice claimed back pay for five and one-half weeks, amounting to $22, but they were not positive as to dates, while the office claimed that the time did not exceed two weeks, if any. A compromise was agreed to whereby the young man was paid $15.

Proceeding to Tulsa I found a question of priority rights to daylight situations had developed in the merging of the plants of the Sand Springs Times and the Tulsa Democrat. At a meeting of the union a few days previous the aggrieved parties to a decision of the union had decided to appeal the matter to the executive council. The efficiency of the two forces was being impaired by the controversy and through the president of the union an agreement was entered into with the management which, in substance, provided that the forces remain unchanged, pending the decision of the appeal.

Early in January I made a trip to the northern part of the state with a view of placing several unions in "fruitful fields" that had been reported to headquarters, taking in Blackwell, Tonkawa, Bonca City and Newkirk, Okla., and Arkansas City, Kan. Two of these towns, Blackwell, Okla., and Arkansas City, Kan., will have organizations during the year. Members with honorary withdrawal cards or traveling cards were found in each of the towns named who will advise me when the required number is available to sign a charter petition.

Proceeding to St. Joseph, Mo., I attended the fourth annual session of the Missouri Valley Conference, which was held in the Metropole hotel, January 22 and 23. The conference was called to order by Charles Rhode, chairman of the convention committee of St. Joseph Typographical Union. After the usual welcoming addresses, President Ball responded in his usual pleasant manner and announced the conference committees.

Following were the delegates in attendance: Kansas City, Mo.—George A. Millar, W. H. Parsons, E. L. Traylor. St. Louis, Mo.—Charles Hertenstein, William Bradburn. Wichita, Kan.—Stephen G. Skinner, Claud M. Gafney. Topeka, Kan.—S. D. Colvin, George Manning. St. Joseph, Mo.—Milton Hilpp, J. E. Murphy, Albert Rossie. Marshalltown, Iowa—H. L. Kerr, Edgar Hestand, Claud Glass. Oklahoma City, Okla.—C. H. Albert, Ollie S. Wilson, W. H. Gadd. Springfield, Mo.—E. A. Hawks. Columbia, Mo.—John P. Matkin. Muskogee, Okla.—M. Edward Deming. Hannibal, Mo.—B. F. Brown. Sioux City, Iowa—Arnold J. Herz. Girard, Kan.—W. J. Jones. Coffeyville, Kan.—Frank T. Kercheval. Des Moines, Iowa—W. G. Waters. Atchison, Kan.—Robert Tompkins. Tulsa, Okla.—Wayne Van Tilburg. Joplin, Mo.—A. W. Thomas. Salina, Kan.—P. H. Anderson. Omaha, Neb.—Raymond E. Sperry. Pittsburg, Kan.—Fred J. Swinney. Jefferson City, Mo.—Martin Pohlmann.

During the sessions the apprentice question and the matter of state-owned printing plants were the topics receiving the most attention. It was evident from the facts brought out in these discussions that as a rule local unions are too lenient as to the qualifications of a boy starting in to learn the printing trade and also that journeymen, generally speaking, do not take enough interest in the apprentices employed.

Regarding state-owned printing plants, a committee consisting of Delegates Colvin, of Topeka, Kan.; Hawks, of Springfield, Mo., and Casler, of Oklahoma City, had been appointed at the meeting held in Joplin, a year previous, to investigate and report at this meeting. In a lengthy report submitted by this committee it was shown that the state-owned plant of Kansas had been a success, both from the standpoint of members employed and a financial saving of some $75,000 per year to the state over the old contract system.

At the Tuesday morning session the selection of the next convention city was disposed of. Oklahoma City was selected as the next meeting place. Topeka, Kan., was also in the race to entertain the 1918 session. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, L. C. Ball, Wichita, re-elected; vice-president, W. G. Waters, Des Moines, Iowa; secretary-treasurer, Charles Rhode, St. Joseph, Mo., re-elected.

The conference has experienced a wonderful growth in affiliations during the past year and with the co-operation of the local secretaries in the various cities by reporting promptly each month to Secretary Rhode, the monthly bulletin on the state of trade and other information of general interest will be of great value.

President Scott was in attendance at the sessions and his talks were interesting and instructive. A matter that had been before the conference on several occasions was touched upon by him, bringing out a phase entirely new to most of us. This was the publication of textbooks in state-owned printing plants. Ordinarily this is looked upon with much favor by members of the International Typographical Union, but the state boards of education are also on the alert. The state school officials of California leased the plates from schoolbook publishers in eastern cities, and instead of the printers of California receiving any benefit from such legislative enactment it proved otherwise. President Scott urged upon the delegates that they be cautious regarding their efforts in this direction.

St. Joseph Typographical Union did itself proud in the manner in which the delegates were entertained. There was "something doing" at all times when the conference was not in session.

My next assignment was at Pine Bluff, Ark., on January 26, where the local union was unable to reach an agreement with the proprietor of the morning paper. Before calling for the services of a representative the officers had been successful in signing up all the other offices in the city. After several conferences the matter was satisfactorily adjusted, the proprietor signing up the new contract and scale, calling for a $2 increase all around.

I found it convenient to stop off at Little Rock between trains and lend a word of encouragement to the officers and members of Little Rock Union and the officers of the state federation of labor, who were doing effective work to prevent the passage of the Kirby-Castle Digest appropriation, then before the Arkansas legislature, providing for an appropriation of $36,000 for 9,000 copies of the Arkansas digest. This work was to have been performed at the Stephens plant at Columbia, Mo. The bill passed the senate but was defeated in the house. This is a pleasing victory for the organized workers of this state, as ex-United States Senator Kirby is considered a political giant.

On January 30 President Scott wrote me to proceed to Salina, Kan., and endeavor to sign up the job offices in that city. The key to the whole situation in Salina is the Daily Journal, which also operates a job department and is owned by ex-United States Senator Bristow, who seems unwilling to yield in his position not to recognize the typographical union. Prior to my arrival the proprietors had entered into a gentlemen's agreement whereby they were to let their fate be governed by the action of the Journal management and they were free with their promises that they would sign up if the Journal could be induced to do so. The business manager of the Journal, Mr. Bailey, was positive in his statements that he would have nothing to do with the local union. This is the third local union they have had at Salina and the employing printers are slow to grant recognition. However, the organized labor movement is in much better condition there now than in several years past, several new organizations being instituted recently, and with their assistance and an effective label campaign, recognition will be forthcoming.

On March 13 I proceeded to Parsons, Kan., where the local union was deadlocked with the proprietors over two provisions of the scale of prices—increase of overtime from price and one-third to price and one-half and a clause calling for a foreman in all offices. After several conferences the difficulty was adjusted and the contract was signed for one year, the union's contention being sustained in each instance.

My next assignment was at Drumright, Okla., where the labels had been lifted, the men ordered to quit work and the office declared unfair by an act of the local secretary. Prior to the illegal actions the secretary had been employed at the office in question and had secured another job at Bristow, Okla., paying $4 per week in advance of the wage he was then receiving, giving the foreman the usual two weeks' notice to secure another man. A man was secured from Brownwood, Texas, and in due time reported for work. In the meantime the job secured by the secretary, Mr. Koop, at Bristow, "blew up." He then informed the foreman that he did not intend to quit, and when the proprietor insisted that his resignation had been accepted and a new man secured, he proceeded as above stated, without consulting the executive committee, the union or the International officers. I ordered the men back to work and the labels returned. Because of these actions the paper did not publish for two days.

My next trip was to assist Kirksville (Mo.) Union in an endeavor to secure recognition by signed contract. After looking over the situation thoroughly and discussing the same with the local officers, it was deemed advisable to defer action until a more opportune time. We must have more members in the various offices before attempting to force the issue.

Returning to Bartlesville, Okla., found the local union had agreed to sign their old scale for three years, which, in my opinion, could have been done by mail and without the services of a representative. I suggested to the membership that I thought we could secure a counter proposition from the employers that would be better than the old scale and was authorized to make such an attempt. We finally agreed on an increase of $1 all around for handmen and $1.50 for operators, three-year contract.

On April 22 I proceeded to Hot Springs, Ark., where I found the local union had revoked the permits of two applicants, citing section 35 of the general laws to sustain their action. As one applicant had a "record" in Chicago, known to the International officials, and the other came from New Orleans, without satisfactory explanation of his conduct there for the past eight months preceding, I felt the union acted wisely and according to law. The aggrieved parties intimated they would appeal to the executive council. The office wherein these men were employed was in no way inconvenienced by the action of the local union.

On April 27 I made a second trip to Drumright, Okla., to investigate a violation of the label agreement. The proprietor of the Drumright News, without intent to violate the agreement, had taken a Drumright label to Oklahoma City and had same used on a job too large for his press. The office in Oklahoma City was operating under union conditions and through ignorance of the law relating thereto the chairman of the chapel used the Drumright label. The membership desired the label agreement abrogated and the labels lifted from the News office. After explaining that the chapel chairman in Oklahoma City was equally responsible in the violation the matter was dropped. I admonished the proprietor that this must not occur again and also announced that fact in meeting at Oklahoma City.

On May 9 President Scott wired me to proceed to Hutchinson, Kan., and endeavor to settle a strike which had been in progress there since April 17 in the office of the Hutchinson Office Supply and Printing Company, involving three men and an apprentice. The controversy arose over the office refusing to pay overtime as provided in the scale of prices. After numerous conferences I was able to effect a settlement which was a complete victory for the local union. A union crew was furnished on May 14 and contractual relations were resumed.

On May 17 President Scott wired me to proceed to Tulsa, Okla., to investigate the matter of safety and sanitary conditions in the office of the Tulsa Democrat. The local union, through its sanitary committee, had been unable to secure the desired relief. The owner of the building which houses the Democrat had been ordered by the factory inspectors of the state labor department to place same in a safe and sanitary condition several times during the past year, but for reasons which I was unable to learn he was slow to heed the orders. The officers of the local union agreed to give the Democrat management reasonable time in which to force the owner of the building to comply with their requests and an order was so issued from headquarters.

In conclusion, I desire to thank the members of the executive council, also the officers and members of the subordinate unions in whose jurisdictions I have been called, for the many courtesies extended me during the year.

Fraternally yours,

Oklahoma City, Okla. W. H. GADD.

REPRESENTATIVE HANSON.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Despite the distractions of the European war, the final embroilment of our beloved country in that gigantic struggle, the unprecedented cost of paper and practically every other product used in the printing industry, coupled with a business uncertainty which created a more or less chaotic condition, the International Typographical Union has made material progress and is on the high road to greater and grander achievements.

There have been few serious disturbances in the south during the year, but there has been opportunity for preservative and constructive work. The most important difference occurring was in Jackson, Miss., where our members were locked out by the two daily papers and their places filled by non-union men from New Orleans. Representative Brown was put in charge of the situation in Jackson, and information on that matter will no doubt be found in his report.

It will be necessary to go into some detail, but this, like previous reports, will be as brief as possible.

Early in June, 1916, Birmingham, Atlanta and Greenville, S. C., were visited. In the latter place an effort was made to sign up several offices, but the town is dominated by the cotton mill interests, which are strongly anti-union. We have succeeded in securing contracts with one newspaper and one job office, and in two others only union men are employed. Anderson, S. C., was visited for the purpose of organizing a union, but one of the papers was in financial straits, on the verge of suspension, and without its employes enough applicants could not be had.

Atlanta was again visited, and from there I was instructed to go to Raleigh, N. C., where the state textbook commission was to let contracts for a period of five years. President Morris and Secretary Koonce, of No. 54, had familiarized themselves with the subject and were of invaluable assistance. They introduced me to newspaper men, officials, bankers and business men, many of whom used their influence in our behalf. Two of these should be given particular mention—E. E. Britton, editor of the News and Observer, and Clarence E. Poe, editor of the Progressive Farmer, one of the leading farm publications in this country, who will always be held in grateful remembrance. City Judge Harris, an urbane and able jurist, generously gave me the use of his office and a typewriter. Resolutions were prepared and sent to unions all over the state, with the request that they adopt something along the same line and mail to the textbook commission. Wishing to make a visit home, I stopped on the way in Asheville, where the members of the union, some of whom are quite influential, agreed to give all possible aid, one going so far as to say he would visit Raleigh at his own expense if called upon.

Upon the return from Memphis a stop was made in Atlanta, where the work inaugurated some time previously was found to be progressing satisfactorily, under the direction of the home products campaign committee.

During July the North Carolina Press Association met in annual session at Durham. This meeting was attended, where editors of the most influential papers were interviewed, some of whom agreed to and did use their influence in our behalf. Secretary of the Navy Daniels (owner of the Raleigh News and Observer) was an attendant and expressed himself as being thoroughly in accord with our efforts.

Returning to Raleigh, the work was being prosecuted when, in the latter part of July, a telegram was received from President Scott instructing me to proceed to Birmingham at once. This was immediately following the great flood, when nearly all the railroad bridges in North Carolina and many in South Carolina had been washed away, but it was found possible to make the trip. In Birmingham it was learned that a serious difference had arisen with one of the papers on the question of overtime. In conjunction with the union's committee, conferences were held with the management of the paper. It was a matter on which there was no middle ground—either the union or the management was right—and as the latter refused to accede to the union's views, it was agreed to leave the matter to arbitration. Some time later Mr. Lopez, a member of the committee, who was a delegate to the Southern Labor Congress in Memphis, informed me that the matter had been settled by the owner of the paper issuing an order that the contention of the union be complied with in full. Mr. Lopez also informed me that the typographical union had decided to again affiliate with the central body of Birmingham. This was an action which I had been urging for a long time, at first with very little prospect of success.

A stop was again made at Atlanta on the return trip to Raleigh, where work on the textbook proposition was resumed. There were about a hundred agents of book concerns in Raleigh, all of whom were sedulously avoided, for obvious reasons. It was also learned that one large non-union house, which was furnishing many books for the public schools, had placed and kept four agents in the state during the previous six months. After public hearings had been closed, the commission, at the request of Mr. Poe and others, agreed to give me a hearing, and I presented our side of the case, being ably aided by Secretary Koonce, who was chief of police and very influential and popular in Raleigh. This work was not completed until Wednesday of convention week, this delay being caused by a recess of the commission, which was a great disappointment, as I had long cherished the hope of being in Baltimore at that time. A brief report on the matter was sent to President Scott and read before the convention. The net result was that the histories and spellers were lost to non-union concerns which had previously furnished them and the contracts given to strictly union publishing houses, one of which is located in Raleigh. Changes were made in the readers and some other books, but we neither gained nor lost through these, as they were the product of union concerns and went to other union houses. We did not succeed in getting the geographies transferred from the non-union house which had the old contract, members of the commission holding that any further changes would be too great a burden upon the parents of pupils, but we did alarm the agents of this concern to such an extent that they reduced the price of their books 12 to 15 per cent, so the people of the state benefited to that extent through our efforts. While regretting that we could not secure all union books for the schools, we did feel that the results were encouraging.

While in Raleigh a number of meetings were attended, including those of the central labor body, which was assisted in making preparations for the celebration of Labor day. I was extended an invitation to deliver the Labor day address, and accepted. During the interim a visit was made to Charleston and another effort made to secure a contract with the morning paper. This could not then be closed, but a much better feeling was found to exist, and the representatives of the paper agreed to give consideration to a proposed contract which was submitted. Returning to Raleigh, I participated in its exceptionally creditable Labor day celebration, and delivered an address in the spacious city auditorium, being introduced by the editor of the News and Observer, a man of great prominence in the state and in the councils of the national democracy. Many prominent citizens attended this meeting. I can not close the report on Raleigh without giving expression to my deep feeling of appreciation for the many courtesies extended by the citizens in all walks of life in this splendid and hospitable city.

From Raleigh I returned home, and was instructed to proceed to New Orleans to assist Representative Brown and audit the books of No. 17. This was done and a detailed report submitted to headquarters.

The convention of the Southern Labor Congress at Memphis was then attended, where I served on several committees and made a talk as representative of the International Typographical Union.

Atlanta was again visited, but orders were received to proceed to Pensacola, Fla. There very serious internal trouble had developed. Charges and counter-charges had been preferred and the union was in a turmoil. It was necessary to make a thorough examination of the books, and a detailed report thereon was submitted to headquarters. Then the members who had filed charges, under misapprehension, were persuaded to withdraw them in the interest of peace and harmony.

Rome, Ga., was then visited, where a new scale was under consideration, and a substantial increase was secured in both the newspaper and job branches.

In the latter part of October a trip was made to Tampa, Fla., where a new newspaper agreement had been signed, but trouble was encountered with the proposed job scale. However, with the active co-operation of President Sauls and Secretary Atkinson we had no great difficulty in signing up all offices in Tampa and Ybor City, with two exceptions, and the manager of one of these, which had recently removed to Tampa, promised to sign the contract so soon as new machinery and other material ordered was received. The proprietor of the other would neither sign nor make promises. However, he had been conducting a non-union office for some years, and his business was approaching a condition which would indicate that he would soon find it advisable to reach an agreement with the union.

Later a visit was made to Columbus, Ga., where negotiations were pending for an increased newspaper scale. Conferences were held, at which the representatives of one paper stated they had recently come into control and had found the business in a deplorable state; that they were disposed to be liberal, but desired a little time to readjust affairs, and gave some confidential information in regard thereto. A postponement to January 15 was suggested. The committee from the union agreed to this, called a meeting and submitted the recommendation, which was adopted. Since that time the matter has been taken up and an advanced scale agreed to.

From Columbus I went to Macon, Ga., where the relations between employers and the union seemed to be all that could be desired.

In November I was instructed to visit Meridian, Miss., on a scale proposition for newspapers and job offices. There had developed a deadlock between the proprietors and the union. However, after a number of conferences an agreement was reached providing for a very substantial increase, and every office became a party to the agreement.

A scale controversy having arisen in Pensacola, I was sent there. Certain conditions which had never prevailed in that city were demanded by the union, and after numerous conferences these conditions and an advanced scale were agreed to.

January 1 the convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, at Nashville, was attended. I received instructions to visit El Paso, Texas. However, Albert E. Hill, president of Nashville Typographical Union, who had just taken his seat as a member of the state senate and been re-elected a member of the board of education (and consequently a very busy man), said it was the desire of No. 20 that I should remain in Nashville and aid in the negotiations for advanced newspaper and job scales. This I could not, of course, agree to, but Mr. Hill communicated with President Scott and secured the latter's consent to a limited stay. The union met the following Sunday and adopted a tentative scale as prepared by its committee. Negotiations were then entered upon, but unavoidable delays were encountered, such as enforced absences from the city and illness of members of the committee representing the job proprietors. The manager of one of the newspapers had been very seriously injured in an automobile accident, and delay was requested until he should recover sufficiently to take part in the conferences. However, in this case an agreement was reached providing that when the new scale was agreed to it should be retroactive. After much delay and many conferences, an agreement was reached with the job branch through which a $2 per week advance and other improved conditions were secured. It was then insisted that I should remain and take up the newspaper scale. Upon request from the president of the local,

President Scott consented and canceled the order to visit El Paso. I had prepared statistics for use in the newspaper scale controversy, and with the committee entered upon negotiations. The conferences were fruitless, however, the representatives of the papers finally stating they would consent to no advance whatever. It was then agreed to leave the matter to arbitration. One of the papers was not a party to the international arbitration agreement, but President Scott and Commissioner Kellogg agreed to allow it to participate. President Scott was requested to consent to having me serve as one of the union's members of the local arbitration board, but he stated that it would be setting a bad precedent to have an International Typographical Union representative so serve, but that I could act in an advisory capacity. Each side selected two men, and a number of meetings were held without agreeing on the fifth member, so I left Nashville, after preparing some additional data and a brief for the use of the officers of the union and its representatives.

Early in April a visit was made to Jacksonville, Fla., to attend the convention of the Tri-State Printers' League, which embraces Georgia, Florida and South Carolina, and which I had aided in reorganizing the previous year. This meeting was not largely attended, but the delegates were enthusiastic, much important business transacted and plans adopted which, if carried into effect, will result in much good not only to the states comprising the league, but the surrounding territory. Excellent officers, men of ability and ardent workers, were selected, including Atkinson, of Tampa, president; Petry, of Columbus, and Thompson, of Charleston, vice-presidents, and MacFeeley, of Savannah, secretary. Jacksonville Typographical Union tendered a splendid banquet at one of the leading hotels, where appropriate talks were made by Representative D. I. Campbell, Mr. Linn, organizer for the plumbers; Tom Atkinson, local members and guests, and the undersigned. The affair reflected credit and honor on the union and was greatly enjoyed by all who had the privilege of attending.

The meeting of the Florida Federation of Labor, held in Tallahassee, was then attended. There was a good attendance of delegates and much important business was transacted. The opening session was presided over by T. J. Appleyard, a member of Tallahassee Typographical Union. Upon request, I addressed the convention and was the recipient of many courtesies. Although Tallahassee is a small city and poorly organized, it is 100 per cent union in our craft.

From Tallahassee I returned to Jacksonville and conferred with Representative Campbell on some matters in that section, going thence to Fitzgerald, Ga., for the convention of the Georgia Federation of Labor, stopping en route at Waycross and consenting to serve our union there as delegate, it not being in position to send one. At Fitzgerald I addressed the convention as a representative of the International Typographical Union, and also served it as chairman of the laws committee. There was a very decided union spirit in Fitzgerald, but not enough printers to organize a union, so Tifton and Douglas, nearby cities, were visited, where men were found who agreed to assist in organization. All necessary papers and instructions were left with the most active advocate of the movement in Fitzgerald.

Having been instructed to visit Dalton, Ga., I stopped at Rome, a delegate to the state convention having informed me that there was a hope of signing the only non-union office there. An interview was had with one of the proprietors, who talked favorably, but would not act in the absence of a member of the firm who was out of the city, but agreed to take it up when the latter returned.

At Dalton there were enough printers to organize, but all were employed in one shop. A number of them favored organizing, but some were undecided, seemingly doubtful of the attitude of the proprietors. The manager, who was interviewed at some length, expressed respect and admiration for the International Typographical Union, and in his paper gave a nice notice of the booklet, "Somewhere in France." The men agreed to consider the matter further, and instructions as to organization were left with one who held an International Typographical Union card.

Chattanooga was next visited. This union recently succeeded in negotiating a new scale, carrying a good increase, so there was nothing in particular to do there except to examine the books. However, upon request I remained over a day to address the regular meeting of the union, where a very cordial greeting was extended. Some of the newswriters here were considering the question of organizing a union, and the leader of the movement was given all necessary information.

A stop was then made at Knoxville. Here the union had a scale matter under consideration, but absence from the city of one of the principal proprietors precluded action at that time. However, the officers were advised with on the matter and the secretary's books examined. Here, as in Chattanooga, the newswriters were considering the subject of organizing, and one of them was furnished data and instructions.

A stop was then made in Nashville, to aid in the newspaper arbitration, but it was found that the owner of one of the papers had been almost continuously absent, in Washington, and the fifth member of the arbitration board therefore not selected, with no definite date possible to name for agreement.

From Nashville I returned to Memphis. Here the scale committee had reached a five-year agreement with the morning paper, which provided for an increase each year. For a time it was thought this matter would have to go to arbitration, but the representatives of the employers and the union finally reached an amicable agreement.

While in Knoxville and Nashville I heard very disturbing rumors relative to our union in Shreveport, La., and upon reaching home these rumors were given additional color by the secretary of No. 11, who stated members recently from Shreveport had informed him that at the expiration of the existing contract, in June, our members on the newspapers would be locked out. This did not seem improbable, from the fact that one of the papers is owned by a man who conducts a non-union paper in another city, and the further fact that both papers had a difference with the pressmen's union some time ago and have been running non-union pressrooms since that time. Therefore, I proceeded to Shreveport, stopping en route at Vicksburg, where additional information on the situation might be obtained, that city being about midway between Jackson, Miss., and Shreveport, and naturally greatly interested in the matter. Upon arrival in Shreveport it was found that the situation was not so black as had been painted. The president, secretary-treasurer and chairman of the executive board, acting as a committee from the union, had held a number of conferences with the proprietors, and while the latter had refused to concede an increased scale, they had expressed a willingness to renew the old contract, but objected to a new apprentice agreement. An adjourned meeting of the union had been arranged for, and at this meeting the committee submitted its report. The union, by an almost unanimous vote, decided to extend the old contract for one year, but at my suggestion instructed the committee to use its best efforts to secure an apprentice agreement. I then delivered a brief address and was given a rising vote of thanks. A conference was held the following day with representatives of two daily papers, as a result of which an agreement was signed extending the old contract one year, from June 15, and a separate agreement made to accept the new apprentice provisions. Telegrams notifying them of the settlement were at once sent to our officers at Vicksburg and Memphis, and to President Scott. The manager of the other daily paper, which had been started by union men following the pressmen's trouble with the other two papers last fall (but which had to a certain extent changed hands), had signed the proposed increased scale without the formality of a conference, but when we called upon him with the information that other terms had been agreed upon with the other two papers, and stated that he would, of course, be given the same privileges, he stated that he would not sign this agreement unless requested to do so by the central trades council, which was interested in the publication. Therefore, I remained in Shreveport for the meeting of the central body, which was attended in company with the president of No. 155 and its delegates. After much discussion the council requested the management to sign the agreement, and this he did the following day, ending a very peculiar situation.

Some time ago D. I. Campbell, of Norfolk, was appointed to look after the interests of the International Typographical Union in Virginia, and later was sent into territory which I had previously covered, as well as other places, and from reports received from different sources, have learned that he has been quite successful. There should be representatives of more crafts placed in this territory, and it is to be regretted that the American Federation of Labor does not see its way clear to place and keep organizers in the south, where their services are needed and where much could be accomplished.

There was one very regrettable occurrence during the year. As is well known, a campaign had been launched and prosecuted in Atlanta, one of our leading cities, in which a number of the largest book and job printing establishments are nonunion. As a result of this campaign the union gained the good will and co-operation of practically every business organization, the respect and good wishes of nearly all people in all walks of life, the hearty co-operation not only of the allied printing trades, but the organized labor movement of the city, and, in addition, won the admiration of the leading spirits among the non-union employers. As a result, we had every reason to believe that with the beginning of the fall business season we would be able to unionize several of the most important offices in the city, which would pave the way for unionizing the whole city. Having kept in close touch with the situation up to the time of the Baltimore convention, knowing the sentiment which had been aroused, and feeling assured that the time was ripe for reaping the harvest, I again visited Atlanta in the early fall, with the expectation of putting in some time there in completing the work. To my surprise and sorrow, it was found that an exceedingly regrettable incident had occurred which not only put a damper upon the work at that time, but to a great extent nullified much of the great constructive work which had been accomplished. The succeeding meeting of the union withdrew its appropriation for the campaign. I notified President Scott of the action, with an explanation of the reasons therefor, and he promptly ordered discontinuance of the assistance from headquarters. Since then I have spent very little time in Atlanta, only occasionally stopping for a few hours or a day when passing through to other points. While this is regrettable from every standpoint, I feel that the bitterness engendered by the incident above referred to has been very largely eliminated, and that the union and the other printing trades will at no distant date again take up constructive work and carry it to a successful conclusion.

During the year the books of a number of unions were examined, not so much for the purpose of making an audit to see that the funds were properly accounted for, but to learn if the secretaries were keeping necessary records. In some places it was found that the secretaries were keeping practically no permanent records, though making correct accountings of moneys received and disbursed. Others were quite painstaking, but did not have the necessary permanent records, while others were doing all that could be desired. Again, it was found that many auditing committees had a rather hazy idea of their full duties. In all instances the officers of the unions were given information which, if put into effect, will result in proper systems of recording the business of the organizations in permanent form and the right kind of auditing.

After writing the above, information was received that there was possibility of trouble in Alexandria, where a local was organized something more than a year ago. This city was visited, but it was learned that the union had not decided to make a request at this time, and therefore there was no prospect of a difference.

On the eve of my departure for Alexandria I received a letter from President Scott instructing me to proceed to Montgomery, Ala., in response to a letter from President Elliott, of Birmingham Union, which contained the information that the textbook commission of Alabama would meet the first week in June for the purpose of considering the question of awarding contracts for the books to be used in the public schools of the state during the next five years. Leaving Alexandria, I spent one day in New Orleans, conferring with Representative Charles S. Brown relative to our affairs in that city, and also in regard to the trouble in Jackson, Miss., he having had charge of the situation there, and arrived in Montgomery Monday, June 4.

Immediately upon arrival in Montgomery officers and members of the local typographical union were consulted in regard to the matter, and suggestion was made that the president of the state federation be interviewed, as he had made an investigation of the question and was in possession of more definite information than any one else. The president (who is a resident of Montgomery) was then visited, and he imparted the information that the existing commission would not act upon this matter; that the governor would appoint a new commission in March, and that this new body, as soon as possible after organization and necessary advertising for bids, would enter into the work of selecting books and awarding contracts for five years. Under the laws of this state the governor is chairman and the superintendent of education secretary of the textbook commission. It is understood that the present superintendent has tendered his resignation, to take effect September 1, but that his successor has not been named by the governor. The other members are to be appointed from the ranks of the educators of the state. Some valuable information was obtained from the office of the secretary of state. While nothing definite can be done at this time, the officers of the various unions in the state will be made acquainted with the exact status of affairs, and will be requested to co-operate in every way possible, which they are sure to do. Our delegates to the convention of the Alabama Federation of Labor brought the matter to the attention of that body, and its officers were instructed to lend every possible aid, and they have taken a deep interest in the subject.

Up to a couple of years ago the labor movement in Montgomery was of very small proportions and little effort being made for improvement. This was learned during a visit to the city, and our members were urged to use their influence toward building up the few unions here, organizing new bodies and establishing a live, virile central body. I am glad to report that this work was undertaken by some of our members and by energetic and able members of other bodies, with the result that there is now a central body with representatives from thirteen unions, and several more in prospect in the immediate future. Upon invitation I shall remain over to address the central union tomorrow night, in the meantime looking into some typographical conditions, there being a fair prospect of building up our union here, which, though small in numbers, is a most excellent one and alive to the best interests of the labor movement. Like many other of our unions in this section, it has shown its patriotism by investing $200 in Liberty loan bonds.

In conclusion, I wish to thank the officers of the International Typographical Union, officers and members of the local unions, for the many courtesies extended during the past year.

Respectfully submitted,

Memphis, Tenn. H. P. Hanson.

REPRESENTATIVE HAYES.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Herewith I present a brief summary of the more extended reports that I have submitted to the International officers during the past year and which are on file at headquarters.

When my report of a year ago was prepared I had been devoting considerable time to assisting members of Detroit and other Michigan cities to inaugurate a campaign to abolish the injunction evil during strikes, several of our members having sentences of imprisonment hanging over them for alleged contempt of court and a number of men and women in other trades being in jail for violating injunctions that robbed them of their right of free speech and peacefully to assemble to do picketing. I regret to report that the campaign, which had begun under auspicious circumstances, had to be abandoned for the time being on account of other referendums being precipitated into the political arena that diverted attention from the injunction fight, and also because a difference of opinion arose as to the best and quickest way to obtain results—by a straight out referendum contest or an appeal to the legislature to enact a law to restrict the powers of the judiciary. Those who believed in the latter plan lost interest in the work of initiating the proposed referendum and waxed enthusiastic on other issues and candidates, with the result, as stated, that the petitions were withdrawn. Subsequently a bill was prepared for submission to the legislature by those who believed that relief from the injunction curse could be obtained quickest in that manner, but through some neglect or error the bill was withheld too long and ruled out on a technicality when presented. It is the belief of men who are conversant with the methods of political manipulators that the bill, even had it come up for consideration, would have stood about as much chance of passing as a snowball has in hades. Not a single bill favorable to organized labor succeeded in running the gantlet in the Michigan legislature during the recent session.

As most of the other trades were indifferent to the fight that was inaugurated by Typographical Union No. 18 and placed their faith in professional politicians, bound hand and foot to Big Business, to secure legislative relief from the injunction evil some day, somehow, No. 18 safeguarded itself against further general strikes in the job branch by signing up an arbitration agreement along the lines recommended by the International and similar to the one in effect with the newspaper publishers' association. So No. 18 should worry because the superior wisdom of certain great labor leaders, so-called, prevailed and its anti-injunction campaign was killed in the house of its friends.

Wage-scale negotiations were conducted by me in fully as many jurisdictions as the year previous and advances in pay and other improvements were obtained in every instance. In Clarksburg, W. Va., Salem, Niles, Canton, the Cleveland Hungarian and Bohemian offices, Ashtabula and Columbus the usual arguments were encountered against further increases in wage rates or any other concessions, particularly at this time, when the whole printing industry has been plundered by the paper manufacturers and other concerns furnishing supplies in a manner unprecedented in the history of this or any other country. I endeavored to show, wherever possible, and was always supported by the testimony of the members, that they were not responsible for the paper robbery, the high cost of living or the war in Europe, and, consequently, it was unjust to make them suffer for the want of additional wages to purchase the necessaries of life for themselves and families. In Ashtabula a short strike was waged that ended successfully, while in Columbus the contest was prolonged because of the "butting in" of outside parties. The union had, as in previous years, submitted a scale and expected that negotiations would be conducted as usual and was rather surprised to receive a reply that offered an increase of a dollar a week and could be interpreted in no other way than as an ultimatum—"take it or leave it alone." All efforts to secure further concessions were rebuffed and there was no other avenue left open to secure a fair scale than fight for it. So about 160 members were called out of some twenty-five offices to enforce a rate of $24 per week (an increase of $3) for this year and a minimum of $25 next year. The Employing Printers' Association was dominated by a faction that had become strongly obsessed with the open-shop idea and that also accepted advice from anti-union interests in other lines of industry, which interests contended that No. 5 was becoming too strong and tended to encourage other workers to organize more solidly and demand better conditions, and so where would it all end except in universal bankruptcy! Therefore, many promises of support were held out to some of the printing concerns if they would oppose the "unreasonable demands" of the printers, and also a few threats were made by the capitalistic brethren of what they would do to each other if they surrendered to the "labor trust." The strike didn't last long in the majority of the offices. A tentative agreement was arranged that permitted the employes to return to plants where the management promised to abide by union conditions. This had the effect of smashing the old association, the employers favoring the union forming a new organization, and in a short time the old body disintegrated completely, leaving the antagonistic officials who were largely responsible for the trouble without followers. At this writing the fight has simmered down to three offices that formerly operated open shop and employed thirty persons and a couple of one-man plants. A great deal of work has been taken from the unfair concerns and they also have been sorely pressed to secure and hold competent printers. Meanwhile nearly all employes who walked out of those shops have secured employment in fair offices elsewhere, and it is only a matter of time when those struck concerns will again be brought into line.

In several other places where local unions were assisted in negotiating wage scales and where settlements were reached without trouble it required considerable diplomatic maneuvering to prevent trouble. The members are naturally exasperated by the unprecedented high cost of living imposed upon the people by the thieving speculators and combines that seem to be above the law and do pretty much as they please, while on the other hand the owners of printing plants are in anything but a pleasant frame of mind as they contemplate the cold-blooded robbery to which they have been subjected by the paper and other combines that furnish supplies. Under such conditions the task was not always a pleasant one to endeavor to find common ground on which to base an agreement.

I also assisted Detroit officials in organizing a new union of Hungarian printers and in conducting a strike of Polish printers, which they won handily. Also considered and adjusted a number of grievances in job plants and endeavored to assist the mailers to maintain their organization through conferences with the managers and owners of newspapers, non-union craftsmen and union officers and members, with fair success. I visited Charleston, W. Va., to endeavor to adjust a grievance between the union and one of the daily offices, where members had illegally ceased work. After the trouble had been seemingly settled satisfactorily to everybody in conference and at a special union meeting and I had departed an appeal was taken to the executive council, which rendered a decision later.

In Urbana an unauthorized strike took place in a daily office. The city is said to be "dry," but several members absorbed more inspiration than was beneficial for them and proceeded to tie up the town with sufficient success to create an annoying situation. The loyal members united and hustled with a will to repair the damage caused, while the trouble makers drew their cards and skipped before action could be taken by the union. In Akron my dealings have been confined to several large open shops and conferences with managements, employes, union officials, etc. The union has been making steady progress, but nothing sensational along this line can be expected in that jurisdiction, as the odds against unionism are strong in that city of rubber kings. In Kittanning, Pa., I had several office grievances to handle and was compelled to lift the label in one plant. In Fremont the union had internal troubles and hit the financial rocks, and I finally got them on their feet again. Also signed up another office and prospects are good to secure several more. At Xenia the union had trouble with an office, charging illegal use of the label, and efforts to settle the matter had been unsuccessful. By bringing a bit of pressure to bear through Dayton I brought about a settlement and signed up the office.

Several visits were made to New Philadelphia to form a union if possible, and I finally succeeded, but not without enough experiences, good and bad, to fill a small volume. Later I signed up two offices in that town and two in Uhrichsville; also visited Denison and Dover and labored with the printers and bosses to get them to see the light of unionism, but they remain indifferent up to the present, although the label may serve to awaken them. I had several conferences with the manager of the Shelby Printing Company, one of the largest concerns in the country that manufactures sales slips, novelties, etc., and when it looked as though we might get into agreement internal trouble developed in the company and the manager resigned and the fat was in the fire. Also investigated the situation regarding the McCaskey plant at Alliance, a similar institution to the one in Shelby, but could see no chance of making much progress under prevailing conditions. The pressmen have given some attention to both places, but have reached no adjustment of the situation.

I also organized a union in Piqua after a number of visits to that place and in the face of considerable opposition from the employers, who quickly combined when they learned what was occurring. Strong efforts were made to bluff the new members into deserting the ship, but only a few succumbed to the threats, while the others stiffened their backbones and announced that if it was necessary to fight for the right to organize they were ready to meet the issue. I also visited Sidney and talked organization to the printer folk in that town. There was a local in Sidney several years ago, but no sooner was the charter received than a boss tried to break up the union and the members walked off the job, drew traveling cards and flew the coop. Only a few inexperienced members remained and they sent back the charter. There is a new crowd of printers in the town, which has also grown from the trade point of view, and there is a fairly good chance that an organization may be perfected there in the near future. I visited Ashland and Bellefontaine several times and Defiance and Kenton to endeavor to arouse the printers in those places sufficiently to unite and improve their conditions. Some progress is being made, but it is uphill work. The country printer seems to be the most timid animal on earth. He doesn't seem to realize that there are other jobs beyond the confines of his narrow dunghill, and that every printer who leaves a backwoods burg for the city always improves his condition and seldom returns, which fact is compelling some of the country town proprietors to pay right smart wages to secure city chaps to run machines when they put them in. In every town there are a few who are favorable to organizing, but always a large enough minority to make it impossible to send for a charter until an endless amount of missionary work is done. That is one reason, among a dozen others that it is unnecessary to repeat here, why I favor reducing the number of applicants required to secure a charter to five.

I visited Zanesville to look into an office grievance, which was subsequently adjusted by the union; Marion, same purpose, and it was decided to hold complaints in abeyance pending new scale negotiations; Bucyrus, to negotiate reduction of hours to constitutional requirements and report progress; Fostoria, to attempt to negotiate agreement with an open shop, but no success up to the present; Toledo, to investigate record of an individual holding responsible position on the Pacific coast at request of union in that jurisdiction; Warren, to interest friends in unfair publication issued at Columbus, with good success; Cincinnati, to secure pledge of "wet" forces that no advertising would be given to unfair publications in this year's prohibition fight, securing partial success, and also secured pledge from "dry" management at Columbus that no unfair concerns would be patronized; Massillon and Youngstown, to address the October and April sessions of the Ohio Typographical Conference, which were well attended and thoroughly successful in every particular; Mansfield, Ashland and Mount Vernon on organizing work and negotiating agreements with non-union offices, and at this writing a new union is getting under way in the latter place, a charter having been sent for and the organization is to be installed in a few days.

I must close this necessarily condensed report by expressing my appreciation to the International Typographical Union officers for their uniform courtesy and helpfulness, as well as local officers and members for their co-operation in the work that was undertaken by the undersigned during the past year. Yours fraternally,

Cleveland, Ohio. MAX S. HAYES.

REPRESENTATIVE KINSKEY.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—I respectfully submit my report of work performed as your representative during the period from June 1, 1916, to June 1, 1917:

In one section of my 1915-1916 report I referred to the fact that I had consummated an agreement with the Rochester Herald, which was satisfactory to the members of the union. The wedge having entered, negotiations were continued with the Rochester Daily Times, but the manager argued that they could not give any increase and stated that the men were willing to wait two years more at the old scale. The increase on the Morning Herald was stipulated to take effect in November of last year and it was decided to wait until then to enforce the scale on the Evening Times.

In June I attended the Ontario Conference of Typographical Unions, which was held in Peterborough, Ont. It was an interesting session and matters of importance to the craft in Canada came up. One of the important problems was the keeping of members in good standing in their respective unions who went to Europe in the various military units recruited in Canada. It was quite a task for the smaller unions, but it was met in a cheerful and willing spirit, which speaks highly for the fraternity that exists in our ranks.

On my return from Peterborough I stopped at Brantford to take note of conditions, and found that the way in which I had straightened out matters there in May had worked out well and was proving perfectly satisfactory.

On my return to Buffalo I found a call summoning me to join my regiment, which was ordered out on account of the Mexican trouble and in which I served till December as a lieutenant in Battery A, Third field artillery, being located on the border the entire time.

Returning home in December I took up the Rochester Daily Times scale matter at the request of President Scott. Several conferences were had with Mr. Morey, the manager, but he said he could not pay any increase on account of the white paper situation, as he had no contracts and was paying 5 cents a pound for paper in the open market. Finally he said he would pay an increase if he could make a reasonable contract for white paper the first of the year. There was also a movement on foot at the time to increase the price of daily newspapers from 1 to 2 cents, which was temporarily blocked, one paper refusing to raise its price. The union was quite determined to force the Times to pay the increase, but was prevailed on to wait until the first of the year and give the management a chance to secure its contract for white paper at a lower figure. The first of the year found the management of the Times still claiming it could not pay the increase and saying they had not secured contracts for white paper. The members of the union became quite exasperated and voted to enforce the scale, whereupon the Times management sent for the officers and signed the following scale:

Linotype operators, $23; floormen, $22; proofreaders, $22; admen, $22; machinist-operators, $25; machinists, $27.

Time and one-half for overtime. Double time for Sundays and six legal holidays—New Year's day, Decoration day, Fourth of July, Labor day, Thanksgiving day and Christmas. Monotype operators or men working on typesetting devices shall receive the same pay as linotype operators, morning or evening.

On request of London (Ont.) Typographical Union I was instructed by the executive council to visit that city and assist in a campaign against some of the non-union offices in that jurisdiction. Arriving there I was confronted with a controversy in the newspaper offices relative to overtime and other working conditions. After a conference with the management of the papers and the foremen, and after several meetings of the union had been held, the following paragraphs were adopted and made part of the newspaper scale:

Overtime—All time in excess of the regular working time on any day.

For purpose of explanation it means a continuation of work after the completion of the regular working hours, either by the full working force of the composing room or part of that force. Foremen must notify members, either personally or through the chairman, before they leave the composing room, that he wants overtime worked that day, and the members so designated to continue such work at the expiration of the regular working time until the completion of the overtime work at the regular overtime scale of price and one-half.

Overtime to be passed around, and any member designated to work is obligated to perform such work unless he can pass it along or trade with some one else. But trading or passing overtime on does not relieve any members from performing such work in their regular turn. Chairmen of chapels to keep track of the regular turn of the members.

The foreman of the composing room can not bring members from one shift to work on another shift and construe such work as overtime, and if any member works less than the required hours of such shift they shall be paid not less than a full day's or night's pay which the scale of wages calls for.

A member holding a regular situation in a composing room is responsible for that situation at all times, and if such member desires to be absent either a whole or part of any day or night shall procure the substitute. The practice of members begging off and having the foreman calling a member of another shift to finish the day should be discontinued. The member who finishes the day is entitled to the day's pay, and the man who begs off loses the time he puts in.

Members must be present in the composing room to cover their situations when time is called at the beginning of any day or night's work. When members work overtime it does not relieve them of the responsibility of going to work at the regular working time of their shift.

The Talbot Printing Company, of London, is a large job shop and also publishes a weekly newspaper called the Echo. The union succeeded in getting all the employes into the organization except three old men. There were twelve cards in that shop and after many efforts Mr. Talbot was finally cornered for a conference with the purpose of unionizing his composing room, but he said he did not want the union label and was willing to deal fairly with his men. After getting the men together it was found that he was paying below the union scale to most all the composing-room employes. He was warned that he must pay the scale, but up to date has not done so, and sanction of the council to proceed against that office has been asked.

I called at Woodstock, Ont., to see the officers of the union relative to conditions in that locality and to help straighten out some perplexing conditions.

Receiving a letter from Secretary Burns, of Hamilton Typographical Union, in regard to the job scale which was negotiated and signed three years ago, I went to that city to look over the matter and, if possible, to adjust it. When the printers' scale was signed, the pressmen were also applying for an increase. The committee of the Master Printers' Guild informed me at that time that it was agreed between them to give the pressmen the same scale as the printers; but after we signed our scale, which called for $19 this year, the pressmen threatened to strike and demanded $20. A compromise was agreed upon and they got $19.50. The printers thought they should demand the $19.50 also. The employers who were on the committee finally paid their men the $19.50, and now all the offices are paying that amount to the jobmen.

In February I was sent to Peterborough, Ont., to assist the union in its scale negotiations. There were several obstacles to overcome in the conferences with the proprietors in that city, the strongest one being that as the two afternoon papers had recently changed hands, the management of those papers felt that they should not be hampered by the union asking for an increase at that time. They wanted to postpone the raising of the scale another year in order to give them time to build up the business. Another strong argument that was used was that at the Ontario Conference of Typographical Unions, held in Peterborough last June, statements were made that owing to the war unions in Ontario were not going to ask for any increases in scales. But your representative was present at the conference and he assured the proprietors that the reporters had got those statements in relation to unions asking for increases garbled up. It was agreed in that conference that if absolute necessity arose, owing to war conditions, the employes in printing offices would be willing to bear the burden with the employers; but at this time it was felt that the condition of business warranted the union in asking for an increase. After some lengthy conferences over the working conditions in offices, we agreed on a scale which means an increase of $4 per week for handmen and $3 per week for operators, with a three-year agreement. It makes a flat scale for handmen and operators before the expiration of the contract, and also brings the jobmen up to the same standard of the newspaper men in the matter of wages. It also provided a scale for apprentices and regulations to govern them. The following is the scale of wages and apprentices' scale as finally adopted and accepted:

FOREMEN.

February 1, 1917, to August 1, 1917, $20; August 1, 1917, to February 1, 1918, $21; February 1, 1918, to February 1, 1919, $22; February 1, 1919, to February 1, 1920, $23.

HAND COMPOSITORS, STONE HANDS, BINDERS, ETC.

February 1, 1917, to August 1, 1917, $18; August 1, 1917, to February 1, 1918, $19; February 1, 1918, to February 1, 1919, $20; February 1, 1919, to February 1, 1920, $21.

MACHINE OPERATORS.

February 1, 1917, to August 1, 1917, $19; August 1, 1917, to February 1, 1918, $19.50; February 1, 1918, to February 1, 1919, $20.50; February 1, 1919, to February 1, 1920, $21.

LINOTYPE MACHINISTS AND MACHINIST-OPERATORS.

February 1, 1917, to August 1, 1917, $20; August 1, 1917, to February 1, 1918, $20.50; February 1, 1918, to February 1, 1919, $21.50; February 1, 1919, to February 1, 1920, $22.

Scale of wages for apprentices shall be as follows:

First six months, $4 per week; second six months, $4.50 per week; third six months, $5 per week; fourth six months, $5.50 per week; third year, one-third minimum floor scale; fourth year, one-half minimum floor scale; fifth year, two-thirds minimum floor scale.

Several other matters were taken up and adjusted. One in particular that was given serious consideration was that we would not tolerate any attempt to keep men out of work in any office on account of activity in the union. Men who were competent to fill situations in offices were entitled to those situations before help should be brought in from the outside, and a man who had lived in the city for years and had brought up a family should not be compelled to seek work elsewhere when there was an opening in his home town. In the case of one man it looked as though this was being done, and so finally we brought one office to seeing the wisdom of this, which was nothing more than justice, and succeeded in putting the man back to work in the composing room.

While on the way to London, Ont., to continue negotiations with the Talbot firm in relation to unionizing their office, I received a telegram from President Scott to go to Binghamton, N. Y., immediately to take up the work of assisting the union there to negotiate its scale, which it had presented to the publishers and on which the local union committee and the employers were deadlocked. And it was no wonder that they were deadlocked, for when I arrived there and had a chance to go over the dozen typewritten pages of conditions that the employers had presented to the union, which emasculated a lot of the local and International Union laws, I could readily see the reason why no agreement could be reached. And if the union accepted these conditions it would get an increase of 2 cents a day. After daily conferences lasting for several weeks we finally cut down the twelve pages of conditions to three, and the offer was increased from 12 cents a week to 50 cents a week, with a five-year agreement. We were dealing with an unusual situation in Binghamton, in that the employers had formed a local association which included newspapers and book and job offices. The newspapers were members of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and one of them, the Daily Press, had an arbitration agreement with the union. It seemed the purpose of the other newspaper and the book and job offices to offer a 50-cent increase, and if the union refused to accept it to have the Daily Press arbitrate, and they to be represented on the arbitration board. This scheme did not appeal to the committee and your representative, and the local association's committee was promptly told that if the union went to arbitration it would be with the Daily Press alone, and that the morning newspaper, the Republican-Herald, would come in under whatever award was granted by the board if it would agree to place its office upon the same standard as the Daily Press, by putting on a machinist and agreeing to pay three dollars over whatever the award might be. The union's committee held that this was equitable because the night scale was recognized and was being paid as three dollars over the day scale in all the other offices in the city, and the Republican-Herald had the benefit of the two-dollar rate for a number of years in its agreement with the union. Also that there was a lot of dissatisfaction in that office over having a machinist-operator in an office of that size. We insisted that the book and job offices could not consistently make a scale for the newspapers, and we reserved the right to deal with them aside from the newspapers. We felt that we could not make much progress the way the association was constituted, and we found as the conference continued that the Daily Press was inclined to want to settle its scale by conciliation rather than to go to the expense and trouble of arbitration, and having the matter drag along for months.

I submitted, with the sanction of the committee, a proposition that the scale be made $23 per week this year, with a dollar increase next year, and a three-year agreement. This meant a $2 increase on the newspapers this year and a $3 increase for handmen in the book and job offices. We felt that if the employers insisted on combining the newspaper and book and job offices that we would insist on a flat scale in the city. I told them that I would not recommend to the union anything less than a $2 increase this year, and that if they did not want to consider this offer that we might just as well prepare to arbitrate with the Daily Press and that the union reserved the right to deal with the other offices as it saw fit; that the question of arbitration with the rest of the offices rested with the union. The association then offered a $1.50 increase this year with another $1.50 increase two years from now. There was no recession from our stand, and finally the Press resigned from the association and made an offer of a $2 increase this year with a $1 increase two years from date, with a four-year agreement. Feeling that this was as good, if not better, than we could get under arbitration, it was presented to the union and accepted, and the Press signed up. The Republican-Herald elected to stay with the local association, but tried to get arbitration, and wanted to sign an arbitration agreement by appealing to Commissioner Kellogg, of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and President Scott. The association also appealed as an organization to President Scott and importuned him to come to Binghamton, evidently feeling that your representative was a little too radical in dealing with the situation. President Scott wired me that if necessary he could get there on a certain date, and finding that the employers were insisting on the presence of the head of the International Typographical Union, I wired President Scott to come. He came and promptly told the association that the book and job men could not make a newspaper scale and that Commissioner Kellogg had told the newspapers early in the negotiations that it could not be done. The Republican-Herald still persisted in its stand with the other employers, with the result that the union voted to enforce the demand that it pay $3 per week above the day scale and put on a machinist. After an hour's delay in getting out the paper the Republican-Herald signed up. This then left the association composed of book and job employers. After considerable more parleying and conferences and a vote to enforce the demand of the union, the book and job offices signed up with an agreement which brings the handmen in those offices up to the same scale as the men in the newspapers before its expiration. It means also that there is a signed scale with all the offices in Binghamton for the first time in its history. It was a hard task to accomplish this, and I desire here to pay a tribute to the ability and frankness of the local committee, composed of Messrs. Southwick, Doyle and Walker, who were associated with me in the weeks of work, bringing to a conclusion a satisfactory scale. The following scale is the one adopted:

NEWSPAPER SCALE.

Evening Newspapers.

Eight hours shall constitute a day's work, to be between the hours of 7 A. M. and 6 P. M. Six days shall constitute a week's work.

Overtime shall be paid for at the rate of time and one-half.

Foremen shall receive not less than:

March 4, 1917, to March 4, 1919—$26.
March 4, 1919, to March 4, 1921—$27.

Assistant foremen:

March 4, 1917, to March 4, 1919—$25.
March 4, 1919, to March 4, 1921—$26.

All other journeymen:

March 4, 1917, to March 4, 1918—$24.50.
March 4, 1918, to March 4, 1919—$25.
March 4, 1919, to March 4, 1920—$26.
March 4, 1920, to March 4, 1921—$27.

Offices using four or more machines must employ a machinist.

The scale for apprentices shall be as follows:

First twelve months, $7; next six months, $8; next six months, $9; next six months, $9.50; next six months, $10; next six months, $12; next six months, $14; next six months, $16; next six months, $18.

I was sent to Watertown, N. Y., in April, some trouble arising on the Daily Times. It seems that the union had been quietly organizing the members of the composing room, and after this was accomplished it was determined to seek recognition and an increase in wages. The management found this out before the time was set to put the matter up to them, and calling in some of the men and finding that they were determined to stand with the union, effected a settlement of the matter by agreeing to raise the wages of the composing-room force and recognizing the chapel and the chairman as head of it and allowing chapel meetings. The management said that they did not wish to deal with any one outside the office, and the union accepted this for the time being. The office has been outside the pale since the eight-hour strike and the union in Watertown has been making an uphill fight for years to keep alive. Understanding that the Daily Standard, the other paper of the city, which has been without the pale of the union since the eight-hour trouble, was talking favorably, the officers of the local union asked me to see what I could do with those in control of that paper. I secured a conference with the management and tried to prevail on it to unionize its establishment; but while they were very courteous, they said that at this time they were satisfied to run along as they were, but some time in the future might call on them. It looks as though there will be a new paper started in Watertown in the near future and brighter prospects seem to be in store for our members there.

Lockport, N. Y., presented a new scale to the officers and solicited the services of your representative in its negotiation. Conferences were held with the employers and the increase asked for was agreed to, to go into effect July 1, of this year. The employers argued that all their contracts for work were made up to September 1, of this year, and wanted to compromise on the date. The union accepted this and it gives an increase of $3 a week with a two-year agreement. This scale also is a flat scale, giving the book and job men the same as the newspaper men. An apprentice scale was also made and conditions specified as to the class of work they shall do. The old journeymen scale was $18 per week; the new one will be $21 per week for day work. The scale follows:

SCALE OF PRICES.

Day Work.

Section 1. Compositors and machine operators shall receive not less than $21 per week, eight hours to constitute a day's work. Foremen shall receive not less than $24 per week.

Sec. 2. The regular hours of work shall be between 7 o'clock A. M. and 6 P. M.

Sec. 3. Overtime to be charged for at the rate of one price and a half.

Sec. 4. All work done on Sunday, and all legal holidays, shall be paid for at the rate of double price. Holidays are New Year's, Decoration day, Fourth of July, Labor day, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Night Work.

Section 1. Compositors and machine operators shall receive not less than $23 per week, eight hours to constitute a night's work. Foremen shall receive not less than $27 per week. It is agreed that should a man work more than two weeks at a stretch that he will receive $24 per week.

Sec. 2. The regular hours of work shall be between the hours of 6 P. M. and 7 A. M.

Sec. 3. All overtime shall be paid for at the rate of one price and one-half.

Sec. 4. Legal holidays and Sundays shall be paid for at double price. Holidays are New Year's, Decoration day, Fourth of July, Labor day, Thanksgiving day and Christmas.

Apprentices.

Section 1. Apprentices shall not be less than 15 years of age at the time of beginning their apprenticeship and shall serve for a period of five years. The first six months shall be a probationary period.

Sec. 2. An apprentice during the first year shall do the work required of an errand boy, and may carry proofs, prove galleys, break up forms and sort leads and other materials. During the second year he may do first-year work when there is no first-year apprentice, and shall be taught the case, to distribute type, to set reprint, insert corrections, and similar work assigned to him by the foreman. During the third year he may do first and second-year work if he is the junior apprentice, and shall be taught to set straight matter, jobs, heads, ads, etc., from manuscript. During the fourth and fifth years he shall be taught to do the work required of journeymen in all branches of the business, and during the last six months he may practice on typesetting or typecasting machines, provided he does not displace a journeyman operator.

Sec. 3. The hours of labor and working conditions for apprentices are to be the same as provided for journeymen. Apprentices shall at all times be under the supervision and control of the foreman. Other regulations in relation to apprentices are governed by the International Typographical Union constitution.

Sec. 4. One apprentice to five journeymen regularly employed; two to ten; three to fifteen; and not more than three in an office.

Sec. 5. The scale for apprentices shall be as follows: Third year, $8; fourth year, $12; fifth year, $15.

The Lockport Union also agreed to the allied printing trades council agreement in relation to the label which your representative drew up, and voted to form an allied trades council in Lockport. I have been urging the local repeatedly to go into this, but until now no action had been taken. This will be a good thing for the city, and I feel that it will correct many of the abuses to which the label has been subject.

Your representative has been in close touch with various locals throughout his jurisdiction and believes he has been able to be of material assistance in more than one instance through advice given, copies of communications having been retained, but which are not of sufficient general interest to make their incorporation in this report necessary. A better understanding of our laws seems to be one of the great needs of many local officers, and I have tried to furnish such information on every occasion possible.

The courtesy and consideration given me in my efforts by officers and members of local unions are fully appreciated and I unhesitatingly express my thanks for the same. Also wish to thank the International Typographical Union officers for promptness and courtesy shown me on all occasions.

Respectfully,

Buffalo, N. Y. CHARLES E. KINSKEY.

REPRESENTATIVE M'LOUGHLIN.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—As an introduction to the following partial report of the work intrusted to your representative during the fiscal year ending May 31, 1917, covering New Jersey and part of New York state, organization work and that of scale negotiation, must say that the continued prosperity of the International Typographical Union has assured to the membership the usual financial advantages during the past year the high cost of paper and local conditions in the preparation of proposed increases of scales making my work extremely difficult to handle and carry to a satisfactory termination, time and patience being the great factors.

The apprentice question continues to receive the attention it deserves in numerous localities where the scarcity of good material for the job and ad room becomes an important factor in the development of the apprentice into the future printer.

During the period of the negotiation of scales it has become a habit of your representative to call attention to the fact that in the drawing up of the apprentice scale much thought has been given to the proposition of how much money the young man will receive, too little consideration being given to the necessity of surrounding the hoped-for future printer with safeguards that will enable him not only to become a journeyman, but a thorough workman when the five years of apprenticeship have been completed.

With the development of the practical side of the apprentice question, your representative has found that newspaper managers and employing printers are amenable in a majority of cases to any reasonable proposition and scale that gives promise of producing the results desired, but prefer that the I. T. U. Course should be completed during the fifth year.

Organization work among the foreign-language printers was again taken up and considerable time spent and expense incurred in an endeavor to create an enthusiasm which would become permanent in the maintenance of a union when organized, but in handling Polish, Lithuanian, Russian and Greek printers, the last-named was the single exception that did not become indifferent when the constitution and by-laws was adopted, and registration fee, assessments and dues became fully known and a period of six months or one year was fixed upon as the minimum period before a new scale could be made, approved and enforced.

The Russian newspapers are gradually seeking to become unionized and two dailies have joined the ranks during the year, being under the jurisdiction of Hebrew-American Union No. 83.

In the Hungarian field, the printers on the Nepszava (People's Voice) secured a voluntary increase of $2 a week, the scale and contract of Hungarian Union No. 440 not expiring until November, 1917.

The necessity for organization work in New Jersey and New York state having presented itself during the fiscal year just closed, your representative has been able to devote some time to ascertaining where profitable and stable work could be accomplished. This has resulted in showing that south Jersey may prove to be fertile soil—Vineland, Millville, Bridgeton, Glassboro, Hammonton, Egg Harbor, May's Landing, Red Bank, Long Branch, Burlington and Mount Holly having been thoroughly gone over, with Cape May, Wildwood and Ocean City to follow.

During the first week in June, by request of President Scott, your representative undertook to organize a force of Polish printers to cover a daily paper in the west, but after securing a sufficient number of men from the Robotnik Polski, the matter fell through, to my great relief, as the printers secured preferred to remain in the east.

Another organization of printers, the Greeks employed on the two New York dailies, was also taken on early in June and the work continued to the point where a constitution and by-laws had been adopted, when, in September, contrary to my advice, the printers on Atlantis struck regarding the discharge of one of their number, thus ending my usefulness, as no charter fee had been accepted, nor charter petition forwarded to headquarters.

The organization of the mailing department of the Hungarian People's Voice was taken up on June 15 by your representative and Organizer McArdle, Mailers' Union No. 6, the work being carried to a successful conclusion by the latter.

At South Norwalk, Conn., on June 17, was completed the negotiations for the pending scale of Norwalk Typographical Union No. 529, the increase of $2 covering a period of two years, as follows:

NORWALK TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 529.

May 1, 1916, to May 1, 1917.

Floormen, jobbers and operators	$17 00
Machinist-operators	19 00

May 1, 1917, to May 1, 1918.

Floormen, jobbers and operators	$18 00
Machinist-operators	20 00

Covering Dover and Union Hill, N. J., in June, by direction of President Scott, your representative succeeded in settling two disputes which bid fair to injure both organizations through the personalities indulged in.

On June 24, at Albany, N. Y., met President Rifenberick, No. 4, concerning the settlement of the strike in the Boyd Printing Company, that plant having had enough of the non-union printers imported from Long Island, Chicago and various other points of the country, the contract with Albany Union No. 4 having additional attractions.

In June, on the 28th, at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., took up the question of a bonus being paid on the linotype machines in the jurisdiction of Saratoga Springs Union No. 149, under orders from President Scott, which resulted, after months of visiting, examining the books and going into the affairs of Saratoga Springs Union generally, in an increase for the handmen, the installing of a new set of officers, the bonding of the secretary, the purchasing of a complete list of supplies and the placing of the organization on its feet. Also insisted on having meetings held regularly, communications answered, and the business of the union attended to along the lines laid down by the officers of the International Typographical Union. The final results were most satisfactory, the changes proving beneficial, and your representative received the desired encouragement from the membership; likewise, the increase was paid from October 2, 1916, to March, 1917, the negotiations extending over several months, when finally the contracts were signed.

July 1, at Elmira, met President Guy B. Morgan, Elmira Union No. 19, concerning a dispute of Harrison the Printer with the pressmen, which resulted in the office going on the unfair list, the trouble being settled by Organizer Dowling, International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, and your representative on the 19th, during the sessions of the New York State Allied Printing Trades Council, held in Binghamton.

Covering Olean, Salamanca, Jamestown, Canandaigua, N. Y., as a preliminary step to further organization work, I returned to New York to meet Manager Martin, Hudson Dispatch, at Union Hill, N. J., on the 5th of July, regarding the question of the status of the Sunday Inquirer, which resulted in its classification as a Sunday newspaper, paying the night scale.

July 10 to 13, at Binghamton, with President Southwick, Binghamton Union No. 232, took up the question of the organization of the printing plant of Senator W. Hill, meeting the gentleman at Johnson City in an endeavor to have the jurisdiction of Binghamton Union extended should the eight-hour day be granted.

The work was continued during the convention of the New York State Allied Printing Trades Council at Binghamton, July 17-21, but unsuccessfully, the forty-eight-hour week being granted during the stress of the presidential campaign, when the Endicott-Johnson Company granted the hours to all employes of their numerous factories.

Late in July, during the quarterly meeting of the Union Printers' League of New Jersey, your representative, under instructions, began the negotiations that, in conjunction with President Bright and Secretary Lester, Union No. 377, during August and September, resulted in the organization of the Sunday Gazette under the jurisdiction of Atlantic City Union and the discharge of a non-union man who had masqueraded for two weeks at Pleasantville as a member of Trenton Union No. 71.

The question of overtime pay for machinists on two Jewish dailies—a half-hour from 6:30 to 7 A. M., the starting time—took too much attention, considering the smallness of the matter, due to the procrastination of the men involved, but was finally settled after wearisome months of delay, No. 83 having decided in the early stages that the money was due and payable.

On August 1, at Little Falls, N. Y., had the pleasure of attending the meeting of the common council, at which time a resolution was presented on behalf of Little Falls Union No. 386, calling for the use of the label on all printing, the result of the vote indicating that the board was unanimous, 8-0.

A lockout on the Italian newspaper La Voce del Popolo, August 2, caused your representative's return from Norwich, N. Y., on the 4th, to find that Manager Zuecca had managed to publish a paper of some kind every day, but under your representative's instructions, President Saltini, Italian Union No. 261, assisted by the members of the chapel, withdrew the operators and the pressman, thus paving the way for the return of No. 261's members on the 8th, after being out six days.

The trouble on La Voce del Popolo and failure to pay the members of the chapel regularly only hastened the demise of the paper a few months later, when the plant shut down, owing a week's wages to the men, and the sheriff put the lock on the door.

At Somerville, N. J., early in August, took up the question of the printing handled by the Johns-Manville plant in conjunction with work at Bound Brook and Flemington, but little was accomplished, as work on the road prevented a prolonged stay; a second visit in December established the fact that only two printers were employed, both men holding cards of Plainfield Union No. 399.

A telegram to President Scott on Sunday, August 20, requesting services in New Brunswick, N. J., on Monday, was turned over to your representative.

On arrival, met President Venable, Vice-President Doyle and the discharged men, Messrs. Austin and Keen, the Home News operators, whose priority had been ignored in the lay-off. As all the linotype machines were dark, no composition had been produced for that day's paper and the office had been notified that no slugs could be handled until the men illegally discharged had been reinstated.

With Vice-President Doyle, at once got in touch with Manager A. Boyd, informing him of the working of the law and requested the men's reinstatement, which was granted, the operators in question returning to work on the 22d.

A special meeting of New Brunswick Union No. 307 was held on August 22, when the reinstatement of the discharged men was announced and a claim for the day's pay was referred to President Venable for collection, the money being included in the regular pay roll following and the matter brought to a close.

Late in August started organization work in Little Falls, which had for its object the closing up of the Journal and Courier trouble.

Proceeding to Watertown via Utica met the officers of Watertown Union No. 308 and in co-operation with President Welsh evolved an organization scheme which seems likely to produce the desired results.

Covering Ogdensburg and Malone on the 30th and 31st of August, endeavored to organize the Evening Telegram, in the latter city, but Manager Redfield convinced me that the time was not opportune to maintain a permanent typographical union.

Arriving in Montreal on September 1, found a letter forwarded from New York stating that the printers of Plattsburgh desired to hold a meeting and perfect an organization.

At Plattsburgh, N. Y., on the 2d, met John M. Derby and the printers and arranged for a meeting at labor temple hall at 7:30 P. M., the meeting adjourning to Sunday, the 3d, at 3:30 P. M., when a temporary organization was planned.

On September 15 and 16 a temporary organization was completed and the permanent body got together, the charter petition filled in and the constitution and by-laws adopted and forwarded to President Scott for approval. The charter was subsequently granted and Plattsburgh Typographical Union No. 769 was instituted on October 7, your representative, under orders by telegraph from President Scott, proceeding to Montreal that night and attending the meeting of Montreal Union No. 176.

In September, on the 14th, while handling the organization work at Plattsburgh, took up the question of the negotiation of an increased scale with the scale committee of Saratoga Springs Typographical Union No. 149, which had been in abeyance for some months.

Continuing the work with the committee on my return from Plattsburgh and Montreal on the 18th and 19th, was enabled to complete its adoption and forward same to President Scott for approval before presentation to the employing printers for acceptance or negotiation.

Returning to Saratoga Springs on October 4 from Elizabeth, N. J., continued the scale negotiations with the committee and Manager Walbridge, the Saratogian, and by the 6th the scale in question had been presented to and accepted by Saratoga Union. The scale, giving an increase of $3, dating from October 2, 1916, to October 1, 1919, is as follows:

SARATOGA SPRINGS TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 149.

Hand Men and Job Printers.

Day Work.

October 2, 1916, to October 1, 1917	$16 00
October 1, 1917, to October 1, 1918	17 00
October 1, 1918, to October 1, 1919	18 00

Night Work.

October 2, 1916, to October 1, 1917	$19 00
October 1, 1917, to October 1, 1918	20 00
October 1, 1918, to October 1, 1919	21 00

Operators.

Day Work.

October 2, 1916, to October 1, 1919	$18 00

Night Work.

October 2, 1916, to October 1, 1919	$22 00

In September, while handling the Saratoga Springs Union No. 149 scale and organization work at Plattsburgh, N. Y., your representative took up an organization scheme regarding Greenwich, Conn., and also New Rochelle, N. Y., the officers of New Rochelle Union No. 527 proposing to make an effort to organize the Knickerbocker Press by holding a meeting for the special purpose of meeting the printers in the composing room and showing them the benefits to be obtained through membership in the International Typographical Union.

The meeting was arranged for and held on September 27, but was unsuccessful, the printers failing to attend on account of rumored threats of discharge the next day. Further work along new lines will probably be the result.

September 25, by telegram from President Scott, proceeded to Newark, N. J., meeting President

Gottlob, Union No. 103, and President Edwards, New York Web Pressmen's Union No. 25, concerning a dispute on the new morning paper, the Newark Ledger, regarding the number of pressmen to be employed, the manager, L. T. Russell, and the pressmen's organization not agreeing as to number necessary to cover a seven-day paper.

After several conferences had been held, on the 26th and 28th, your representative insisted on a typewritten memorandum being prepared by both parties for submission at a meeting of Newark Pressmen's Union on the 29th, the decision of the meeting to be telegraphed to the Hotel Richmond, Little Falls, N. Y., where a dispute regarding the use of slugs purchased from a non-union office threatened to involve a contract and trouble for Little Falls Union No. 386.

Clearing up the dispute at Little Falls by tracing the slugs to a Utica foundry and the composition to a Syracuse house, both concerns having unwittingly helped the production of the slugs, your representative returned to New York on October 1 and proceeded to Newark on the following day to assist Messrs. Gottlob, Edwards and Russell in agreeing on a definite number of pressmen on the Ledger, and was successful in my endeavors, the new paper starting with all the mechanical departments union.

On completing the negotiations and closing the incident at Newark, so far as the International Typographical Union was concerned, proceeded under telegraphic instructions from President Scott to Elizabeth, N. J., where scale negotiations had been pending for some weeks—the book, job and newspaper scale—between the representatives of the newspapers and employing printers and the conference committee of Elizabeth Union No. 150.

Meeting President Martin, No. 150, and the conference committee on October 2 and 3, on the latter date with Manager A. Crane, Elizabeth Journal, arranged to postpone the negotiations to October 13 in order to permit of your representative handling the Saratoga Springs and Plattsburgh work, which had been deferred for some time on account of the urgency of the Newark Ledger dispute concerning the pressmen and the Herkimer County News trouble regarding the non-union composition, and to familiarize myself with some of the sections of the counter-proposition submitted, which had proved rather knotty for the scale committee.

Returning to Newark from Plattsburgh on October 12, met President Martin, No. 150, and the committee and arranged for a conference with Manager A. Crane and the employing printers on the 13th at 3:30 P. M.

The conferences covered the period from the 13th to the 17th, the scale as agreed on going before a meeting of Elizabeth Typographical Union on the night of the 16th and accepted by a large vote, the scale to date from October 2, with pay, reading as follows:

ELIZABETH TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 150.

Newspapers.

Hand and Machine.

October 2, 1916, to April 1, 1918	$25 00
April 1, 1918, to October 1, 1919	25 50
October 1, 1919, to October 1, 1921	26 50

Three dollars additional for night work.

The third increase to $26.50 is dependent on the state of trade in the newspapers—that business conditions warrant the increase from October 1, 1919.

Book and Job.

October 2, 1916, to April 1, 1918	$22 00
April 1, 1918, to October 1, 1919	22 50
October 1, 1919, to October 1, 1921	23 50

Three dollars additional for night work.

The third increase to $23.50 is dependent on the state of trade in Elizabeth—that business conditions warrant such increase from October 1, 1919.

One question was left in dispute—to local arbitration and then to national arbitration—that of whether Newark ads shall be considered as local business and whether mats of such Newark ads must be reset, and has been before the national board on appeal by Elizabeth Typographical Union No. 150 and remains deadlocked, the agreement expiring September 30, 1916, requiring the resetting of matrices of Newark advertisements, as well as those of Elizabeth advertisements, remaining effective.

At Binghamton, N. Y., on the 18th, 19th and 20th, with President Southwick, Binghamton Union No. 232, and S. Vail, of the Vail-Ballou Company, took up and settled adversely the claim for back pay of a Mr. Ganer, who claimed eight days' pay while awaiting reinstatement after a discharge. After taking the trouble to call on Mr. Ganer and insist that he specify the nights that he showed up, as on his statement in writing, if verified, would the claim be pressed, he failed to so write your representative, who, upon inquiry and after visiting the plant, was compelled to admit that the proof was insufficient on which to base an honest claim and therefore advised that the claim be dropped, and so reported to President Scott.

Proceeding to Albany and Troy, N. Y., arrived in Montreal, Canada, under orders from President Scott to attend the adjourned meeting of Montreal Union No. 176, on the 21st, the session being held in St. Joseph's hall on Saturday night, regarding the $2 increase granted by the local board of arbitration as applying to the morning newspapers. The award had been granted on September 15th to the Montreal Star chapel, day and night tricks, and not only accepted by the other evening papers, but also applied to the morning papers and pocketed by the members of No. 176, who claimed an increase of $2 more in order to make the differential of $3 between day and night work, although the mistake of negotiating the evening paper scale alone was of Montreal Union's own volition, having crept in because of the practice permitted one morning paper chapel of handling its scale before the advent of the second paper.

As the contract for one year had been signed and accepted, your representative could only offer his good offices in serving with a committee from the offices affected and the executive officers of Montreal Union No. 176, in meeting the managers of the Gazette and the Daily Mail and talking the matter over with them. They declined to go into the question of an additional raise pending the expiration of the contract in September, 1917.

The strike at Quebec on L'Action Catholique having progressed unfavorably, your representative was requested by the officers of Quebec Union No. 302 to look into the matter, and therefore spent October 23 and 24 with President Fusk, deciding, as an outcome, that considerable time would be required and proposed the placing of a definite proposition before President Scott.

At Plattsburgh, N. Y., on October 25, met President Lamarche and the scale committee of Plattsburgh Union No. 769 and practically drafted a proposed scale of prices for submission to President Scott for approval before placing the same in the hands of the employing printers.

The return visit to Quebec, December 1 to 4, proved unavailing, as L'Abbe Proulx declined to reopen the negotiations on the basis of placing L'Action Catholique under the jurisdiction of Quebec Union No. 302.

On October 31 and November 8, at Morristown, N. J., with President O. Steih, Morristown Union No. 522, and committee, completed the negotiation of the book, job and newspaper scale, to date from November 1, 1916, for one year, the scale as signed covering a night trick at a $3 differential and reading as follows, the increase being $1.50:

MORRISTOWN TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 522.

November 1, 1916, to November 1, 1917.

Job printers, admen, make-ups and stone hands	$19 50
Linotype operators, day work	22 00
Handmen, night work	22 50
Linotype operators, night work	25 00

In November, on the 6th, with Secretary Jerabek, Bohemian-Slavonic Union No. 131, took up the question of the apprentice scale amendment by direction of President Scott, the scale, as adopted and signed, carrying a $2 increase for a one-year contract and reading as follows:

BOHEMIAN-SLAVONIC TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 131.

September 1, 1916, to September 1, 1917.

Job and stone men	$20 00
Linotype operators	22 00

The scale of Elizabeth Union No. 150 having been accepted and paid by the employing printers of that city from October 2, your representative was surprised to ascertain, on November 15, that the Singer Manufacturing Company had not been consulted. Therefore, with President Martin, No. 150, presented a copy of the job scale to Superintendent H. J. Salzman on November 17, the increase being paid after some delay.

Your representative, while handling organization work at Bordentown, Burlington and Mount Holly, N. J., and Bristol, Pa., November 23 and 24, with a stop-over at Trenton, N. J., had a second-trick proposition presented covering 3 P. M. to 11:30 P. M. at night scale, which was declined in favor of a separate force on the ground that a trick from 6 P. M. to 2 A. M. at night scale was permissible, while the earlier hours would necessitate overtime rate, as the men would have to report next day. The scarcity of printers preceding the holiday prevented a solution and the proposition was dropped.

December 20 practically started the negotiation of the scale proposition that had been submitted to the book, job and newspaper employers by New Brunswick Typographical Union No. 307, your representative meeting President Venable and Secretary Smith and arranging to take up the negotiations when notified to do so by President Scott.

The telegram from President Scott was received on January 4 and on the 5th a conference regarding the proposed scale took place at the Mansion House without result and adjourned to the 6th.

At the meeting on the 6th a counter-proposition was made by the employing printers for presentation to a meeting of New Brunswick Union to be held on the 8th, which meeting rejected the counter-proposition and suggested a flat scale be insisted upon, the suggestion causing an adjournment to the 17th to accommodate my journey to Gloversville, N. Y., the scale of Fulton County Union No. 268 awaiting my arrival for negotiation. An agreement being arrived at, however, that the scale of New Brunswick Union would date from January 1 with any increase that should finally be agreed upon.

The meeting at the Mansion House, New Brunswick, on January 17, after some discussion, decided to accept a counter-proposition submitted by your representative on the basis of a three-year contract, the scale reading as follows:

NEW BRUNSWICK TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 307.

January 2, 1917, to January 1, 1920.

Job printers, handmen, stone hands, etc., from January 1, 1917, to July 1, 1918	$21 50
Machine operators, from January 1, 1917, to July 1, 1918	23 00
Job printers, handmen, stone hands, etc., from January 1, 1917, to July 1, 1918	23 00
Machine operators	24 00

New Brunswick Union, at a meeting held on the night of the 17th, by a unanimous vote accepted the report of its committee and adopted the scale as presented.

The negotiation of the proposed new scale at White Plains, N. Y., on behalf of White Plains Union No. 585, under instructions from President Scott, began on December 21 and continued on the 22d and 23d, but the refusal of the publishers and employing printers of White Plains to consider any increase until the members of No. 585 had definitely settled the policy to be pursued toward the three one-man shops had a decided effect on the meeting held on the 26th, which agreed to maintain the International Typographical Union law on the subject and grant the proposition as requested, a conference being arranged for the 27th at the Westchester News office.

At the conference on the 27th the general proposition was considered—money increase and term of contract—and an adjournment taken to January 2, 1917, to enable the question of the amount of money to be finally disposed of, which proving acceptable, the contract was made for four years and the increase divided as follows, the desire to acquire a flat scale proving attractive:

WHITE PLAINS TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 585.

January 2, 1917, to January 1, 1921.

	1917-18	1919	1920
Machine operators	$21 00	$21 50	$22 00
Machinist-operators	23 00	23 50	24 00
Floor and admen	20 00	21 00	22 00
Foremen	23 00	23 50	24 00

Late in December, 1916, preceding the scale conference at Hoboken, N. J., your representative met a committee of Union Hill Union No. 110 and Hoboken Union No. 323 concerning a proposed consolidation of Union Hill and Hoboken Typographical Unions under the charter of Hoboken Typographical Union No. 323 for business reasons.

The work, after considerable delay in arranging details and obtaining the consent of the members of Union Hill Union No. 110 and the executive council of the International Typographical Union, was consummated in April, 1917, followed by the signing up of the Hudson Dispatch, Union Hill, on May 12.

On December 28, by direction of President Scott, crossed the river to Hoboken, N. J., and took hold of the negotiations, in conjunction with the officers and scale committee of Hoboken Union, covering a proposal to increase the newspaper scale by $1—to $30—for day work and $33 for night work.

Digitized by Google

At the conferences on the 29th and 30th the question of the proposed increase was coupled with the number of printers to be employed, the agreement made four years previous having guaranteed the employment of twenty-seven men in the composing room as the minimum force.

The meeting of the committee and your representative with Manager Seide was successful in agreeing on the money end for a two-year contract at $29.50 for 1917 and $30 for 1918, with a $3 differential for night work, but failed to agree on the number to be employed in the Hudson Observer chapel, the scarcity of white paper making the question doubtful. An adjournment was made until January 2, 1917, when a solution was to be worked out acceptable to both the Observer management and Hoboken Union.

The conferences on January 2, 3 and 4 with Mr. Seide, the committee of Hoboken Union No. 323 and your representative resulted in the lay-off proposition being sidetracked unless the scarcity of paper demanded a reduction to ten or eight pages, when the chapel committee of two and the management, after consulting the foreman, would decide on the number, the contract to date from January 1, and the scale reading as follows:

HOBOKEN TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 323.

January 2, 1917, to January 1, 1919.

Newspaper Scale.

Admen, make-ups, linotype and monotype operators, proofreaders—January 2, 1917, to January 1, 1918 ..... $29 50
January 1, 1918, to January 1, 1919..... 30 00
Night work shall command an increase of $3 over day work.

On April 28 the Hudson Observer, through Mr. Seide, paid the $30 to the Observer chapel, evidently in keeping with that gentleman's statement during the negotiations that the relations of the Observer management with the International Typographical Union and Hoboken Union were so cordial that the payment of the $1 increase would have been a pleasure had not the white paper situation become so acute.

On successfully closing the scale negotiations at White Plains, N. Y., and Hoboken, N. J., and postponing the work at New Brunswick, N. J., hurried to Gloversville, N. Y., under orders from President Scott, arriving at the Kingsborough on January 9 and meeting President McClain and the scale committee of Fulton County Union No. 268 regarding the increased scale proposition pending from January 1.

The arrangements for a conference with the publishers and employing printers that night fell through on account of John B. Judson having a pressing business engagement on his hands, but a conference was held at the Leader-Republican office on the 10th, lasting less than an hour, only one question arising and that decided without any hesitation in favor of Fulton County Union No. 268—a two-year contract with $1 increase each year, the money payable from January 2 and the scale reading as follows:

FULTON COUNTY TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 268.

January 2, 1917, to January 1, 1918.

Day Work.

Floormen $18 00
Machine operators 19 00
Foremen 20 00

Night Work.

Floormen $20 00
Machine operators 21 00
Foremen 22 00

January 1, 1918, to January 1, 1919.

Day Work.

Floormen $19 00
Machine operators 19 00
Foremen 20 00

Night Work.

Floormen $21 00
Machine operators 21 00
Foremen 22 00

As the signing up of Johnstown was overlooked during the negotiations in January, your representative covered that part of Fulton County Union's jurisdiction on February 9 while handling the pending scale negotiations at Amsterdam, N. Y., on behalf of Amsterdam Union No. 274.

While occupied with the scale negotiations on behalf of Fulton County Union No. 268, your representative stopped overnight at Amsterdam, N. Y., meeting President F. Van Dycke, Amsterdam Union No. 274, who assured me that the increase of $1.50 requested would be granted, the conferences being entirely harmonious, and that ten days' time in which to formulate the answer had been granted. That was on January 10.

On February 6 President Scott telegraphed your representative to proceed at once to Amsterdam and handle the pending scale negotiations.

Arriving on the 7th, held a conference with the officers and scale committee at The Barnes and was then informed that the promised answer had arrived in the form of a counter-proposition on the 3d, which was produced and proved to be a contract for a period of five years from March 15, 1917, without any increase.

After arranging for a meeting with Managers Kline and Reynolds on the 9th, ascertained that the date of the expiration of the old contract had been carried forward one month—from February 15—because the notice of change of scale, due on December 15, had been held back by the secretary of No. 274 until January 3 in order that some members might participate in a money presentation.

At the conference on the 9th, held in the Evening Recorder office, your representative declined to take up the negotiations pending a meeting of Amsterdam Union over the postponing of the expiration of the agreement, claiming that any postponement must be for one year and that any negotiations should be based on the amount of increase requested, $1.50.

The meeting of No. 274 was held on the 13th at G. A. R. hall and it was unanimously decided that the proposed new scale should date from February 15 and that the basis of negotiations should be along the lines of the amount requested and for a period of three years.

The negotiations following my return on the 25th, 26th and 27th were very pleasant, the increase asked for, $1.50, not only agreed to, but paid from the financial week of the 12th, the scale figures signed later on, providing for three years, are as follows:

AMSTERDAM TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 274.

February 15, 1917, to February 15, 1920.

Day Work.

Admen and job printers..$18 00
Linotype operators 19 00

Night Work.

Admen, make-ups, etc....$19 00
Linotype operators 21 00

Proceeding to Little Falls on the 15th and 16th, met the officers of Little Falls Union over the question of completing the pending negotiations with the Journal and Courier management concerning the unionizing of the composing room, but the information gathered from President Currie not being encouraging, your representative deferred the work temporarily, insisting that the negotiations covering the proposed new scale, due on March 1, proceed at once.

Returning to Little Falls on March 29, following the completion of negotiations at Poughkeepsie and Saratoga Springs, was informed by the officers of Little Falls Union that nothing had been accomplished, the figures offered proving unacceptable.

On a visit to two offices ascertained that a counter-proposition of $1 for 1917-18 and $1 for 1918-19 had not been acted on; therefore had the offer placed before a meeting of Little Falls Union No. 386, which rejected the proposition on the ground that the money was already paid in one office.

In my report advocated the counter-proposition, as no tangible reason had been assigned and in late April the contracts were signed for two years, the scale figures reading as follows:

LITTLE FALLS TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 386.

March 1, 1917, to March 1, 1918.

Day Work.

Handmen and linotype operators..$16 00

Night Work.

Handmen and linotype operators..$18 00

March 1, 1918, to March 1, 1919.

Day Work.

Handmen and linotype operators..$17 00

Night Work.

Handmen and linotype operators..$19 00

The negotiations with Messrs. Burney and Stebbins, Journal and Courier, on May 3, were unsuccessful, the three applications for membership in Little Falls Union being returned to your representative.

Early in March, by request of the printers working in Roslyn, Hempstead, Freeport, Rockville Center, Nassau county, undertook the work of organizing a typographical union on Long Island.

The five meetings held in March, April and May show that the growth of the printing business—the second largest industry in Greater New York and probably in the Empire State—indicate that something should be done toward extending the work on Long Island in the near future.

On March 12 to 17, at Trenton, Burlington, Mount Holly, Atlantic City, Hammonton, Egg Harbor, May's Landing, Vineland, Millville and Bridgeton, N. J., your representative started an organizing tour that closed on Sunday, May 6, when Atlantic City Union No. 377 accepted the report of its scale committee which announced that the new scale, an advance of $3, had been accepted by the publishers and employing printers of Atlantic City and Pleasantville, the increased wage dating from April 30, the contracts signed for one year from May 1 and the scale figures reading as follows:

ATLANTIC CITY TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 377.

May 1, 1917, to May 1, 1918.

Day Work.

Job printers and handmen...$20 00
Machine operators 21 00
Foremen 22 00

Night Work.

Job printers and handmen...$21 00
Machine operators 23 00
Foremen 25 00

The organization work as planned was continued on May 9 and 10 covering Ocean City, Sea Isle City, Cape May, Court House and Wildwood, and the work as now laid out provides for the placing of at least one charter in south Jersey and one in west Jersey, as the demand for the label is on the increase, the attractiveness of the literature issued by the International Typographical Union becoming more pronounced, as evidenced by the results recently obtained in Watertown, N. Y.

A telegram from President Scott on March 22 to report at once in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., concerning scale trouble, was received, and on the 23d, with President Gunn and the scale committee of Poughkeepsie Union No. 315, arranged a conference with Manager Tobey, Sunday Courier, for the 26th at the Young Men's Christian Association rooms.

The meeting on the 26th discussed the reason for a refusal to grant an increase, but arrived at no conclusion, adjourning to the 27th, when a counter-proposition of an increase of $1 from March 1, 1918, to March 1, 1920—three years—was rejected because the proposed increase was deferred for one year, the conference committee of No. 315 and your representative agreeing to present the proposition to a meeting of Poughkeepsie Union.

As the meeting on April 2 unanimously rejected the proposition, a conference was held on the 3d and adjourned to the 12th to enable a figuring out of the various increases proposed, an agreement being reached, however, that whatever the increase might be the scale would obtain as of March 1.

On the 12th, at Judge Spratt's office, after rejecting a 50-cent increase for one year, a counter-proposition was made and accepted that made the $1 increase payable in six months and the figures read as follows:

POUGHKEEPSIE TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 315.

March 1, 1917, to September 1, 1917.

Day Work.

Linotype operators, handmen, job printers, stone hands $19 50

Night Work.

Job printers, handmen, linotype operators, stone hands $20 50

September 1, 1917, to March 1, 1919.

Day Work.

Handmen, stone hands, job printers and linotype operators $20 00

Night Work.

Stone hands, linotype operators, job printers and handmen $21 00

As the proposition proposed and accepted had to be ratified by a meeting of Poughkeepsie Union, a meeting was held on Monday, April 16, and unanimously voted to accept after the report of the scale committee had been read and discussed.

The success, so-called, attending the introduction of improved machinery and methods of production in one penal institution, having for its object the teaching of prisoners the use of the latest mechanical devices in the printing craft, has led other reformatory institutions to endeavor to copy the method pursued, but in a perfunctory manner, your representative is happy to report, and therefore no permanent results will obtain. This fact can be assured the members of the International Typographical Union, although it behooves the sister organizations to be on guard during the legislative sessions to prevent well-meaning but impractical reformers from attempting to introduce amateurish methods of trade education in reformatories and penal institutions that may result in the production of half-baked printers, to the detriment of everybody, including the prisoner, to say nothing of the expense incurred by the state in purchasing supplies.

The foregoing was written after two visits in May to institutions in sister states, after the activities of various superintendents had led your representative to fear that inroads might be made in producing state work to an extent sufficient to warrant watching, but all doubts in my mind were dispelled after a careful examination of the plants and methods in these institutions.

On May 8 your representative accompanied a committee of the Union Printers' League of New Jersey to a hearing before Governor W. E. Edge, at Trenton, N. J., the object of the hearing being the New Jersey reformatory's printing plant and its proposed expansion.

The conference was followed by a visit on the 17th to the institution in question, situated near Rahway, by the committee and your representative, meeting there the commissioners and the superintendent who afforded every opportunity for a close examination of the plant, with the probable result that the outcome will prove satisfactory to the Union Printers' League of New Jersey and the printers of that state.

The middle of May saw the scale of Newark Union No. 103 a settled fact after going through both local and national arbitration for one year, President Scott proving the medium by which a settlement and an increase of $2 was obtained.

Your representative returning from Cape May via Camden, N. J., stopped over at Newark to attend the meeting of Newark Union No. 103 on Sunday, May 13, and was present when the vote was taken on the proposition to accept the report of the conference committee, which was carried by a vote of 97 to 13, the scale figures reading as follows:

NEWARK TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 103.

Newspaper Scale.

Machine operators, make-ups, admen and proofreaders, January 1, 1917, to June 1, 1917	$29 00
Machine operators, make-ups, admen and proofreaders, June 1, 1917, to January 1, 1920	30 00

Night work, $3 above day scale.

On May 23, under instructions from President Scott, proceeded to Middletown and Goshen, N. Y., in an endeavor to sign the contracts covering the Goshen papers which had been hanging fire for months, although the increase of $1 had been paid.

The conference with Managers Gregg and Jackson on the subject lead your representative to look for an adjustment following the June meeting of Middletown No. 463, which your representative hopes to attend.

At Camden, N. J., May 25, 26, 28 and 29, by orders from President Scott, met the publishers and employing printers with the officers of Camden Union No. 132 regarding the refusal to sign the usual scale contract, which has been pending since January, the insertion of an objectionable paragraph, which sought to destroy the principle of the International Typographical Union closed-shop agreement being the bone of contention, the increase agreed on, $1 for one year, having been paid.

As your representative practically convinced all but one employer that the sought-for paragraph was totally unnecessary, look forward to the signing up of the publishers and job printers of Camden before the meeting of Camden No. 132, to be held on June 7.

The results that have been attained during the past year, without resorting in a single case to a strike vote, prove over and over again that the business methods as laid down through the International Typographical Union offices are an incentive to its representatives and productive of a feeling of security to the employing printers and the membership of the International Typographical Union.

In conclusion, I wish to thank the members of the unions visited, who desired my good offices, for the courtesies extended and for the support given by the officers and members.

I desire to tender my sincere thanks to President Scott, Secretary-Treasurer Hays and the executive council for the hearty support accorded me at all times during the year, including promptness in acknowledging correspondence.

Fraternally submitted,

New York, N. Y. J. E. McLoughlin.

REPRESENTATIVE MITCHELL.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—In submitting my annual report, it is pleasing to chronicle the fact that in the northern part of California matters connected with our organization have been very satisfactory. A few minor obstacles were overcome to the welfare of the International Typographical Union and at the present time the only matters which require adjudication are scale controversies.

While it is true that the section of our country east of the Rocky mountains has had an unparalleled amount of business, due, of course, to conditions on the other side of the Atlantic, this condition has not been so pronounced in the far west, but it is coming this way by degrees, and it is natural to expect that ere many months have passed that we in this part of the nation will be on a level with our eastern residents. This has tended to improve the printing industry more or less, and the consequence has been that our members have been quite steadily employed during the past year.

The leaflet sent out by our International officers several months ago, entitled "Somewhere in France," caused much favorable comment in this vicinity, and I am very much pleased to state that I was very successful in having the story written up and published in several of the newspapers in this jurisdiction. Advertising pays and our officials should be commended for their foresight in giving publicity to the people of the nation as to what the International Typographical Union is doing for its members and relatives.

San Francisco Typographical Union No. 21 has been very successful for the past several years in maintaining a school of learning for apprentices by giving a series of lectures monthly. This has been accomplished through the collaboration of the Franklin Printing Trades Association and the union. The representatives of the former—Messrs. Taylor and Roantree—have worked hand in hand with the union's committee—Secretary Michelson and J. W. Mullen—and the result has been that a better understanding has been reached regarding the duties of apprentices and what is expected of them. While the objects attained have been satisfactory, it is my firm belief that a great amount of good can be accomplished in the future if the members of our organization were to take more interest in the apprentice question, especially during the time of working, by doing their little "bit" in advancing the interests of the young men. It is to the interests of our unions that the apprentice should be turned out a first-class workman, and the journeyman printer is morally bound to do all in his power to accomplish this end.

By direction of the executive council, I attended the sessions of the state typographical conference in the city of Eureka last October. The sessions are held annually at the same time as the state federation of labor convention. While Eureka is quite a distance from San Francisco, the conference was attended by a number of delegates from affiliated unions. Several questions of great interest to the printing industry came before the conference, notably the high cost of paper and the printing of textbooks in the state printing office. Your representative submitted a proposition to the conference condemning the high cost of paper and calling upon the Federal Trade Commission to investigate the matter. The proposition was passed unanimously, and next day the state federation of labor went on record and passed the measure. The California representatives in the senate and house were supplied with copies of the resolution, and it is gratifying to note that the Federal Trade Commission has secured indictments of six of the largest paper manufacturers east of the Rockies and an arbitration agreement to sell at prices fixed by the commission, and at this time there is a special investigator in this territory looking into the affairs of the paper manufacturers. The textbook matter came before the last session of the legislature on the report of the special committee named at the previous session two years ago. While the measure adopted by the state typographical conference was amended in the legislature, the text is practically the same, and the proposition has received the signature of the governor and is now one of the laws of the state.

San Francisco Typographical Union is now about to negotiate a newspaper scale, having presented the proposition to the publishers last May. While it is premature to state what will be the outcome, rumors are rife that the publishers will demand arbitration under the code of procedure as laid down by the International Typographical Union and American Newspaper Publishers' Association. It looks to your representative at this time that a better feeling would be engendered between the union and publishers if the increase asked for at this time were granted instead of bickering for several months. There is no denying the fact that living conditions have gone beyond the means of the majority of our members and they are certainly entitled to the increase asked for. Some years ago San Francisco Typographical Union expended several thousand dollars in arbitration proceedings in negotiating a scale, and it is to be hoped that this experience will not be saddled upon the union in the present state of affairs.

The mailers of Sacramento have been unable up to the present time to obtain recognition from the publishers in Sacramento. But the members of the organization in that city are optimistic and are in hopes that when the present scale of Sacramento Typographical Union No. 46 expires at the end of the present year and negotiations are entered into for a new scale that the mailers will be placed in the position of asking recognition from the publishers in that city.

There have been quite a few printers living in unorganized territory in this section of the state who have become members of our organization through the efforts of your representative, and it is a pleasure to state that all of these members are more than pleased with their affiliation in our parent body.

While the Colorado Springs convention is three months away at this writing, I have been informed that it is the intention of several of the delegates to present amendments to the laws governing proprietor membership. This has been a matter of controversy in several sections of California and it is to be hoped that the delegates will give consideration to the propositions presented and decide in a way that will be of advantage to our membership.

With best wishes for a successful convention and many thanks to our executive officers for their courtesies during the past year, I remain,

Fraternally,

San Francisco, Cal. G. E. MITCHELL.

REPRESENTATIVE PENDERGAST.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—The report submitted covers in a general way my work in Michigan and Canada for the year ending May 31, 1917. To enter into details regarding activities in the smaller towns of the state would take up considerable space and too much of your time, therefore mention will be made of the more important questions which were referred to me for adjustment.

On recommendation of the Michigan Federation of Typographical Unions, at their convention held in Battle Creek, June, 1916, that a representative be appointed to take up the work of educating and bringing into the fold of unionism the neglected country printer the executive council commissioned me, in addition to adjusting scales and settling differences arising between employers and employes, to this task. I feel warranted in saying the results achieved along this line will prove of great benefit particularly to larger cities. It has been a recognized fact and admitted by officials who have the administration problems to solve, that small towns are a feeder for non-union shops in securing help when trouble arises, the field agents of these concerns gathering a man or two from each town with alluring offers and misrepresentations until they get a sufficient number, and place them to work under non-union conditions. These country printers are usually honest, clean young men who, possibly through no fault of theirs, have got a wrong start, and when local union officials present their argument and explain the beneficial features of the International Typographical Union in an effort to induce them to become members of the union, they meet with the just complaint—"we did not know much about the typographical union. Had we this knowledge before, we would not have thrown up our positions to accept non-union situations." In one large shop in Detroit, where trouble existed and a strike ordered, in the neighborhood of 200 non-union men, at different times, were induced to refrain from assisting in defeating the cause for which the union was on strike, many joining the union. Of this number 80 per cent were brought from country towns, and in many instances the complaint quoted given.

In places where there are several printers the employers, on learning a representative of the International Typographical Union was in town, would become alarmed, reduce hours and raise wages to discourage affiliation with the union. However, I wish to state it has never been the object to create a feeling of discontent or encourage the country printer to leave his present occupation; on the other hand, I endeavor to induce him to remain, but when he does decide to make the change to the city I try to impress on him to come clean and join the typographical union. They are pleased and grateful for the interest taken in them. The literature presented, bearing on the Union Printers Home, old age pension, death benefit, I. T. U. Course of Instruction for apprentices, is appreciated and read with interest and can not help but bring results beneficial to the entire membership.

The country employer is skeptical and suspicious of the motives behind the attempt to organize his printers, a cool reception following the introduction and explanation of my mission. After considerable time is consumed in making it clear he will soften just a little and remark that so far as our effort to induce the printers to remain at home with them is concerned we are doing a good work, wishing us success, but would rather we would not enlighten them too much on organization, and what it stands for.

On request from the officers of Flint Typographical Union to President Scott that a representative be sent to assist in negotiating a new scale and also do some organizing work among the non-union printers in that city, I was instructed to report there. With the splendid assistance from the officers of that local we negotiated their present scale. This union holds an annual celebration of the birth of their charter, which is one of the popular events of the year; so successful have they become a larger banquet hall will necessarily be secured in the future to seat the guests. It was my pleasure to be present at the last one and was thoroughly convinced of the good derived from the commingling and exchanging of opinions of men in various lines of business.

I was notified to go to Saginaw and assist in adjusting the newspaper and job scales, which were negotiated in a very friendly way by the employers and officials of the union, substantial increases being conceded. Some months later a question of priority arose in the composing room of the Saginaw News. Chapel, executive committee and union meetings were held to straighten out the mixup, but were unsuccessful, and things began to look serious. On receiving word from President Scott to go there I found a chaotic condition which took several conferences between the interested parties to overcome. Charges and countercharges were made to the union against different members. Appeals to the executive council against decision of the union. However, insistence on the observance of International Typographical Union law brought a satisfactory settlement.

During the absence of Representative Kinskey with the New York national guard in Texas I was sent to London to assist that union in securing a new scale. With the help and co-operation of President Wheatley and the members of the scale committee, whose work is deserving of especial mention, we not only secured one of the best scales written but succeeded in inducing the publishers to sign an International Typographical Union contract, the first one in the history of the old-time union. Several non-union men, employed in job shops, were induced to join No. 133. Two of the larger offices raised wages and reduced hours to satisfy their men, telling them it was folly to make application to the union when they receive the same benefits without paying dues.

Members of St. Thomas Union became delinquent in dues, stood suspended; the local officers were unable to persuade them to pay up. Meetings were held and investigation showed eight were suspended, who would have to settle according to International law. In justice to these men I desire to say that, with one exception, they settled willingly, placing the cause of their predicament to their own carelessness. The one referred to finally paid up. Judging from expressions heard this condition is not likely to occur again in St. Thomas.

Visited Chatham Typographical Union for the purpose of stimulating union principles and strengthening the local; several printers in that town keeping aloof from the union in the hope that the other fellow will better his deplorable condition.

I succeeded in placing charters in Sturgis and Hastings. Strong opposition was made by one employer in Sturgis, threatening to discharge any man in his employ who joined, but the threat did not have the desired effect.

The Michigan Federation of Typographical Unions held a convention in Battle Creek which brought results from an organization standpoint not only to printers but to every trade union in that city. Shortly after the convention I spent some time there, and with the valuable, energetic work of D. D. Robertson, president of No. 420, the printers are 95 per cent organized. Union labor placed a ticket in the field at the municipal election last spring and won all the way from mayor to constable. Battle Creek is no longer referred to as Post's open-shop town.

I visited Kalamazoo during a labor forward movement, this being one of the cities in Michigan which is poorly organized. Attempts were made to unionize Ihling Bros. & Eberhard, who have the contract to furnish state departments with supplies, but without success.

Escanaba Typographical Union requested the services of a representative and President Scott ordered me there. The proprietor of a daily paper, with job shop in connection, refused to sign scale or contract. It was always a union shop and employed about half of the membership. His objection was that a one-man shop, owner a practical printer, giving employment to no one other than himself, violated the law and kept his office open all hours during the night and day, entering into unfair competition; that the union insisted on the larger shops paying price and one-half after regular hours. On investigation the officers of the union found these conditions did exist; notified the proprietor of the small office repeatedly of the irregularities. He promised to be good but drifted into the irregular habits again. The union took the label away and passed a law that only when an office employed at least one printer could they have the label. This was satisfactory to the proprietor of daily paper, who signed scale and contract.

I visited Marquette and Negaunee to see if a charter could be placed. There are about twenty-five printers in the two places; being only a few miles apart; a charter will undoubtedly be requested. Mr. Russell, warden of Marquette prison, is one of the owners of the Mining Journal, the leading daily paper in that city, which is a non-union and nine-hour shop, wages none too high. I visited the prison and was shown through by an official. Later I asked for and was granted an interview with the warden, who insisted that I go through the prison again on an inspection tour. He said he desired to demonstrate the humane treatment accorded inmates, displaying considerable pride in the uplift work he was doing for mankind. I told the warden I saw more contented and smiling faces among the prisoners than I did in his composing room on the Mining Journal. He replied by saying: "Why not, my men in prison get three good wholesome meals a day; soft, clean bed to sleep on; work only eight hours per day, and have no responsibility whatever." When the comparison of the treatment given his employes, with families and responsibilities, the low wages, longer hours, was made, he said he believed the typographical union was doing good work and he had no objection to the printers in his employ becoming members, yet he did not want conditions in his shop disturbed nor unionized. When I told the men of his having no objection to their joining they willingly expressed themselves in favor of seeking a charter; but then, while Mr. Russell did not object, his other half—Mr. Hornstine—threatened to close his doors if the men would do such a thing. Of course, the men believed him, and the fear of starving to death had the effect of taking away their manhood and independence. The warden does not have to foot the bill of paying for working conditions in his prison, therefore it comes easy for him to grant them there.

A proposition was introduced in the Michigan state legislature to have state printing done in penal institutions—Jackson prison being prominently mentioned as the logical place. A committee was appointed by the speaker of the house of representatives to look into the feasibility of the measure and report back. O. L. Hildebrandt, president of the Michigan Federation of Typographical Unions, immediately got busy and set the machinery working in the federation. Nearly every local in the state responded with telegrams and letters of protest. A hearing was granted a committee from Lansing Union. They wired me to come and be present at the hearing. The committee of the house reported to the legislature in favor of submitting an amendment to the constitution to the people, permitting the state to do the printing as outlined. This required a two-thirds vote, which failed of passage by twelve. The introducer of the amendment then requested it lay on the table, which was granted. He then started a campaign to get the twelve necessary votes to put it over. I remained in Lansing some time assisting to defeat the proposition. When the motion was finally made to lift the amendment from the table it was defeated decisively, and that will end it for at least two years. (It was necessary for me to visit one or two small towns to interview members of the legislature and seek their support against the passage of this bill. This explanation will possibly satisfy a few curious members who just sat tight and criticized unfairly regardless of injustice being done.)

The cities of Monroe, Owosso, Mount Clemens, Marquette, Mount Pleasant, Alma, Ithaca, Menominee have been visited, and prospects are that locals will eventually be placed in existence in some of the above named shortly.

In conclusion, I wish to thank President Scott and Secretary Hays for their valuable assistance in the work undertaken by me. I also desire to thank the officers of different locals in the jurisdiction for the courtesies and co-operation accorded me in the performance of my duties.

Fraternally,

Detroit, Mich. J. E. PENDERGAST.

REPRESENTATIVE PULVER.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—I herewith submit my report for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1917:

Considerable time was given between June 1, 1916, and January 19, 1917, in an effort to assist Denver Mailers' Union No. 8 in securing a new contract and scale with the Denver publishers. The Rocky Mountain News and the Denver Times (Shaffer papers) contended against any increase, and the Denver Post argued it was opposed to either an increase or a contract. The Denver Express (Scripps League) did not oppose the mailers' contentions at any time.

The mailers' proposition was among the first submitted to the newly-organized Industrial Commission of Colorado when the law became operative August 1, 1915.

Briefly, this "panacea for all industrial ills" was a legacy to the working people of the state bequeathed by a governor and legislature not particularly noted for its fairness toward labor, at a session following the industrial conflicts in the coal fields.

The law had the backing of such stalwart supporters of fair labor legislation as the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company (Rockefeller) interests, Mackenzie King and other corporations and their representatives.

Among numerous other provisions, this industrial commission law empowered the three commissioners (appointed by the governor): To invade union meetings. To prohibit workmen from leaving their employment until after thirty days' notice to the industrial commission, and the period of compulsory service may be extended at the will and pleasure of the commission. To fine workmen $10 to $50 per day for violation of anti-strike provisions. To fine workmen from $50 to $1,000 and also imprison them for advising other workmen to leave their employment.

The mailers' case, in conformity with this law, was submitted to the industrial commission. Several conferences were held between representatives of the mailers' union, the daily newspapers named and the members of the commission. No progress was made, and it early became the opinion of some of those active from the labor viewpoint that they were carrying a particularly heavy handicap for the following reasons:

The industrial commission board was a partisan political body; the downtown Denver newspapers were very influential along political lines—their publishers, editors, business managers and high-class attorneys possessed an immense influence at the statehouse; while, on the other hand, the mailers' union was a small organization, without material political influence, but putting up a determined fight so far as its ability and finances would permit.

The law provides it shall be unlawful for a union to strike to enforce any demands pending an investigation by the board; public hearings to be held (if requested), and an award by the commission, but the latter body has no authority to enforce its awards when rendered. After months of conferences, etc. (all of which time the mailers being under an expense they could ill afford to bear and compelled to work under the old scale and conditions), No. 8 demanded a public hearing on their case. The demand was granted, and again dilatory tactics and a few public hearings kept the case before the commission until December 9, 1916, more than fourteen months from the time the case was originally referred to the commission.

When the law was proposed it was argued by its supporters that it was sought to provide for "a cooling off" period between the presentation of demands on the part of labor unions and the time an effort could be made to put such demands into effect. It is submitted that the period elapsing in this case—more than fourteen months—was quite sufficient to "cool off" the most enthusiastic trade unionist. As a matter of fact, it would have thoroughly discouraged the average working man (as it was probably intended to do), but the mailers' union was not made of that kind of material. A most remarkable award, or opinion, was finally handed down by the commission. But it was not unanimous—two signing the majority opinion and one member a dissenting view. On account of the determined fight made by trade unionists of Colorado against this un-American legislation and the probability that an attempt to enact similar laws may be made in other states, the full text of the opinion in the mailers' controversy is herewith submitted for the consideration of all concerned.

The opinion follows:

Mailers' Union No. 8 vs. the Post Publishing Company and the Denver Publishing Company.

OPINION.

This matter comes before the Industrial Commission of Colorado through a demand by employes of the Post, News and Times, through Mailers' Union No. 8 against the Post Publishing Company and the Denver Publishing Company, which issues the Rocky Mountain News and the Denver Times.

Negotiations had been going on between the union and these newspapers for over a year, and the union appealed to the industrial commission to exercise its power of investigation. An investigation was ordered and evidence taken from time to time and the commission now renders its decision.

At present the Denver Post employs from six to eight men in the mailing department, and the News and Times employ from two to four men in this department. The present wage scale of the mailers for these papers is $3.12½ for eight hours' work. The demands of the mailers' union, as shown in their contract, are as follows:

"The following scale of wages shall cover all offices: Foremen, three dollars and seventy-five cents ($3.75) per day or night, week days or nights; four dollars ($4) for Saturday night and Sunday morning. All overtime shall be paid for at the rate of time and one-half."

It is the contention of the employes that the cost of living has greatly increased; that the mailers are not paid proportionately as high wages as mailers in other cities of the country, and that they are not paid in proportion to the other employes of the papers, and that the owners of these papers are making large profits and are able to pay the increased wages demanded. The union also demands certain changes in working conditions which will be hereafter discussed.

We scarcely think that it can be any longer denied that the cost of living has increased. It has increased materially in the last month, and is still going upward. The increase is a serious one. It affects every home in the land, and it presses most severely on the homes of those who work for wages and who have but little of this world's goods. To a man with a large family who has a small income, it is a serious and difficult problem to adequately provide for his family with the cost of living at the high point it has now reached. The wages of the mailers in Denver are not perceptibly lower than those in other cities, but this view of the matter is of slight value in this case because, while the wages of mailers in other cities furnish some standard for indicating what the wages of mailers in Denver ought to be, the newspaper business is different from any other business in that there is practically no competition between the newspapers of cities situated at widely different points of the country. For example, there is practically no competition between the Denver Post and the Houston Post. Probably two-thirds of all the readers of each paper will be found within a radius of ten miles from the plant where the paper is published. Newspapers in different cities do not compete with each other in the sense that dry goods or lumber firms or building contractors compete with each other, or even as manufacturing plants compete with each other.

Newspapers in Denver, through their representatives, have urged several objections to the granting of the demands, two of which we wish to consider. The first is, that the work of the mailers is unskilled and that, therefore, they should not receive any further increases in pay. This contention is true, in part, and relatively speaking, but not wholly true. The work of a mailer is not as skilled as that of a stereotyper or that of a linotype operator, yet it involves considerable skill and accuracy, and could not at first be done accurately by an inexperienced hand. To properly use the mailing machine and fasten the labels on from two to three thousand copies of paper in an hour, to get the addresses all correct, and to send the right papers to the right town, is by no means an unskilled operation. But, granting that the work of the mailer is not as skilled as some other craft, we must not allow this to be a determining factor in the wage controversy before the commission. The phrase "skilled labor" has been overworked, and does not mean as much as it is supposed to mean. In a sense, every laboring man is performing skilled labor and the application of his brain and muscle to his task involves a degree of skill. The difference between his work and the work of what is commonly known as a skilled workman is a difference only in degree. We must not make distinctions that are too sharp between the so-called unskilled laborer and the skilled laborer. We must not dismiss the claims of a man for higher wages because he belongs to the class that is called unskilled. It is the so-called unskilled laborer who is at the lowest stratum of the industrial scale. He is the man about whom society must chiefly concern itself. If it is a serious thing for the laborer and his family and for society when the laborer is without proper standards of living and without proper income to provide the adequate means of life and to elevate his family, and if society is suffering because labor is underpaid, then these conditions become doubly serious when we consider the lot of the lower strata of labor. It is as serious a thing for society for the child of a coal miner to grow up in poverty and crime as it is for the child of a railroad conductor to grow up in poverty and crime. There is much more need for elevating the lowest class of labor than there is for adding a little to the income of the highest paid labor. For these reasons, we believe that the argument against granting the demands of unskilled labor loses force. We do not mean to say that all demands of unskilled labor should be granted. Every case must be judged on its own merits. Nor do we mean to say that unskilled labor should be paid as high as skilled labor. There is, in fact, not the slightest danger of this ever happening in the present state of our industrial life. We are simply meeting the argument of those who contend that if labor is unskilled, its wages should not be increased, and pointing out the danger of carrying this doctrine too far.

The other point which the newspapers raise is that they can not afford this increase at this time. One of the papers admitted through its counsel that it was making a profit, and in the case of that newspaper there can be little doubt that it can meet this demand. The other paper has invited an inspection of its business and books, and has submitted a statement of its present earnings which shows that it can not pay this increase at the present time. Both of the papers state that the high price of material, particularly of print paper, has heavily increased the cost of production and that this is an additional reason why the increase can not be granted.

This question of the abnormal increase in the price of print paper presents a very serious situation for all newspapers and publishers. The increase to the Denver newspapers is from 65 per cent to 75 per cent in cost, and as the cost of print paper represents 40 per cent of the total cost of the production of any newspaper, it is obvious that any material increase in the price of print paper represents a serious hardship to a newspaper. It will make many thousands of dollars' difference to the newspapers involved in this controversy to pay the increased cost of print paper during the coming year. Before the European war began, print paper could be purchased for at least $2 per hundred pounds, and as the price is now from $3.35 to $3.30 per hundred pounds, f. o. b. the mill, this tremendous increase in the cost of print paper must be taken into account by all readers and patrons of newspapers. It is not a cost that can be shifted as easily as the increased cost of foodstuffs. The labor cost of producing a paper is about 55 per cent of the total cost, and this tremendous increase in the cost of print paper, representing, as it does, so great a factor in the total cost of production, must be considered in every wage increase demanded. It has been represented, and, we think, successfully, that this increase, together with other cost, makes the increase demanded in wages impossible in the case of the Denver Publishing Company.

Complaint has been made that the rooms in which the mailers work are unsanitary and that the toilet facilities are unsanitary and inadequate. The commission has personally investigated the rooms where the mailers work in the newspaper offices of these two plants. It is of the opinion that the toilet facilities are inadequate in both places and should be enlarged and that different means should be found for ventilating the toilet rooms. As to the unsanitary conditions of the rooms where the mailers work, we do not believe that these conditions are such as can be described as unsanitary. When we consider that the heavy presses must be on the lowest floor and that as a rule the mailers should be close to the presses for the purpose of facilitating the handling of the paper, we can not expect the mailers to work in rooms which are as light and as airy as those occupied by the linotype operators or the reporters. We find the quarters in both newspapers fairly adequate to the conditions. The circulation of air could be improved in both these rooms, but some overcrowding, due to the rush of work, must necessarily be expected. In the case of the Post, the mailers are on the second floor above the press; their room is of good size and is well lighted, and is an unusually satisfactory room for mailers. The ventilation of the toilet should be changed, and the toilet facilities improved and enlarged, but the room itself is, in our judgment, a good one for men employed in the work of mailing. While the room at the News and Times is not so well lighted as the one at the Post, it is clean and sanitary, and is well adapted to the work which is carried on in that department.

It has been urged upon the commission that any finding in this or any wage case where such close competition is involved should be a blanket finding; that is, that the scale should be uniform for plants engaged in like business in the same community. The commission believes that this rule should be followed in this case because of this keen competition, and while it finds that on the record the Post Publishing Company might pay more wages, the Denver Publishing Company can not. It is, therefore, our opinion that no increase can be recommended at this time.

THE INDUSTRIAL COMMISSION OF COLORADO,
E. E. MCLAUGHLIN, Chairman,
F. P. LANNON, Commissioners.

MEMORANDUM OF OPINION.

IN THE CASE OF THE MAILERS VS. NEWS, TIMES AND POST.

Upon the general statements made in the majority opinion in this case, I am in hearty accord with my colleagues. I endorse fully their position upon question of unskilled labor and the need of the men for higher wages and their statement that one paper can pay the wages and the other can not. The point upon which I disagree with them is as to their recommendations. They are of the opinion that if there are two or three plants in a given community and a higher wage scale is demanded in all of these plants and one plant can not give it and the other can, that the demand should not be granted; their position being that there should either be a "blanket" raise or no raise.

There is something to be said for this principle. But in my opinion it is a principle that should not always be applied and should be given very limited weight at any time. I believe it should not be applied in this case. I believe that if a plant can pay the wages demanded and the demand is a just one, the commission should recommend that the increase be granted. My objections to the principles upon which the commission decided the case are two in number.

1. That if the rule of a uniform raise or uniform decrease is to be followed, an increase in wages could not be recommended by the commission if in any given community where two or more employers are engaged therein, one employer made a showing that he could not afford to pay the increase. This would result in the poorest employer in the business fixing the standard of wages for that business, so far as the recommendations of the commission are concerned.

2. If, in a given city, there were nine employers in the same line of business, eight could pay the increase and one could not, would it be said that there could be no recommendation of an increase because the recommendation could not be uniform for all of the nine plants engaged in the business?

It seems to me that this would be a travesty upon justice and utterly unfair. It might even prove unfair to some of the employers who desired to pay higher wages.

This is not a case where all the employes of the plant are involved nor where the wage scale demanded is in a very large proportion to the total pay roll of the plant. There is not time to elaborate my views on this question, but it will be sufficient to file this memorandum opinion, concurring in part with my colleagues, but dissenting on the abstract economic principle which they have laid down and its application in this case.

It is also my view that where an employer states to the commission that he is unable to grant a certain increase in wages as demanded and offers to submit his books and accounts to the commission to justify his statements, it is the duty of the commission to audit these accounts and determine whether the employer can pay the increase or not, or in the event the commission does not audit the accounts, it is the duty of the commission to find that the increase can not be given. These remarks apply in the case of the News-Times, which has taken this position before the commission.

Respectfully submitted,
WAYNE C. WILLIAMS.

Third Vice-President Charles N. Smith came to Denver following this award, and negotiations were started looking to a close of the mailers' negotiations. January 18, 1917, contracts were signed between the union and the Denver Times, Rocky Mountain News and Denver Post for a period of five years, covering wages and working conditions during that period. (The Denver Express has also signed the contract and scale.)

Briefly, the contract includes a closed-shop clause, carries an increase of 15 cents per day all around (or practically a 5 per cent increase); and what the union has never before had, a joint standing committee section, and an arbitration clause for the extension or renewal of the contract, which, in our opinion, should forever preclude the possibility of the local union having again to go before the Colorado Industrial Commission. The contract and scale is not everything that might have been desired, but in view of local conditions, the almost uncompromising attitude shown by the publishers in this case, and the fact that we made a step forward and secured an increase, even though small, in the face of the adverse award handed down by the industrial commission, would seem to indicate that our efforts were not entirely unavailing. The presence of Third Vice-President Smith during the last period of the negotiations was of material assistance in closing up the controversy. He certainly was "on the job" every moment and his manner in dealing with the unwilling publishers had a beneficial effect. In Mr. Smith the interests of the International Typographical Union were particularly well represented. Officers, scale committee and members of No. 8 are also entitled to commendation. In this connection it might be stated that No. 49, of Denver, is at present negotiating a new book and job scale through its officers and committee, and that union has served public notice that it will completely ignore the industrial commission in its negotiations. Other unions have taken similar action and to the date of this report no suits have been instituted by the commission to enforce the generally accepted unconstitutional provisions of the act. While efforts to repeal the law at the last session of the Colorado legislature were not successful, the general ignoring of the pernicious sections of the act by trades unions negotiating new scales has practically made it a dead letter.

September 10, under instructions from the executive council, I went to Santa Fe, N. M., to assist No. 405 in its controversy with the State Record Publishing Company, of that city. The Record had not been in a very strong financial position for some time. Our members working there were unable to collect their wages. No. 405 gave the management written notice that unless all pay due our people was liquidated three days from such notice they would no longer work for the concern. The money was not forthcoming, and the men severed their connection with the paper. Their action was endorsed by the union. The union men who quit left Santa Fe. A few printers were brought in by the management of the paper, and some were assisted by the union in leaving. The plant was in bad condition; some two or three Mexicans and one American employed; a practically new typesetting machine was reported nearly ready for the scrap heap, and the weekly edition of the paper appeared anywhere from two to seven days late each issue. No. 405 signed a contract with the Record people in January, 1916, and that contract, if lived up to, would not have expired until December 31 last. It was evident to me, and this opinion was also that of the members of No. 405, that a contract with the concern amounted to little. If we were to sign up another, it would probably be broken soon, or, at longest, following the then political campaign. I declined to have anything to do with the Record manager looking toward another contract. The office was not in good financial condition; it would cost considerable money to bring printers in to straighten out the chaos wrought in the shop by the incompetent non-unionists employed there; with no guaranty that men so brought in would not have to quit the service of the concern in a short time on account of non-payment of wages. It was reported that the manager of the Record was figuring on securing a large amount of political printing from the republican state central committee (headquarters at Santa Fe) before the close of the campaign. The matter was taken up with the publicity manager of that body, H. B. Hening, who had complete charge of all printing done for the committee for circulation in the state, and he assured the undersigned "that all printing done for the republican state committee and for the use of their offices, in the future, would carry the union label." Mr. Hening made his word good. Inasmuch as the Santa Fe Record was not entitled to the use of the typographical union label, none of this work found its way to this shop. In bringing about this result, the writer desires to give full credit to the officers of our Albuquerque local and particularly to Thomas Hughes, city clerk of that city at the time, who is an active member of the typographical union, for assistance given and work performed.

From Santa Fe I went to Albuquerque, where, with President Turner and Secretary Harris, we took up with the officers of the New Mexico State Federation of Labor the subject of endeavoring to secure from the democratic state central committee the same agreement that the republicans had given us. The state federation officials readily consented to help us. Through our combined efforts the democratic state central committee also used the union label on its campaign printing, and practically all political printing in the state of New Mexico carried the label last fall for the first time.

Following the fall campaign, H. B. Hening, who had assisted us in placing the union label on political printing, was appointed publicity agent of the New Mexico State Land Board. The following correspondence is self-explanatory and the "emblem of fairness" is now conspicuous on much of this class of state printing issued from Santa Fe:

EDGEWATER, COLO., December 12, 1916.

H. B. Hening, Publicity Agent, New Mexico State Land Commission, Statehouse, Santa Fe, N. M.:

DEAR SIR—As a representative of the International Typographical Union, I request that you accept my sincere thanks for your fairness in causing the typographical union label to be placed on the printing issued by yourself from the headquarters of the republican state central committee during the late presidential campaign.

Our organization appreciates your friendship.

I have noted your appointment as publicity agent for the state land commission of New Mexico.

The state is to be congratulated upon securing your services. Results will undoubtedly be forthcoming.

We trust that you may find room for our union label on your publicity printing. It will not keep any prospective settlers out of your great state.

With compliments of the season, I am

Very truly yours,

FRANK J. PULVER,
I. T. U. Representative.

SANTA FE, N. M., December 15, 1916.

Frank J. Pulver, I. T. U. Representative, R. F. D. No. 2, Edgewater, Colo.:

MY DEAR MR. PULVER—I have your letter of December 12 and wish to thank you for your kind expression regarding my appointment to this office. Our effort will be to cover considerable ground in our publicity work during the next two years, and during that time we will be very liberal patrons of the printing establishments of the state.

In New Mexico my experience has been that the typographical union label goes along with good, attractive printing, and as that is the only kind of printing likely to be satisfactory in our work, you will be very likely to find the label, as usual, on everything ordered by me. With best wishes and the season's compliments,

Yours very truly,

H. B. HENING,
Publicity Agent.

September 18—Conference at Colorado Springs with President Scott and Secretary-Treasurer Hays.

September 20—Acting under telegraphic instructions from headquarters, I went to the towns comprising Bridgeport Union No. 755, to endeavor to straighten out the difficulties between our members and the publishers of that section.

The towns included in the charter are Alliance, Bridgeport, Gering and Scottsbluff. There are six newspaper offices (all with job plants) in the four towns named.

The facts were found to be as follows:

The union was organized April 30, 1916. About that time the publishers of the towns named (and of some five other country towns not directly affected by the local typographical union) organized the Western Nebraska Publishers' Association. A committee from the local union held several conferences with a committee from the publishers' association and on July 1 reached a tentative agreement. The publishers' association, for some reason, failed to concur in the report and agreement of its committee. From July 1 to the first part of September the officers of No. 755 failed to get any satisfaction from the publishers in regard to the proposed scale and contract.

About this time the publishers held a meeting and decided that no member of the association should sign a contract with No. 755, unless a majority of the members (there were eleven votes in the association, I was informed) should vote in favor thereof, and thereupon a majority voted against signing the contract agreed upon by the two committees; also the association adopted a motion (I have been shown copies of the proceedings embodying this motion, but was refused the privilege of copying same) declaring that if the members of No. 755 quit their employment in any shop in the association on account of the publishers failing to sign the agreement, then all other members of the association were to forthwith discharge all International Typographical Union members employed by them.

It looked like a fight, and our members, quite discouraged by numerous vexatious delays and the above action, made a mistake, and voted at the meeting of September 17 to "declare all shops in this jurisdiction unfair which had not signed the contract agreed upon at the conference of July 1, and forbade all members to work therein." In three of the six offices affected, viz.: The Bridgeport News-Blade, the Scottsbluff Republican and the Platte Valley Star-Herald, Scottsbluff, our members quit work.

The following correspondence and telegrams passed between President J. C. Thomas and Secretary J. H. Drips, of No. 755, and myself in regard to this phase of the controversy:

ALLIANCE, NEB., September 18, 1916.

Frank J. Pulver:

DEAR SIR—No. 755 is having "heaps" of trouble. Will try to explain. At our last meeting, in Scottsbluff, a motion was carried that this local "forbid" any member to work in the shops in this district that did not sign the agreement and scale by September 18. None of the members signed, and the fellows at Scottsbluff have walked out. There was no one from Alliance at this meeting except myself, and we are all working here at Alliance. None of the International officers had been notified of the vote taken at our last meeting. Is there danger of us losing our charter? We can gain nothing, I think, by having this "personal" strike, as I am sure none of the publishers will sign up under these circumstances. They all know that our action was not legal. Can you help us out? Please wire at my expense.

J. C. THOMAS, President No. 755.

The following telegram was received from Secretary J. H. Drips:

SCOTTSBLUFF, NEB., September 19, 1916.

Frank J. Pulver, Denver, Colo.:

At meeting on 17th union adopted motion declaring all shops jurisdiction unfair which had not this morning signed contract agreed conference July first, and forbade members working therein. Alliance men working. Two publishers would sign but for agreement publishers' association. Had we right to declare offices unfair? Can you come up? Think you could sign all.

J. H. DRIPS.

To President Thomas' letter I sent the following telegram:

DENVER, September 19.

J. C. Thomas, Alliance, Neb.:

Strike clearly illegal. Notify men to return to work at once or charter may be revoked. Men remaining at work will have International protection. Advise me of results.

FRANK J. PULVER.

To Secretary Drips I sent the following telegram:

DENVER, September 19.

J. H. Drips, Scottsbluff, Neb.:

Strike illegal. Men must return to work at once. Have wired President Thomas. Letter follows.

FRANK J. PULVER.

Before receiving my telegrams, I was told, the men became doubtful of the legality of their action and agreed to return to work pending word from headquarters or from myself. All men were reinstated in the offices of the News-Blade and the Republican. The publisher of the Star-Herald declined to put his men back to work. Upon my arrival I found some of the publishers quite indignant. They appeared opposed to any recognition of the union; against the eight-hour day; did not favor price and one-half for overtime; complained of the rash action of some of the members of No. 755, and really couldn't see why we had organized the local. A special meeting of the local was held at Scottsbluff. The controversy was discussed thoroughly and freely. We told the members emphatically that International Typographical Union laws governing strikes must be obeyed, and any further action of the sort they had taken would surely jeopardize their charter. Personally I called on every member of the publishers' association, including one who is reported to have said I would not be allowed to enter his office, and, if I did, I would promptly be ejected. (This gentleman is now running a union shop.) All publishers said they would stand by a majority action of their association in the matter of contracts; none would consent to sign unless a majority so voted, and but two of them intimated they would vote in the association to sign.

There also was a controversy in the association as to whether we would have to secure a majority of the six publishers affected or of the entire membership of eleven. Members of No. 755 were discouraged; they could see little chance of securing the necessary majority of either the six or the eleven. I went back to Alliance, but could get nothing definite out of the two publishers there. Alliance is a railroad division on the Burlington; the four transportation brotherhoods have lodges in that town, as well as the machinists and blacksmiths. They have considerable influence in the little city. I got in touch with officers of these organizations, put the case before them as being one of recognition of the union and the eight-hour day; I showed the transportation men the action of our Baltimore convention on their recent controversy. They promised me their support. This word reached the Alliance publishers. They were then willing to at least discuss the contracts with me. After several delays, I induced the president of the publishers' association, located at Scottsbluff, to call a special meeting of the association at Alliance. Eight of the publishers attended, including all six directly interested. With President J. C. Thomas and local Executive Committee Member Henry Van Horn, I appeared before the publishers' meeting, talked to them at length, argued and explained. An agreement was finally reached, embodying, among other things, the following: A closed-shop agreement with No. 755 for a period of three years. The eight-hour working day. A wage scale of $16 per week for the first year, $17 per week for the second year and $18 per week for the third year. Time and one-half for overtime. Apprentice rules and scale.

I was informed this agreement received the votes of five of the six publishers affected—the others not voting. Thus the publishers' solid front was broken and the permanency of No. 755 in all likelihood assured. Several typographical unions have been organized in rural Nebraska in the past fifteen or twenty years, but all have, for some reason, gone out of business, and No. 755 is the only local we have in that prosperous state, outside of Omaha and Lincoln. Concerted action on the part of publishers is said to be responsible for this condition in several instances. I was determined that Bridgeport Union should not be "killed off" in this manner, if it could be avoided. Contracts covering the above wage scale and label agreements were later signed with all offices in the jurisdiction of No. 755.

October 1—Sterling Colo., at request of local printers. Considered inadvisable to attempt organization at that time.

October 4—Under instructions, visited Grand Junction, Colo., to investigate complaint of a member as to certain internal affairs of No. 292, in which formal charges had been preferred against two members. An amicable adjustment was reached, which was concurred in by vote of the union. On my return trip I stopped in Leadville. On account of a marked revival in the mining industry in that section, No. 179 is again prospering, all members employed, the local is above the "dead line" in point of membership and prospects are good.

October 11—Pueblo, Colo., on Star-Journal arbitration case. (Since settled by the National Arbitration Board in favor of the contentions of No. 175.)

January 19—At the request of Trinidad No. 434, made a trip to that city and Raton, N. M., where, on January 23, I organized Raton Typographical Union No. 773, with ten charter members. Signed one-year contracts and label agreements with all offices in Raton, as well as those at Springer and Maxwell, N. M., for the new local. The scale is placed at $18 and $20 per week for the first year. No. 773 starts off with a 100 per cent organization.

January 27—At Pueblo. Was unable to secure sufficient number of mailers to apply for charter, but journeymen there agreed to make application to join No. 8 of Denver.

January 29—At Colorado Springs. Signed three-year contracts with the Morning Gazette, covering its mailing room, for No. 8 of Denver, carrying an increase of $1.30 per week. Contracts were later signed with the Evening Telegraph covering same department, for No. 8.

February 2—In response to wire instructions I went to Canon City, Colo., where a controversy was on between No. 425 and the management of the Canon City Leader over alleged violation of apprentice rules and other International Typographical Union and local laws. There appeared to be no question about the violations complained of. The office was declared unfair by No. 425 and the labels lifted from the shop. Up to this writing the controversy has not been adjusted and union members are not permitted to work on the Leader. While in Canon City plans were outlined providing for an increase of the scale of No. 425, which certainly needed adjusting. One publisher paid the undersigned the doubtful compliment of being an "interfering, outside labor agitator," but the scale has been raised $1.50 per week all around. Before leaving Canon City was called over long distance phone by President Erickson and Acting Secretary Braeme, of Trinidad, to come to that city at once to endeavor to straighten out a misunderstanding between No. 434 and the management of the Chronicle-News that threatened to sever the friendly relations between our union and that concern. Conferences were arranged and held between officers of the union, Manager R. E. McClung and Judge Jesse G. Northcutt, principal owner of the paper, and the writer. A satisfactory settlement of this complicated controversy was reached, and the same was accepted and ratified by the union.

February 12—Organized Laramie, Wyo., Typographical Union No. 775, with thirteen charter members. Later (March 2) I signed one-year contracts and label agreements with all Laramie officers for No. 775, the scale calling for $23 and $26, respectively, for day and night work. Much of the Wyoming state printing is executed at Laramie and the union label will hereafter be used on this work.

February 15—At Rawlins, Wyo. A sufficient number of journeymen were not available to form a permanent organization. However, all offices in this thriving little city have contracts with Rock Springs Typographical Union, pay the scale and use the label.

February 16—At Rock Springs, Wyo. Assisted the local officers in affairs relating to the welfare of the local. This union has since negotiated a $4.50-per-week increase in its scale.

February 17—Ogden, Utah. Conference with officers on proposed news and job scales.

February 22—Organized Typographical Union No. 776, at Idaho Falls, Idaho, with thirteen charter members.

February 24—At Pocatello, Idaho. Conferences with officers and members of No. 491. Two-year scale contracts have since been signed that give this "live wire" local a material increase and a scale that compares favorably with many larger cities.

February 26—Ogden, Utah. Conference with officers of No. 236 and publisher of Examiner on proposed scale. Arrangements made for a joint meeting between scale committee and Ogden publishers.

February 27—Logan, Utah. Deemed inadvisable to attempt organization at present. However, secured three applications for membership from unorganized town. This makes six members in Logan and we may expect a local there at a later date.

February 28—Salt Lake City. Progress may be reported in regard to the ultimate unionizing of the Deseret News. Several concessions have lately been granted the non-union employes on that paper and prospects are more encouraging than at any time in the writer's recollection. Secretary F. E. Morris, of No. 115, has the proposition well in hand; is an efficient, reliable official and entitled to the support of all concerned in this matter.

March 3—Cheyenne, Wyo. Conference with President George E. Merritt and Secretary Craig Lewis. Prospects good for signing the only non-union plant in Cheyenne. Results looked for soon.

March 7—El Paso, Texas, under instructions from headquarters. Some time previous No. 370 had petitioned the International to send a representative to El Paso to investigate conditions in the book and job branch and make an effort to unionize some of the unfair shops there. During my stay in that city I at all times worked in harmony with officers and members of our local, and officers and members of No. 370, particularly President G. A. Hoffman, rendered me all possible assistance. El Paso is a city claiming some 60,000 population. At the time of my visit it had one union label job office, employing three or four journeymen printers. (The two daily newspapers are strictly union.) To those members in well-organized territory this may seem a startling statement, but to those who are acquainted with the determined effort that has been put forth by union printers in that border city for the past twenty or twenty-five years to organize the printing offices of that town; to enforce an eight-hour day rather than the prevailing nine or ten-hour work period; to increase the general wage scale from the former peon pittance of $12 to $15 per week to $28.50 and $31.50 on newspapers and $24 for job offices—I repeat, that to those acquainted with these facts, No. 370 is to be complimented for the real progress made rather than censured for existing conditions. Cheap Mexican labor to a large extent enters into all commercial and manufacturing activities in El Paso. And recent revolutions and counter-revolutions in old Mexico have only added to the already large number of this class that reside in El Paso and its neighbor across the Rio Grande—Juarez. The statement is made that the city of El Paso has more inhabitants of Mexican birth than the entire state of New Mexico has of Mexican-born citizens. Business men—many of whom profess great loyalty to the United States, its institutions and laboring men and women—practically all are employers to a more or less degree of this cheap labor. And, furthermore, so far as the writer could learn, make little or no effort to ascertain whether the federal alien labor laws are lived up to or violated thereby. One has but to station himself at the American side of the international bridge at El Paso any morning from 6 to 9 o'clock to be convinced that thousands of laborers cross each day from Mexico to work in El Paso, and return each night to enjoy the "benevolent" protection of whichever Mexican government has control of Juarez at the moment. Is it reasonable to assume that none of these thousands of alien laborers are coming across daily in conflict with our federal labor laws? To quite an extent this Mexican labor problem enters the commercial printing business. In some of the non-union printing offices of El Paso, so the writer was informed, ten or a dozen of these Mexicans were employed at from nine to more hours per day and at a wage scale said to range from $11 per week down. And it would be hard to believe that of the many such employed in the El Paso printshops all live on this side and none in Juarez. In one shop, we were told, this condition prevailed: A former American printer had owned a fair-sized office in an interior Mexican city. Revolutions became too frequent for him and he closed up shop, returned to El Paso and engaged in business. He had two Mexican printers across the border, and the same two are now with him. They constitute his printing force. A vivid imagination would not be required to figure out a violation of the alien labor laws in this case. I am informed it is no easy matter to institute federal suits in that section for violation of this act, to some extent, perhaps, due to public sentiment and the further fact that practically all of the employing class is to some degree interested in this cheap labor. Chances of rectifying this abuse seem to have been lessened by recent orders issued by officers in Washington providing for the admission into the United States of aliens from Mexico otherwise barred by the contract labor clause of the immigration law.

The question of attempting to secure the Mexican printers as members of the local union or under a separate Spanish-speaking charter was given careful consideration. Those best qualified to express an opinion were unanimous in the view that such action would be of very uncertain value, if not most dangerous. As an illustration, the writer was told of one Mexican printer there who had three times been initiated into No. 370, and is willing to be again; now being employed in a non-union shop. Few of them seem to grasp the principle of the American labor movement, and in most cases are quite undependable from a union viewpoint. The few white printers employed in these non-union shops are principally machine operators, and practically all, at one time or another, have been members of the union and proved recreant. Personal interviews with several of them did not impress me as to their value to the local union or the International. President Hoffman and the undersigned called on all of the larger non-union shops and endeavored to convince the proprietors that union conditions and union labor were far the most satisfactory and profitable, but without apparent result. The two daily newspapers —Herald and Times—are each conducted as union establishments, and nearly the entire membership of No. 370 is employed thereon. The isolation of El Paso—nearly 700 miles from an American industrial center or large city; the Mexican labor problem; proximity to the border; lack of favorable public sentiment, and the limited trade union support on account of the unorganized condition of many crafts, all tend to make the situation confronting No. 370 a difficult one. The loyal membership there has put up a good fight and they will win—in time. It is no one-month job.

April 8—Organized Silver City-Deming Typographical Union No. 781, at Silver City, N. M., with twelve charter members. This number includes all journeymen printers in the two towns. A scale calling for from $18 to $21 per week was adopted, and I signed one-year contracts with all offices in Silver City and Deming for the new local.

April 11—Albuquerque, N. M.

April 12—La Junta, Colo. No. 722 had endeavored to negotiate a new wage scale with the publishers of La Junta and Rocky Ford. The old scale called for $18 per week, both hand and machine. The union in its new scale had demanded an increase of $2 per week, divided in two steps of $1 each. The publishers of the two towns named had got together and decided business conditions would not warrant any increase at that time, and had so notified the local in writing. There had been a rumor of non-union men being imported in case the union insisted on the increase, and the membership was rather worked up over the situation. The controversy had been referred to the Colorado State Industrial Commission, and that body had promised a hearing at a later date, which was finally set for April 19. On my arrival, I at once got in touch with the officers of No. 722. They admitted the negotiations had come to a deadlock, with little chance of getting together. Then called on the individual publishers, listened to their interpretation of the case, and secured a promise of a conference between them, a committee from the local and myself. At this conference the publishers submitted statements to prove their contention that business would not warrant the increase asked. We pointed out the low wage paid in La Junta, as compared with other Colorado towns; insisted it was difficult for our men to support their families on the existing scale, etc., and finally reached an agreement with the La Junta publishers as follows: An immediate increase of 50 cents per week, over the $18 scale, to October 15, 1917, to $18.50 per week. October 15, 1917, to April 15, 1918, $19 per week. April 15, 1918, to October 15, 1918, $19.50 per week. October 15, 1918, to April 15, 1920, $20 per week. Good apprentice rules and scale were secured, providing among other things, "apprentices during the last two years of their service shall take the I. T. U. course in printing." This gives No. 722 a three-year contract, with a gradual increase reaching $2 per week at the end of eighteen months.

Later I signed contracts with each of three newspapers (two weeklies and one daily) in La Junta and two weekly newspapers in Rocky Ford. When it is taken into consideration that less than four years ago at the time I organized this local, a good machine operator was working a nine-hour day for $12 per week in La Junta, the new scale of $20 per week for an eight-hour day would seem to indicate that the local union has proved a good investment for its members. Another gratifying feature of the amicable and satisfactory adjustment of this controversy is the fact that the settlement and increase was brought about without having to submit to any interference on the part of the Colorado Industrial Commission. In my opinion we made a better bargain than any award we might have received from the commission would have given us.

April 21—Ogden, Utah. No. 236 had adopted a scale and contract covering journeymen and apprentices and working conditions on newspapers, as well as a new contract and scale for book and job offices. The local executive committee had held several conferences with the publishers without result—the publishers declining to grant a single concession. This deadlock bid fair to continue, and No. 236 requested assistance from the International Typographical Union. After reaching Ogden and thoroughly going over the situation with local officers, I arranged a conference between the publishers and the scale committee. After several meetings an agreement was reached, which in turn was ratified by the local union. (The full text of the contract and scale is printed in The Bulletin of June, 1917, issued from Indianapolis.) Contracts were signed with both daily papers—the Examiner and the Standard—for a four-year period, from May 1, 1917, to May 1, 1921, embodying, among other things: A change from the heretofore existing piece scale on machines to a flat time scale for all journeymen in the composing rooms. A scale of $5 per shift for day work; $5.50 for night work. This gave the handmen an increase of $4.50 per week, operative at once. Apprentice rules and scale for the first time in this local. One section under this head provides:

Beginning with the fifth year of apprenticeship, apprentices shall be required to pay to the secretary-treasurer of the union the sum of fifty cents (50c) per week for the purpose of taking up the I. T. U. Course of Printing, until the amount of tuition has been paid, and the union shall advance the sum required as payment for the said tuition. Apprentices shall not be considered as journeymen until they have received certificates of graduation in said course. Apprentices may choose which course they prefer.

Sanitary regulations were agreed to that will compare favorably with the best in the International Typographical Union. Conferences were also arranged and held with the job employers, and an agreement reached and one-year contracts signed that give foremen and journeymen each an increase of $3 per week, effective at once. The new scale calls for $4.50 per day for foremen; $4 for journeymen; machine operators, day, $5; night, $5.50. Apprentice rules and regulations provide, among other things:

During the third year of apprenticeship an apprentice shall receive 40 per cent of the journeymen's scale; during the fourth year, 50 per cent; during the first half of the fifth year, 60 per cent, and during the last half of the fifth year, 75 per cent of the journeymen's scale. All apprentices shall be duly registered with the officers of the union.

Apprentices shall be physically fit, shall have the rudiments of a common school education and be able to read manuscript intelligently. The foreman and chairman shall examine apprentices on January 1 and July 1 of each year to determine whether they are making satisfactory progress. The foreman shall make a written report of such examinations to his employer. The chairman shall report to the union. Said reports shall be preserved for reference when apprentice applies for journeyman membership. If a foreman finds that an apprentice is unfitted to become a competent and satisfactory journeyman, the apprenticeship shall be terminated at once.

Contracts were signed with each of the nine commercial printers of Ogden, and for the first time in thirty years No. 236 now has signed contracts with all newspaper and job offices in its jurisdiction. The tireless efforts and energetic, able assistance of President Thomas S. Feeny, jr., and Secretary C. G. Riser, of the local scale committee, contributed in no small degree to this satisfactory adjustment.

In concluding this report, I desire to say that official duties in the period covered herein have taken me from Alliance, Neb., to Silver City, N. M.; from Idaho Falls, Idaho, to El Paso, Texas; traveling altogether more than 10,000 miles in this intermountain section. Union conditions, generally, in this section are good; there is scarcely a town with eight journeymen printers that has not a local of the International Typographical Union. Wage increases and improved working conditions have been obtained by local unions in several jurisdictions not mentioned in this report. Applications for membership from unorganized towns have been secured through correspondence. And, incidentally, the correspondence covering a territory as extensive as this intermountain country has grown to no small proportions. Many outside locals and employing printers in unorganized towns have made the undersigned a clearing-house through which competent help is obtained, and, I am happy to say, many a good union printer has been connected with a desirable country situation through this agency. Officers and members of local unions have assisted in every possible manner, and without that help there might have been different results. Their help is acknowledged and I assure them all it is duly appreciated. Official relations with headquarters have been harmonious, and thanks are hereby extended for promptness in dealing with matters relating to this district and for many courtesies shown by members of the executive council of the International Typographical Union.

Fraternally,

Edgewater, Colo. FRANK J. PULVER.

REPRESENTATIVE SCOTT.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Below will be found a report of the work in this section of the country for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1917. No attempt has been made to cover all the work performed by the representative during the period mentioned, as a report of this nature would not permit it.

The work of the representative the past year has been largely outside of Los Angeles, two months alone having been given to legislative work in Sacramento, and the major portion of the balance of the year has been spent in the interests of our local unions in the southwest.

Leaving out the Los Angeles situation, the past year has generally been a prosperous and successful one for our locals. Several of our unions have increased their scales, and all of them have maintained their former standing or moved forward.

With the exception of some sections of Arizona, where the copper market has been exceptionally high, and therefore stimulated business, conditions have been bad, from an industrial point of view, in this section of the country. Particularly is that true of southern California. We have not felt any of the "eastern boom" in this "neck of the woods."

During the past year Los Angeles Typographical Union No. 174 succeeded in raising its newspaper scale. President Seth R. Brown headed a committee that recommended, after several weeks of negotiating with the local publishers, that a scale calling for $33 for night work and $30 for day work, the seven-and-one-half-hour day to prevail, for a period of two years, be entered into between the local union and the publishers. The union accepted this recommendation, and the above scale was signed.

At the time this report was being prepared Los Angeles Union had a committee working on a new job scale. An endeavor will be made to have the job scale increased. The last increase the jobmen received was in January, 1914.

Speaking of the Los Angeles situation, no claim is made that we have made great headway. Although we have raised the newspaper scale the past year, and a new job scale is now pending, which will undoubtedly bring an increase to that branch of the business, conditions have not greatly improved. The same old antagonism to organized labor is everywhere apparent. But we have done some better than hold our own. To those who understand industrial conditions in Los Angeles this means something. Men on all sides are waiting for the dawn of a better day—and, at times, it becomes discouraging. But the spirit of our membership can not be broken. It is that spirit that has kept our organization where it is at the present time. Los Angeles is no place for any one who doesn't possess a large amount of optimism. It is necessary.

We have the Times situation to contend with on the one hand and the unorganized state of the job printing industry on the other. The union label is not any too popular in this section. We have offices employing none but union members that will not use the label. These offices are perfectly willing to employ none but members of the typographical union in their composing rooms—but they do not care to be advertised as offices entitled to use the union label. While we do not have a great many offices on our label list, we have many members who find employment under strictly union conditions in offices not to be found on the list of label offices. We make the best of that condition.

During the past year or two the Los Angeles Times has been the defendant in several lawsuits. Damages have been given plaintiffs to amounts that nearly reach the $100,000 mark. The publisher of the Los Angeles Tribune and Express was given a verdict for $30,000 by a jury the past year. In commenting on that verdict a local newspaper had the following to say: "This verdict has administered a death-blow to brutal journalism. There is not a man or woman in Los Angeles but from this verdict receives additional safeguards against unwarranted attack. There is not a household in Los Angeles that is not surrounded by increased protection. No longer will it be possible for brutal journalism to invade the sanctity of the home and with obscene hands drag out its secret sorrows for public ridicule. No longer need upright citizens fear they will be exposed without just cause to merciless publicity intended to degrade them in the judgment of the community."

Finding that the courts would, if necessary, protect the people of Los Angeles against the ravings of the Times, those in charge of that paper evidently concluded to seek other quarters in which to scatter their libelous untruths. In an article entitled, "The Social Sins of Sacramento," the good people of that city were treated to a sample of just how the Times plays the game against those who have the good judgment to differ with the policy of the paper and with its attitude toward organized labor. The article was a typical Times article—such an article as is usually found in blackmailing sheets.

The Sacramento Bee, commenting on the article editorially, had this to say: "It is such a mass of falsehoods throughout that the first impulse was to consign it to the waste-basket. On reconsideration, however, it was deemed best to simply publish it, just to show what a Munchausen the Los Angeles Times is; for this letter is only a sample of the average correspondence from this city and elsewhere of that paper. It was old Commodore Vanderbilt who said of a son-in-law: 'There are many kinds of damned fools, but Elliot F. Shepard is more kinds of a damned fool than any other man I know.' Likewise there are many kinds of damned liars, but the Los Angeles Times is more kinds of a damned liar than the sum of all the other publications of its character in California."

The above is merely given to show how the Times works. There is nothing too dirty and filthy that it will not use against those who will not worship at its shrine. In summing up the kind of a paper the Times really is the Sacramento Bee comes pretty close to "hitting the nail on the head."

The people of California, and especially of southern California, have long since solved the "pitching" of the Times. They want none of it. Its attitude toward those who disagree with it has always been the same. Whenever a question comes up that will benefit the people at large, the Times will be found on the wrong side. Californians expect that, and are more and more openly expressing themselves as against the paper. The general public has come to realize that if southern California is to become a prosperous section the people must be prosperous and labor must be well paid. The other newspapers of this section treat labor fairly—and especially is that true regarding the treatment accorded the typographical union. There are five daily papers in Los Angeles working in harmony with our organization. That is the condition prevailing throughout the southwest. Organized labor is solidly behind the typographical union in its contest against the Times. We know we are right in the position we take—and will keep at it until the "crack of doom" if necessary.

The Los Angeles Times is very desirous of extending its system for the payment of wages. The Times pays some of its employes in the composing room by the hour. If the office puts on a man to work, and at the end of three or four hours it is seen that he can be "slid," away he goes, and he is paid for the number of hours he has worked. If a man works a full day and the office wants him to work overtime, he is kept right at work for any number of hours overtime, but receives no extra pay. He is paid by the hour.

"General" Otis, in a communication to the National Association of Manufacturers, New York, in taking up the question of the elimination of the standard eight, nine or ten-hour working day and the substitution of a flexible system for the employment and pay based upon an hour unit system, had the following to say:

"The National Association of Manufacturers' attitude and action as to a shorter workday are on the right lines. The hour and not the day is the true standard and feasible basis for employment and pay. The system is flexible, convenient, practicable and productive of good understandings and good results.

"The workday can be either shortened or lengthened to the distinct advantage of both sides. When business warrants, lengthen the hours; when it lags, shorten the hours, instead of resorting to wholesale discharges.

"A cast iron eight, nine or ten-hour day is stupid and frequently works disadvantage to one side or the other, or to both.

"The employer can not be crippled without injury to himself and injury to his business. In the matter of fixing the number of hours, the desires and obligations of the employer should therefore not be overriden."

All of which is very fine—provided one is an employer of labor, and believes as Otis believes, that, "In the matter of fixing the number of hours, the desires and obligations of the employer should therefore not be overridden." But all employers do not believe that way. Many are of the belief that the "desires" of the employes should also enter into the settlement of the length of the working day. But above everything else those who do the world's work are of the belief that they shall have the right to be counted in when the question of the length of the workday is up for discussion.

The representative attended the annual meeting of the California State Typographical Conference, held in Eureka the past year. The next session will be held in Sacramento. The California conference holds its annual meetings at the same time and in the same city as the California State Federation of Labor. At the Eureka meeting matters of interest to the printing trade were taken up and acted upon. The two questions that caused the most discussion were those of the free distribution of high school textbooks and the cost of white paper used in the manufacture of the newspapers of the state.

The occasion for the discussion on the free distribution of textbooks for high schools was the fact that the state of California operates a state printing plant at Sacramento. In this plant at the present time are printed the books for the elementary grades. These books are furnished free by the state to the pupils. When the question of free high school textbooks came up it naturally became a subject for printers to investigate. The conference strongly urged the free distribution of high school textbooks, and the state federation of labor passed a resolution "that we endorse the effort of those instrumental in initiating the proposition to secure free textbooks for students in the high schools of the state and pledge the support of the federation to whatever legislative action may be necessary to accomplish this result; that the executive committee of the federation be requested to advise the legislative agent of the federation of the position taken by this convention on the subject of free textbooks for students of the high schools of the state to the end that said agent shall assist the legislative agent of the California Typographical Conference and others interested in every manner possible." When the question of free high school textbooks came before the state legislature the state typographical conference proceeded to get busy. People who were interested in the question from other angles than the one set forth by the conference immediately were on the job. Some wanted to inject the question of uniformity, others standardization, state authorship, state manufacture, and so on down the line. A wide difference of opinion arose as to just what kind of a law should be passed. The conference was on record for union-made textbooks, no matter where they are produced. If the state printed the books complete under union conditions all right; if the state desires to purchase them outside of California we want the state board of education or local high school districts to recommend union-made books. We refuse to admit that books printed in the state of California printing plant from leased plates produced in houses unfair to the typographical union are wholly union made, or that printing from plates is state manufacture of schoolbooks.

As stated above, a bill came before the last session of the state legislature which had to deal with the free distribution of textbooks. It was introduced by Hon. Witten W. Harris, a member of Bakersfield Typographical Union. Mr. Harris' bill called for the free distribution of books after July 1, 1920. Prior to that time the local high school districts of the state of California could either charge the pupils for the books or furnish them free. The officers of the state typographical conference saw in this bill an opportunity to increase the sale of union-made textbooks, as the bill provided that a list of books should be selected for use in the high schools by the state board of education. After this selection was made the local high school districts are compelled to select from the furnished list. The conference saw that the passage of the law would give the advocates of union-made books the chance to try and convince the state board of education to recommend all union-made books, or to at least place some union books on the list. That being done, the local typographical unions throughout the state would then have a chance to try and induce their local school districts to select union books from the list. There are upward of 300 high school districts in the state, and it was felt that in a large number of these districts our unions could induce those having authority to furnish union-made books.

The Harris bill was violently opposed by those in charge of the state printing plant at Sacramento. They believed that the books should be printed in the state printing plant, no matter whether they were printed from non-union plates or union plates. The local trades council in Sacramento and the Sacramento Typographical Union endorsed the state manufacture of high school books, as against the purchase of the books from publishing houses. And on this point there was a great difference of opinion.

The California State Typographical Conference was represented by President George A. Thomas, of Sacramento, and Vice-President George A. Tracy, of San Francisco. The conference had asked President Scott for assistance in the work before the legislature, and I was ordered to go to Sacramento. The officers of the conference did not take a stand on the textbook question until they thoroughly understood the state manufacture of schoolbooks in California. Most of the members of the typographical union in California have been misinformed, or given no information at all, as to conditions surrounding the manufacture of schoolbooks in this state. The organizations in Sacramento that endorsed the state manufacture of schoolbooks put forth the argument—the same as was put forth to the delegates of the Santa Rosa convention of the state typographical conference, held two years ago—that it is better to have the books printed in the state printing plant than to have some of them furnished by non-union houses in the east. That sounds all right. The delegates to the Santa Rosa convention of the conference, in the absence of proper information, thought that was the proper thing. But the advocates of state manufacture of schoolbooks have never told the membership of the typographical union that schoolbooks printed in the state plant, wrongly styled state manufacture, because all the work is not done in the state, were printed from leased plates, secured from outside book companies, and in many instances plates from notorious scab institutions. The representative does not believe that the membership in this state will claim that books printed from plates of the American Book Company and the Rand-McNally Company are union made simply because they are turned out in the state printing plant in California. In fact, these books are not "set up" in California at all, but printed from leased plates, union and non-union. The International Typographical Union is on record, both by laws on its books and in other ways, against the leased plate proposition, and we are strongly opposed to the state printing plant printing schoolbooks from non-union leased plates and then putting forth the claim that the books are the product of union labor. The members of the typographical union in the state of California certainly do not get any composition out of books printed from leased plates.

It was against the extension of this system of so-called state manufacture that we made our fight —and won it. Bills providing for the manufacture of high school books by the state were defeated, and the Harris bill, providing for the furnishing free of charge of textbooks to high school students, the books to be purchased by the school districts from any source at the lowest possible price, was passed by both houses and later was signed by the governor. The representative was in Sacramento during the session of the legislature. Those who are familiar with the schoolbook situation in this state are of the opinion that we will be able to secure more business for union book publishers in the future than in the past. In fact, we have already noted some improvement. The representative urgently requests that officials of local unions in Calitornia visit the members of school boards in their respective localities and explain to them that we would like to have union books used in the schools. We have union book publishing houses that furnish any kind of high-class schoolbooks. Some of the largest and best schoolbook publishing houses in the country are strictly union.

The California State Typographical Conference desires the support of the various typographical unions of the state in its campaign for union-made schoolbooks. This is a question that should interest every member of the typographical union. The conference watches legislation that affects the printing business. Its sole aim has been to protect the printing industry. It has had some success. It will have greater success in the future if all the unions will assist. George A. Thomas, of Sacramento, is president of the organization, and H. A. Breusing, of Fresno, secretary.

While in Sacramento, Cal., I received a telegram from President Scott advising me that Reno (Nev.) Typographical Union had requested the services of a representative and giving me instructions to communicate with that city and advise the officials of the union when I would arrive. That was done. On arriving in Reno I was met by President Smith, Secretary Sutherland and members of the scale committee. A conference was held with these officials and every phase of the scale controversy was gone over. It was found that Reno Union did not have signed scales with the employers, but that the members worked under oral agreements negotiated by the union. Reno Union had asked for an increase in scale, ranging from 5 to upward of 10 per cent, affecting both newspaper and job offices. One of the daily newspaper offices had suggested to the officials of the union that some data be collected as to the price of foodstuffs in various communities of the country, and also that the wage scales in those communities be produced, the object being to determine whether the printers of Reno were entitled to any increase. As this procedure had not been followed this office protested paying any increase in wages. This phase of the question was taken up with the publishers by the representative and President Smith. Two conferences were held. The office had no signed agreement with the union and showed no disposition to enter into contractual relations with Reno Typographical Union. For this reason the representative did not feel justified in agreeing that a procedure such as suggested by the proprietor should be followed in negotiating the scale. While the International Typographical Union believes in the policy of arbitration, it does not follow that the organization believes in permitting a publisher to resort to arbitration only when it suits his convenience to do so. This was explained to the publisher. If the suggestion of the proprietor had been followed the whole matter would have been left in a very unsatisfactory state, as there was no contract which would compel either side to abide by any finding whatsoever. Believing that Reno Union was justified in asking for an increase, the representative arrived at the conclusion that the local union should insist that the new scale be paid by all the offices of the city. This was carried out.

President Smith and the members of Reno Typographical Union did everything in their power to make my stay in their city a pleasant one. A stranger in Reno will not be permitted to become lonesome. Joe Reese, acting as guide, put on a side trip to Carson City, where the representative had the pleasure of meeting Joe Farnsworth, state printer, a well-known member of the typographical union, and most of the members of the union in Carson City.

The present Reno scale of wages follows: Morning newspapers—Operators, $5.75 a night of seven and one-half hours; floormen, $5.75 a night of eight hours; machinist-operators, $6.75 a night. Evening newspapers—Operators, $5.25 a day of seven and one-half hours; floormen, $5.25 a day of eight hours; machinist-operators, $6.25 a day. Book and job offices—Operators, $6 a day for day work and $6.50 for night work, seven and one-half hours. Floormen shall receive not less than $5 a day for eight hours' work. The increase secured amounted to the following: Newspaper (day and night)—Foremen, handmen, $4.50; operators, machinist-operators, $1.50. Book and Job—Foremen and operators, $6; handmen, $3.

Although the early part of 1916 saw Pasadena Typographical Union lose considerable of its membership through the consolidation of the two evening papers of that city, the union decided to hold an annual banquet, as had been the custom, in June, 1916. The affair, like those that had gone before, was a decided success. The representative, in company with President Brown, of No. 174, attended, and addressed the gathering. Many familiar faces were missed on account of the consolidation above referred to, but those who were in charge made a successful effort to have the affair a huge success. Those who are privileged to attend these annual gatherings in Pasadena are fortunate.

A vicious piece of proposed legislation which was combated at Sacramento by the officers of the state typographical conference and your representative came before the state legislature at the last session. The California State Federation of Labor put up a magnificent fight against this bill. It was known as the Rominger apprentice bill, introduced by Senator Rominger, of Los Angeles county. The bill is given below so that every member of the International Typographical Union can see how necessary it is to be continually on guard if we are to retain the things that we have struggled so hard to secure:

"An Act—To add a new section to the penal code, to be numbered 653f, relating to the restricting of the number of individuals who may learn a trade.

"The people of the state of California do enact as follows:

"Section 1. A new section is hereby added to the penal code to be numbered 653f, and to read as follows:

"653f. It shall be unlawful for any person, persons, associations of persons, combinations of persons, or body of persons to prevent, attempt to prevent, or combine to prevent, any individual from learning, or from becoming an apprentice for the purpose of learning, any useful and lawful trade; or perform any act which shall result in restricting the number of individuals who may learn or become apprenticed for said purpose; or in any way interfere with the enrollment as an apprentice, or the employment of any individual desiring to learn or acquire a useful and lawful trade. Any one violating the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

During the session of the California legislature two years ago this same bill was introduced in the senate under the title of the Owens apprentice bill. At that time the bill passed the state senate and was lost in the assembly. This time the Rominger apprentice bill made no further progress than being reported out of committee in the senate. The senate committee on labor and capital reported the bill out with two reports—one that it do pass and one that it do not pass. When the bill came up for action in the senate it was defeated —and is therefore laid away for another two years. The bill had the backing of the "open-shop" advocates of the state. No doubt a similar bill will be introduced at the next session of the legislature—for the foes of organized labor in this section of the country "never sleep." The typographical union can always be depended upon to be on hand when legislation like the Rominger apprentice bill is before California's law-making body. At a public hearing on the Rominger apprentice bill it was shown conclusively that in California, at least, many employers, large and small, seldom avail themselves of the opportunity to employ the limit of apprentices prescribed under union labor regulations.

Members of the International Union having reported to the representative that there was a possibility of placing a charter in Hanford, Cal., the matter was taken up with President Scott, who suggested that a trip be made to Hanford. This was done. On arriving in Hanford I got in touch with members of the International Typographical Union, who had their cards deposited in other places. We talked the matter over. Some were of the opinion that a local could be started and maintained in Hanford, while others were of the opinion that the time was not ripe for the formation of a local. There were thirteen journeymen in the city, ten of whom held membership. All of the men, with one exception, were employed in two newspaper offices, also doing job work. The one exception was a man who ran a small shop and who signified willingness to join a union if one was formed. Efforts had been made on previous occasions to start a local in Hanford, but all had failed. Desiring to find out what the attitude of the employers would be toward a local typographical union, I called upon them. One of the publishers stated that he had no objections to any of his employes joining the union if they saw fit to do so, but that he would not enter into any agreement with the local, nor would he run a strictly closed shop if any one desired to work for him who was not a member. He employed union men and non-union men, mostly cardmen. After I left his office he went into the composing room and stated to the men that he had told me his stand would be against signing any kind of a union agreement. The other employer did not make any statement as to what his attitude would be, but was of the opinion that a local union would not be of any use in Hanford. At a meeting called later some of the boys did not appear, and it was the opinion of those who did come that it would be impossible, under the circumstances, to launch a healthy organization. The seeming opposition of the employers, I am satisfied, brought about this conclusion.

An invitation was received and accepted by the representative to attend the thirtieth anniversary banquet of San Bernardino Typographical Union. A large attendance was present on this occasion, the mayor of the city, a member of organized labor, being among the guests and one of the speakers of the evening. San Bernardino Union has a reputation in southern California for being very thorough in all that it undertakes—and the celebration of its thirtieth anniversary was no exception to the established rule. Three charter members were present on this occasion. Another charter member, Sydney Waite, who was secretary of the local union for a number of years and one of the pioneer printers of southern California, lives in San Bernardino, but was unable to be at the gathering. San Bernardino Typographical Union has agreements with all the proprietors of the city, and the organization stands very high in the community.

A telegram was received from President Scott the latter part of September, instructing me to go to Phœnix, Ariz., as that organization had asked for the assistance of a representative of the International in negotiating a new wage scale. I immediately wired Secretary Tracy the time of my arrival. On arriving in Phœnix a conference was arranged with the officers of the union and the scale committee. The scale committee, headed by Chairman Digges, had been negotiating with the proprietors or their representatives of both newspaper and job plants. No agreement could be reached. The union had presented a scale, which was rejected by the employers, and in turn the employers had presented a scale and contract to the union's committee, which was rejected. A deadlock had resulted. The contract under which our members were working contained a clause which, in the opinion of the representative, bound all parties to arbitration as a last resort. This point the employers would not concede, claiming that the clause was interpreted incorrectly. One morning paper, the Republican, was bound by an individual arbitration agreement, however, to submit to arbitration. The evening paper, the Gazette, did not have such an agreement.

A meeting was arranged with the local employers' organization, composed of representatives of both newspaper and job offices. The representative suggested that the job and newspaper scales be negotiated separately, but this suggestion was not listened to by the employers. Nothing was gained at the first meeting except that all parties agreed that we ought to get together and come to some settlement. Several other meetings followed, and finally the employers stated that they would make some concessions in the way of wages if the scale committee of the union would take up several questions which they had submitted. The employers made three propositions in writing, the first being that the old scale should be renewed for one year; the second proposition was that an increase of 10 per cent be given in the job scale for a period of three years, provided that certain propositions submitted by the employers, if not found to be in conflict with International law, were agreed to. The third proposition was that a 5 per cent increase in wages be given in the job scale and newspaper scale, for a period of three years, provided that certain sections submitted by the employers, if not found to be in conflict with International law, were agreed to.

The committee of the union decided not to consider the first proposition. We then had an understanding with the employers' committee that we would take up the disputed propositions and discuss them without being compelled to state which proposition we would accept—that is, the second or third. This was the turning-point in the negotiations and both committees got down to business. The representative was introduced to something new in the time of holding scale conference meetings while in Phœnix. The conference adjourned one Saturday afternoon to meet Sunday morning at 6 o'clock. It was claimed that the weather would be cool at that hour—and that the probability was that possibly the members on both sides would need cool weather, as some of us were getting "warmed up" over the negotiations. The "sunrise" scale conference committee met at 6 o'clock in the morning and remained in session until 1 o'clock, and when we adjourned we found that we had made great progress toward a settlement. We had cleared up many things that had halted the negotiations. On the following day we again met and finished our work with the exception of deciding which proposition we would accept. The committee liked the third proposition the best, as it gave an increase to all the members of the union, but it carried with it only a $1.20-a-week increase for job printers, $1.35 for evening newspaper workers and $1.50 a week for morning newspaper workers. After everything had been decided upon but the increase, the representative suggested to the employers that they make the third proposition read $1.50 a week all around. This was not agreed to. Finally the employers stated that if we would agree to accept the third proposition they would grant an increase of $1.50 a week all around—to the jobmen, newspaper men, day and night, and to the job machine men. The committee and the representative talked it over and we agreed to accept it.

The scale committee, through Chairman Digges, took the matter up at a special meeting of the union, and explained our labors at the many meetings we had held. President Wood and Secretary Tracy, both members of the scale committee, explained the situation to the union. The representative also took the floor and suggested that the work of the scale committee be endorsed and a three-year agreement entered into. The representative took occasion to state to the members of Phœnix Union his belief that the scale committee had been untiring in doing everything that could be done for the best interests of the local union. Surely no committee could have been more persistent and faithful in looking after the interests of the membership.

The representative feels very grateful to President Wood, Secretary Tracy, Chairman Digges, the members of the scale committee, and to every member of Phœnix Union for the treatment accorded him during his stay in Phœnix. Suggestions were readily agreed to and it seemed the desire of everybody to have all differences settled in a fair manner.

The Phœnix scale is as follows: Morning newspapers, handmen and operators, $31.50; evening newspapers, handmen and operators, $28.50. Machinist-operators draw $3 a week additional. Book and job scale, day work, $25.50.

In June, 1916, Imperial Valley Union experienced its first serious trouble. A member of Imperial Valley Union, who owned a paper in Imperial, took an interest in a paper published in Brawley, owned by a member of Imperial Valley Union. Both of these towns are in the jurisdiction of Imperial Valley Union. They are about nine miles apart. These two men conceived the idea of exchanging matter from one office to the other. By doing so they were of the opinion that the paper in Brawley could be made a bigger paper, at less cost, than the union paper in Brawley. Matter would be printed in the evening paper in Imperial and then lifted and sent by stage to Brawley, where it would appear in the morning paper in that place. The union took the matter up and ordered that the transferring of matter be discontinued. The two members of the union refused to do so.

President Scott instructed the representative to visit Imperial Valley and take up the matter, and, if possible, adjust it. On my arrival in the valley I took up the matter with the officers of Imperial Valley Union. I visited both proprietors several times. No success was had. The officials of the union and the representative also waited upon them and endeavored to have them stop the practice, but we could not reach any agreement. The two proprietors, who were members of the union, wanted the union to allow them to exchange matter between towns and run their papers on the "open shop" plan. That, of course, was not listened to. They suggested that we allow union men to work for them and not class them as running union offices. The union turned down all these proposals, and notified these two men that they would have to run offices according to union laws or their offices would be closed to union men. The local union held a meeting and strike sanction was asked of the International. That was given. After the union had received sanction to strike, the representative again tried to settle the matter with both papers. There was absolutely no chance, as both men were determined to do as they pleased. A strike was called and three men walked out, leaving the two proprietors at work, both of whom were "ratted" by the local union. The Brawley paper, after making a hard fight to get along as a non-union sheet, gave up the struggle and went out of existence. It was called the Brawley Star, but after it became a "rat" sheet it failed to twinkle. The members of Imperial Valley Union during the trouble showed that they were a persistent bunch, and did not intend to have the printing game killed in their section by having unfair men operate non-union printing plants.

President Scott gave me instructions to visit the city of Bisbee, Ariz., and take up with the printers of that city the question of whether a local union should be organized or not. On two previous occasions Bisbee had been an organized city. Once the city had held a charter of its own, and again the place had been under the jurisdiction of Douglas, Ariz. For reasons that will not be gone into at this time, Bisbee became an unorganized town as far as the typographical union was concerned. On my arrival in Bisbee I immediately took up the various phases of the situation. The representative found that Bisbee was an organized town—all but the printers. The demand for the label on printing was very great. A great deal of work was being scattered throughout the surrounding country. A meeting of the men employed in the city was held, and the opinions of all were expressed as to the advisability of again organizing a local. Some were in favor of the plan, and others were against it. I thought that a local should be started, and I was impressed with the sincerity of many of the men in Bisbee, who were positive that a typographical union could be launched successfully. A charter list was put in circulation and enough signatures secured for a charter application. The representative made a visit to Tombstone while in Bisbee and secured the applications of the two printers in Tombstone. Bisbee is in the heart of a large copper producing section and is a prosperous community. The typographical union members had been subjected to a lot of censure for not having a charter in Bisbee by other organizations, who evidently knew nothing of our previous troubles there. Secretary John Ryan, of Bisbee Union, rendered valuable assistance to the representative. I believe that the new organization will prosper and in time will take its place with the other typographical unions of the state of Arizona.

Your representative was instructed by the International president to visit the city of Pomona, and make an investigation relative to the formation of a local union in that place. Several years ago Los Angeles Union, for some reason not known at this time, had asked the executive council for jurisdiction over Pomona. That request had been granted, but Los Angeles Union had never exercised jurisdiction over the place. At a meeting of No. 174 the executive council was asked to take Pomona out of the jurisdiction of Los Angeles No. 174. That request was granted. An effort was then made toward placing a charter in Pomona. It was deemed best not to apply for a charter for the present. Conditions did not warrant that sort of action. Several cardholders are working in Pomona. The organizer forwarded two applications to Indianapolis, which were later favorably passed on. In the opinion of the representative, it was very doubtful if a local organization would be a success in Pomona. Later on it is believed that an organization can be placed in that city.

While on a trip to Arizona in connection with the organization of Bisbee Typographical Union, the representative stopped off between trains at Douglas, Ariz., where the question of forming a local union in Douglas was discussed with several members of the International Typographical Union. Douglas had formerly been an organized town, but surrendered its charter after passing through some very stormy times. It was thought that a fresh start might be made and a permanent and healthy union be organized. The representative took the matter up with the executive council, and was advised by President Scott that a charter would be granted to Douglas provided the union could be established and conducted as a local typographical union should be. Some correspondence was had, after the visit to Douglas, with members of the union working there. I was advised that enough people had signified their willingness to join a new union if one was launched. The matter was referred to Indianapolis, and President Scott instructed me to proceed to Douglas, and if conditions warranted it to sanction a new union in that town. The representative immediately went to Douglas and held a meeting of those interested in the new union. The men who were behind the new venture gave every indication of desiring to see the local established along right lines. They realized if the organization was to amount to anything that it would have to be conducted properly. Some of the errors committed by the former organization were gone over and ways pointed out to avoid those same errors in the future. It was decided that a charter should be asked for, and the representative approved the application and it was forwarded to Indianapolis. At the meeting held to form the union, F. E. Bowman, well known in the southwest, was elected president, and Sam J. Pressler, who has been on the Arizona border for years, was elected secretary. The charter was later received by Douglas and the city gives promise of taking its rightful place among the smaller unions of the jurisdiction. The placing of a charter in Douglas made the third Arizona union that your representative had formed since January 1, 1916.

The officials of the Imperial Valley Union wrote to the representative that their organization had been petitioned by International Typographical Union members in Yuma to assume jurisdiction over the Yuma district. Imperial Valley Union requested the representative to make an investigation of conditions in Yuma and report his findings to the Imperial Valley local. A trip was made to Yuma and the matter taken up with the union members in Yuma. The representative was of the opinion that it would not be advisable to have Imperial Valley Union extend its jurisdiction to the Yuma field, but that steps should be taken looking to the formation of a local organization in Yuma. It is believed that can be accomplished. From Yuma the representative went to the Imperial Valley and explained the entire matter to that local union. The principal objection to having Imperial Valley Union extend its jurisdiction to take in Yuma was the fact that Yuma was too far away from the Valley Union.

President Scott notified the representative by wire to proceed to Tucson, Ariz. One of the publishers of Tucson had wired in to headquarters that there was a possibility of the local union or members of the local union not carrying out the provisions of the signed scale. On arriving in Tucson I took up the matter with the officers of the local union, and was informed that there was no intention on the part of any one to evade the provisions of the signed scale in any particular whatever. The standing committee of the local union, the representative and the publisher had a conference and the matter in question was taken up. The local standing committee informed the publisher that there was absolutely no danger of Tucson Union in any way breaking or failing to live up to any signed contract that it had entered into. It was explained that when matters arose which caused a difference of opinion between the publishers and the union the standing committees of both sides should meet and settle the argument as the signed scale provides. The question which caused the dispute—the interchange of matter—was settled according to the scale. In justice to Tucson Union and its officials, the representative was only too glad to report to the International Union that there was no danger of any agreement being broken in Tucson by No. 465. Tucson is a 100 per cent organized city and has enjoyed peace for many years.

The last week in December I received a telegram from President Scott advising me that San Bernardino had asked for the services of a representative in connection with a new scale that had been presented to the proprietors in that city. On arriving in San Bernardino I took up the local situation with the officers of the union. I was told that a new scale had been presented, but that it had been turned down by the local proprietors. The local union had held several special meetings, and at one of these meetings had agreed to renew the old scale. The proprietors had been told that such action had been taken. In going over the old scale the representative found several sections that were not in harmony with the laws of the International Typographical Union. It was thought best that these sections be changed so that in future negotiations scale committees would not be confronted with the task of taking out objectionable features. Although the proprietors of the newspapers were of the opinion that everything was settled, they agreed to meet with us and go over the provisions that we desired to change. There was some objection on the part of some of the members of the local union to making any changes that affected working conditions. After several meetings with the publishers and the holding of two special meetings of the union the changes were made effective. The new scale was to be in effect until the fall of 1917. No changes were made in the job scale.

During the past year some trips have been made in connection with matters affecting our local unions that will not be mentioned in this report. Matters of a purely local nature have made these trips necessary. Sometimes they have been caused by differences among the membership. These have always been straightened out. These cases are not the most pleasant ones, but the representative finds that where the members honestly endeavor to understand each other a peaceful condition can be brought about.

The representative made a couple of trips to Riverside in connection with a matter that had been brought to the attention of the International Typographical Union by the pressmen's union. An investigation was made and a complete report turned in to headquarters at Indianapolis.

A short visit was made to Santa Barbara in connection with conditions surrounding a non-union office—the Santa Barbara News—in that city. A meeting was held with the officials of Santa Barbara Union. The News continues to be operated as a non-union sheet.

Several of our local unions not mentioned in this report have had their scales increased the past year. Some through local effort, and others have secured advances because their signed scales, made in previous years, called for an increase the past year.

The officers and members of the various local unions with whom I have visited and worked the past year have shown me every courtesy within their power, for all of which I am deeply thankful.

I desire to thank President Scott, Secretary-Treasurer Hays and other members of the executive council for advice they have given and assistance rendered in carrying on the work of the past year. President Scott has taken a deep interest in all the matters that have come up affecting our local unions, and has ever been willing to co-operate to the end that we might be successful in our undertakings.

In conclusion, I trust that the Colorado Springs convention will be a successful one, and that each official and delegate will be privileged to participate in deliberations that will lead to a stronger and better International Typographical Union.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

Fraternally,

CHARLES T. SCOTT.

Los Angeles, June 1, 1917.

REPRESENTATIVE STONEY.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—I beg to submit herewith my report as representative for the year ending May 31, 1917:

During the past year I have done no work for the International Typographical Union and therefore will have very little to report.

I have tried to keep in touch with the trade in the province of British Columbia through correspondence, but find it very unsatisfactory.

Business conditions are still seriously affected by the European war, but the printing trade shows a slight improvement over a year ago.

The number of non-union offices in this province has increased during the past year.

The northern part of British Columbia is badly in need of organization, and I feel sure that good work could be done there.

I trust that the work of the officers and delegates to the Colorado Springs convention will be of such a nature as to add to the greatness of our organization. Fraternally yours,

New Westminster, B. C. R. A. STONEY.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON APPRENTICES

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—The proper selection and training of apprentices for the compositor's trade is a most important part of the activities of the International Typographical Union. The existing apprentice laws of our organization were enacted to provide a workable method of apprentice training. The provisions of these laws are entirely adequate to establish instruction for apprentices in the jurisdiction of every subordinate local which will accomplish the desired purpose of molding them into thoroughly competent journeymen.

Substantial progress has been made during the past year in making effective methods of educating apprentices as evidenced by the fact that most of our locals now have agreements with employing printers embodying the provisions of the laws, and have apprentice committees who are giving active attention to the work.

Believing that by close co-operation the best results could be obtained, the executive council, the committee on apprentices and the commission on supplemental trade education held a joint meeting at Indianapolis in November of last year. At this meeting the I. T. U. Course in Printing was thoroughly discussed and it was here developed that the results were far from satisfactory, this latter fact being due to lack of control and supervision over this course by the International Typographical Union.

The course in printing, when originally approved by the Cincinnati convention, was the copyrighted property of A. H. McQuilkin, of the Inland Printer, and an understanding was had after the course had been approved by the convention referred to that the International Typographical Union was to defray the promotional expenses of the course and the instruction was to be furnished to the students at the lowest possible cost. The school has since that time been conducted at Chicago with the foregoing understanding, under the direction of the I. T. U. Commission on Supplemental Trade Education.

With the endorsement of three successive conventions on the subject of the education of the apprentice before it, the joint meeting at Indianapolis felt that some definite plan must be devised to carry out our educational feature for the apprentice and that this plan must contemplate a course owned and controlled by the International Typographical Union, operated from headquarters. With that idea in view another joint meeting was held at Chicago in December and the ground thoroughly gone over again. A second conference was here had with Mr. McQuilkin, resulting in an understanding that he would submit a proposition to the executive council of the International Typographical Union for the purchase of his copyright on the course, so that the plan of the Indianapolis meeting could be carried out. This Mr. McQuilkin agreed to do.

The proposal not having been received, President Scott wrote Mr. McQuilkin, reminding him of our understanding, but no reply was received.

The committee on apprentices again met at Indianapolis in March, for the purpose of a reorganization of the committee, made necessary by the regrettable death of former Chairman Thomson, who was succeeded by James J. Hoban, of Cleveland Union. Mr. Brady was elected chairman at this meeting and Mr. Hoban secretary. The failure of Mr. McQuilkin to carry out the understanding of the Chicago meeting was discussed and, in the belief that no satisfactory arrangement could be made if delay were persisted in, it was agreed that the original program for a course, owned and controlled by the International Typographical Union, be adhered to. Plans were at this meeting arranged to survey the field and secure suggestions for such a course, this to be done by correspondence. We are indebted to the following gentlemen for valuable advice and co-operation: J. E. Fintz, of Cleveland, Ohio; T. G. McGrew, of Indianapolis; A. A. Stewart, of Boston; A. L. Blue, of New York.

Our correspondence resulted in a meeting of the committee in New York city, in April, for the purpose of an analysis of the method of instruction in vogue in the School for Printers' Apprentices under the direction of A. L. Blue. This school is maintained by the employers, the union and the Hudson Guild, and instruction is thorough and systematic. Mr. Blue is a member of Typographical Union No. 6 and is deeply interested in the work of apprentice training, to which he has devoted years of close application and study, and his success in securing results has been remarkable. Considerable time was spent by the committee in going over the plan of proper apprentice training with Mr. Blue and we were convinced that he was the logical man from every viewpoint to write a course of study for apprentices for the International Union, his years of practical and successful experience as well as his keen interest in the work eminently qualifying him for this important task. An arrangement was entered into with Mr. Blue to write a course of study embracing the subjects contained in his letter, included herein, to be made up of thirty-six lessons, twelve for the third, twelve for the fourth and twelve for the fifth year of apprenticeship. Mr. Blue's letter follows:

Complying with your request for suggestions as to courses of study and methods to be employed in the instruction of apprentices I beg to offer the following:

1. Prescribe courses that can be applied in the shop and through correspondence.
2. Apply same courses in shop. Have one or more competent journeymen volunteer to criticize work and conduct prescribed examinations at stated intervals.
3. Apply same courses where schools are contemplated or already established.

Of course it will be understood that copy, lesson sheets (with questions and answers), etc., remain the same in any one of the three methods selected.

4. Whenever possible secure co-operation of chairmen or establish apprentice committees to encourage attendance when schools are established.
5. Grade students according to their experience and knowledge and provide a separate course for each grade: A, of least experience; B, medium; C, to more advanced.
6. Combine copy and lesson sheets. Copy should be progressive and contain successively such principles as apply in display and other work. Lesson sheets should relate more directly to the copy in hand. Sheets containing questions and answers should be furnished instructors to test a student's knowledge of a subject.

Summary of Subjects.

MATERIALS AND APPLIANCES.

TYPES.

Physical characteristics of types.

Point system of bodies and standard lining system, and their relations to other materials.

Evolution of type designs by change of the serifs, and the relation of the serif to harmony in type composition.

Roman types: Old style and modern; their history; the radical difference between them, and the relation of these to harmony in type compositions.

Text letters: Their history; their characteristics; where appropriate and where inappropriate.

Display types: Their history; their uses and their limitations.

MAKE-UP MATERIALS.

Description of metal or steel furniture and quotations; leads and slugs in strips and labor saving; the proper and improper use of each; superiority of metal to wood; where wood is preferable to metal.

BRASS RULES.

Description of strip and L. S. rules; the printing edge; care of rules; workmanlike use of rules (relating to joining and matching); names of brass rules; the uses of each. Proper use of rule cutter, mitering machine, saw and miter box; how to adjust them; advantage of accuracy.

COMPOSING-ROOM EQUIPMENTS.

Description of cases (pairs, italic, California job, triple, quarter-size); advantages and disadvantages of each. Case stands and racks and cabinets.

Receptacles for sorts, borders, signs, initials, fractions, special figures, brass rules, leaders, quotations, metal furniture, leads and slugs, reglet, wood furniture, etc.

Locking-up materials: Imposing tables with iron and stone surfaces; advantages of iron surfaces; chases (skeleton, electro, book, news, stereo, heading, platen press, etc.) and the necessity of accuracy in them; bearers; quoins; straightedge; planer; proof-planer, chase racks; live forms; dead forms; form trucks.

Blocks for holding plates, various kinds, their respective advantages and disadvantages.

DISPLAY COMPOSITION.

Each student required to practice all the following kinds of display composition. The order in which this work is given out is at the discretion of the instructor.

Layout work on paper; object; general instructions relating to layouts of display composition. In addition the student is required to make a layout of displayed work before setting it.

Advertisements for newspapers, single, double and triple column; sections of department store advertisements with matter run around cuts.

Advertisements for magazines, quarter, half and full-page.

Title pages and cover pages.

Letter and note headings.

Billheads and statements.

Receipt forms and bank checks.

Envelop corners and addressed envelops.

Tags and labels.

Cards; admission, invitation, business announcements.

Social printing; visiting, wedding, dinner, banquet, reception, at home cards.

Circulars; announcements, social, business and professional, with and without display; note and letter sizes.

Setting in brass circles, ovals, triangles and lozenges.

Menu for banquets, etc.

Programs, concert, lecture, convention, sports, school exercises.

Placards: Public meeting, advertising, motto, notices.

Leaflets, envelop size, 1, 2 and 4 pages, the two latter imposed ready for lock-up.

Booklets, with and without cuts, need not exceed 8 pages, each with varied display, imposed, and get ready for press, with planer proofs.

Plain Composition:

Each student required to practice all the following kinds of composition. The order in which the work is given out is at the discretion of the instructor.

Examination and casting-up of copy to determine size of body matter, position of cuts, style and sizes of headings, indention, etc.

Proportions of type pages in relation to trimmed sizes of paper; indention (regular and hanging); proper placing of initials; proper placing of cuts; importance of good spacing; reasons for leading.

Capitalization, punctuation, division of words.

Proofreading; learning the marks; exercise in reading proofs.

Side notes; foot notes; cut-in notes; quotations in smaller types or set solid; reference signs; quotation marks, double and single, etc.

Composition of poetry; indention in relation to meters and rhymes; initials; turn backs; turn overs.

Practice in setting body matter; correct spacing; good justification; correcting proof.

Book page of text properly proportioned to prescribed trimmed size of paper, with running head, poetic quotation, reference marks, side and footnotes, and proper placing of Roman numerals in caps and lower case.

Book page with text run around two or more cuts.

Specimens of indentions, regular, hanging, diagonal, square, lozenge and half-lozenge from copy of ordinary paragraphs.

Specimens of initials in short paragraphs; initials constructed by student and ready-cast; properly aligned; properly spaced in relation to text.

Setting three columns in one measure.

Practice in running back to improve spacing and in proper method of overrunning; making even.

Real estate advertisements with diagram of lots.

Blank book headings.

Balance sheet, with diagonal line leading to total.

Tabular matter, various; casting-off the columns; box heads; type matter set in columns from foot to head; braces introduced.

Casting-off; number of pages of given size in copy; number of pages of one size in copy of another.

Expeditious methods of breaking up and distributing dead forms. Necessity of accurate distribution.

IMPOSITION.

Locking up jobs in skeleton and electrotype chases; use of bearers on platen presses, and proper method of placing same; correct position of quoins; correct method of locking up and planing down; necessity of delicate handling of halftones; difficulties of the electrotyper when forms are incorrectly locked up.

Theory of signatures and methods of ascertaining correct impositions and of proving same both for hand and machine folding.

Theory of margins and of register and how to get them in the form; vital necessity of register in color-process printing; proper materials to be used in book forms to prevent change of register or loosening of quoins; relation of form to grippers on cylinder presses.

Expeditious methods of making corrections in forms on imposing table and on press; defects of wood furniture where accurate register is required; dangers from shrinkage of wood in standing forms.

Bank work and make-up.

Color harmony.

Hand lettering.

The course will not be ready for inauguration until January 1, 1918, when it will be launched. It is proposed to furnish this instruction to students at cost price. When put into operation the course will be owned absolutely by the International Typographical Union and can be changed in any manner that may be found to be advantageous to secure the maximum results, these changes so made not conflicting with any one's copyright, since we will own the copyright. No compensation has been agreed upon for Mr. Blue's services. In fact, he assumed the extremely modest position of insisting that he serve without pay, but we believe and recommend that at the conclusion of his services Mr. Blue should be recompensed for his labor in an amount that may appear to the executive council to be fair for the work performed.

Believing that it was possible to use in part at least the I. T. U. Course in the preparation of our own instruction, the committee waited upon Mr. McQuilkin, who is now located in New York, and again urged upon him to submit a proposition for the purchase of his copyright.

Under date of May 12, Mr. McQuilkin wrote President Scott as follows:

NEW YORK, N. Y., May 12, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Newton Claypool Building, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. SCOTT—Referring to the necessity of the International Typographical Union having entire control of its educational work, I had plans in that connection which I explained to Messrs. Hertenstein, Brady and Hoban, but it is now evident they would take too long to mature, in view of the fact that the executive board proposes to move at the next convention that the I. T. U. Course shall be made mandatory.

So far as any consideration being made for the transfer of the copyrights now owned by the Inland Printer Technical School to the International Typographical Union, I do not care to be in a position of making a price, but would suggest that the matter be left to arbitration. Homer Dunn and J. L. Frazier would act for me, and you could select two others, these could select a fifth, and thus bring this matter to a conclusion, and the matter would be satisfactory to me and satisfactory to you, and to the executive board and the International Typographical Union generally.

Pending this, however, the work of arranging for transfer can start immediately and I will do everything possible to make the change without interfering with the activities of the school, and at the same time developing plans for its larger operation in Indianapolis.

Trusting this will meet with your approval, I am

Fraternally,

A. H. MCQUILKIN.

President Scott's reply follows:

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May 21, 1917.

A. H. McQuilkin, care Mergenthaler Linotype Company, Tribune Building, New York, N. Y.:

DEAR MR. MCQUILKIN—Replying to yours of May 12th, containing the suggestion that a price for the copyrights, etc., of the I. T. U. Course be fixed by arbitration, I have referred your letter to the executive council for its consideration. Personally, I doubt very much if the members of the executive council will give their approval to this most indefinite proposal. Certainly before commit-tihg the International Typographical Union to the purchase of the course we should have some definite idea of the financial obligation which the International Typographical Union is to assume.

Fraternally yours,
MARSDEN G. SCOTT.

June 1, 1917.

A. H. McQuilkin, care Mergenthaler Linotype Company, Tribune Building, New York, N. Y.:

DEAR MR. MCQUILKIN—Your communication of the 12th ult., addressed to President Marsden G. Scott of the International Typographical Union, was by that gentleman referred to the executive council of the organization and given consideration today. I am instructed by the executive council to say to you that it will not accept your proposition to arbitrate the price of the course of lessons which you have been using in the technical course.

If you will make to the council a direct proposition and name a price for everything in connection with the course which you have been conducting it will be given consideration.

Fraternally yours,
J. W. HAYS,
Secretary Executive Council.

To these letters no reply has been received at this writing and we are proceeding with our plans as originally outlined.

Examination of Apprentices.

Many inquiries have been received from local apprentice committees, soliciting suggestions for the examination of apprentices from year to year as the law provides. It is impossible to lay down any fixed rule or to formulate any set of examination questions or tests which will apply unless a uniform course of instruction is adhered to. If local unions, in negotiating wage scales, will provide that apprentices be required to take the course in printing approved by the International Typographical Union, then a test for each year's proficiency can be set. As the course is planned to provide twelve lessons for each year of the third, fourth and fifth years, the union, through its apprentice committee, should satisfy itself that the apprentice has mastered the subjects of one year thoroughly before being advanced to the succeeding year. This it can do by analyzing the record of the apprentice's lesson papers in the course for the year, and it may supplement this by a further test of his eligibility to advance.

Teaching of Printing in the Public Schools.

Public schools generally are establishing vocational training and including in the curriculum instruction in printing given in pre-vocational and vocational centers. Printing plants are installed, and in many instances the instructor in charge is not a practical printer. Some schools exploit the work of the pupils.

Pre-vocational instruction is intended to provide beneficial education in academic subjects related to the trade. Where vocational instruction attempts to teach the trade it results in failure.

Investigation has demonstrated that the compositor's trade can not be taught in a school to the end that a young man can properly qualify as a competent journeyman printer. It should be the function of the schools to prepare young men to enter the trade as apprentices. Co-operative agreements between employing printers and publishers, typographical unions, and boards of education would make it possible to place in the trade such number of young men qualified by proper preparation in the schools as would be needed to fill apprentice positions.

The attitude of the International Typographical Union is fully given in the following article prepared by A. W. Thomson, who was chairman of the International Typographical Union apprentice committee from its origin until his death last December:

Co-operation Is the Touchstone.

(By A. W. Thomson.)

Vocational training in the majority of public schools is inadequate and unsatisfactory owing to lack of co-operation and advice from men actively engaged in the industries and the scant knowledge of school authorities as to the needs of the trades. Men in the trade, being in daily touch with its needs, are best qualified to point the way to get what is needed.

Typographical unions and employing printers must take a living, vital interest in vocational and industrial training. It is their duty to tell public school agencies the best way to prepare boys for the craft. Unaffected and orderly school training will enable the shop to develop efficient compositors.

It is a tremendous waste of human energy for public schools to continue experiments that dump on the labor market callow youths who, if they would remain in their vocation, must unlearn what has been learned.

Experiment must be supplanted by experience.

It is necessary that representatives of the industries take a passive and definite position that will show how the school and the printshop can contribute to the highest standard of efficiency. Intelligent direction of effort will probably show that school authorities are willing to serve the public on all educational matters.

One plan that is giving splendid satisfaction to educators, employing printers and typographical unions is the formation of advisory boards composed of representatives of the printing trades. Their co-operation with boards of education for unification of school and shop training is bringing to the art of printing just what the industry needs.

If your union is not numbered in this advance guard it should shake off indifference and join now. The International Typographical Union urges all local unions to get in communication with boards of education to the end that—

Men of skill and experience in all processes of the craft be engaged as teachers of printing.

Adapt the instruction in public school printing plants to the absorbing power of the trade.

Part-time courses in the day schools for apprentices already in the trade.

Evening classes that provide proper study for improvement work to journeymen and apprentices.

A course of instruction in which the theoretical and technical branches of the trade are unfolded in a gradual and complete way, each student, as far as practical, to receive individual care and attention.

Get together on a platform of education that will prepare for the compositor's trade those boys who wish to qualify.

Emphasize your position that it is the function of the public school to supplement trade education—not to supersede proper apprentice training.

Teach students the elements of an industrial education that will help them to advance after they are in the trade.

Make it clear to school authorities that you wish to co-operate and encourage boys who show the necessary requirements that are essential to the skilled and intelligent compositor.

Put a stop to commercializing the product of public school printing plants.

At the outset there should be a clear understanding about the selection of boys for instruction in printing. Subnormal and backward boys are out of place in composing rooms. Prospective pupils should possess bright, industrious minds and show natural talent and adaptability to the educational and technical requirements of the trade.

Careful selection of the raw material should be the first consideration.

Good eyesight and normal physical soundness—strength to ward off the occupational diseases prevalent in composing rooms—should be among the requirements.

The pupil's parents should be made acquainted with working conditions in the compositor's trade—wages, hours, the opportunity of steady employment, the chances of advancement and other essential information.

All laws of reasoning lead to the fact that practical printers are the only ones capable of teaching printing. The pupil must be brought close to the teacher who is skilled in his trade and has an intelligent understanding of its underlying principles. The teacher of printing who can only impart textbook information can not be expected to make good. For the good of all we must insist that industrial teachers be men of practical experience.

It is an indisputable fact that public schools claiming to turn out finished printers are doing a great harm to the pupil and the printing industry. A "glossing over" of the proprieties is reproduced in the pupil, and he graduates an industrial misfit. Their piecemeal and irregular instruction is fundamentally wrong and should be condemned. It is the duty of public schools to teach for the trade—not to teach the trade.

There are few armless wonders in the world, and they are seldom found in the printing industry. Paradoxical as it may appear, the world is filled with headless wonders. They are classed with those who can't think straight or consecutively, whose brains are addled, who have no initiative and who can not get the meaning of co-ordinating head and hand.

The printing office is no place for either of these.

Yet there are public schools pretending to teach printing that give scant attention to the physical and mental requirements demanded by the International Typographical Union when it selects apprentices to learn the compositor's trade.

School authorities should be brought face to face with the truth that the art of printing calls for men of the highest intellectual and technical skill. This mark can be attained by boys who possess bright minds and who are willing to be taught the theory and fundamental principles of the art of printing by a practical printer-tutor.

It is not possible to make efficient craftsmen out of weak and spiritless material. Where it is attempted the results show semi-skilled workers that are thrown into the blind alley of casual employment.

The exploitation of boys in public school printing plants is an all too common practice. It is the outcome of a delusion harbored by many educators that sufficient work of commercial value must be produced to pay for the printing equipment and make it self-sustaining.

We are acquainted with schools maintained at public expense that do not stop at work classed as a "school activity." In their zeal to show a profit in production they solicit and accept jobs that clearly belong to commercial houses.

School authorities violate the rights of capital and labor when they invade the competitive field. It is manifestly unfair to the commercial printer and the employe, who as taxpayers support the public schools, to subject them to competition that is inimical to their common welfare.

We do not object to the school printery doing the incidental printing of the schools; we emphatically protest against any plan that commercializes the product of public school pupils.

It sacrifices education to production.

When a public school goes into the open market as a competitor for printing its educational value is ruined. It takes on the garb of a mercantile establishment and is conducted like any other shop, its sole object being production and profit. It defeats the aims of industrial training.

The pupil becomes the by-product; his time and energy are wasted; his education is neglected; he has lost his opportunity to graduate as the genuine product of the school.

Educate the boy for the trade; let production go hang.

Attitude of the Employing Printer.

Henry P. Porter, chairman of the apprentice committee of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America, defines the position of his organization concerning the teaching of printing in the public schools as follows:

Industrial work in public schools may be prevocational or vocational.

Pre-vocational work, as understood and approved by the industry, is such brief instruction in the elements of printing as shall serve to give the boy some insight into the industry as a basis for a future choice of a vocation and shall have distinct educational value, both culturally and as manual training, but shall be clearly understood and taught as not being in any sense a teaching of the trade of printing.

Vocational work is understood to be such instruction in printing as shall have direct relation to the future practice of the trade. In order to be approved by the industry it should have the following provisions:

1. Teachers experienced in the industry and competent to give instruction.
2. A plant and equipment of the best approved current commercial standards.
3. Provisions for teaching apprentices and young journeymen by means of part-time and evening classes.
4. An advisory committee from the industry to have the approving of plant, equipment, instructors, methods, and courses of study.
5. Arrangements for placing all graduates of full-time courses in the industry as apprentices (the time allowed on the apprentice requirement to be determined in accordance with the quantity and quality of the work done in the school) and for limiting the number of the full-time students to those who can be so placed.
6. Prevention of commercialization. The output of such a school should be strictly limited to work for the school system of the community and the jobs undertaken should be chosen on educational and not commercial grounds, the teacher in charge having absolute control over what comes in.

I would likewise refer you to Bulletin No. 1 of the conference board on training of apprentices, entitled "The Necessity of Apprenticeship," three important paragraphs of which are as follows:

"But even though these employers believe that specific trade instruction should not be associated with fundamental public education which they consider essential for all boys and girls, whatever their future calling in life may be, they agree that the public schools can do much in preparing their graduates for serious trade study in industrial life by training them in school to think straight, to think in numbers, to think in drawing, to think in color and form and proportion, and through the hand to give correct expression to the thought. Such public school training will offer the right foundation on which to predicate specific trade instruction through apprenticeship systems.

"When, however, trade instruction is given in public trade schools, it must be clearly understood that this type of education must be differentiated from the trade training which can be obtained in the shop, as the public trade school can teach only part of the required technique; the remainder must be acquired through practice on actual work under trade and commercial conditions. In the case of trade instruction through apprenticeship, on the other hand, the public school can effectively supplement shop study and shop work through correlated continuation instruction, even though the shop apprenticeship system provides, as it should, for trade training through practice in actual work and for applied instruction in related sciences, in order to develop both a mastery of the trade and industrial understanding and intelligence.

"The most effective way to impart these two divisions of training is to associate them as closely as the particular business will permit, so that trade training and theoretical classroom instruction may be practically simultaneous. It is manifestly unfair to the apprentice who undertakes to learn a trade to furnish him with less than full opportunity to perfect himself as an intelligent and efficient craftsman. It is unfair to the trade itself and to the efficient craftsman in it to turn out half-equipped workmen who parade as trained craftsmen, but are not competent to prove their right to the title by the excellence and intelligence of their work."

The above mentioned bulletin was prepared by the writer and expresses the position of this committee.

Very truly yours,

H. P. Porter,

Chairman Committee on Apprentices, United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America.

The Viewpoint of a Prominent Educator.

Robert O. Small, deputy commissioner of education for Massachusetts, prepared the following very interesting article concerning the co-operation of all factors in the industry for the selection and training of apprentices:

In this matter of co-operation in administering vocational education for prospective young workers in the printing trades, there are three parties directly interested: the pupil (apprentice), the collective body of master workmen of all the printing trades, and the employing printers.

In our capacity as public officials, we must approach the topic in its broadest aspect; the proper education of all the children who present themselves for vocational education.

Any true attempt at co-operation will include in its scope consideration of plans and devices giving due importance to the rights and opportunities of all.

We congratulate your organization upon its efforts to formulate this problem and we hail your efforts toward its solution as a very important contribution. You have a program and that is always the first step necessary in solving any problem.

"Men in the trade are best qualified to point the way to get what is needed" for proper vocational training. The law of this commonwealth in its provisions for advisory committees and our administration in its provisions that these advisory committees should be composed of both employers and employes safeguards and provides this very point.

"It is a tremendous waste to dump on the labor market youths who, if they would remain in their vocation, must unlearn what has been learned."

"Only men of skill and experience in all processes of the craft should be engaged as teachers of printing." Our printed and practiced requirements for qualifications of shop instructors call for eight years' experience in the trade for which they are approved as instructors.

We should "adapt the instruction to the absorbing power of the trade." This probably means that we should limit the number of pupils we should undertake to train.

To do this in an arbitrary manner, we confess, jars upon our notions of democratic freedom. Indirectly by setting up qualifications, by advice as to opportunity, much may be accomplished to prevent flooding the market. This is certainly a desirable thing to prevent, but it is certainly a very difficult matter to adjust. By all means direct the attention of boards of control to the necessity of considering this phase.

You have endorsed supplementary training for those young workers already placed in the industry. By all means let us have more of it. It is the very best kind of vocational education for your industry, the very best kind of an investment which can be made. Part-time, evening, and long-term compulsory continuation schools of a trade extension character can be defended as offering much for the employer, the employe and society. Economically and pedagogically, the proposition is fine.

"It is the duty of the public schools to teach for the trade, not to teach the trade." It is the duty of public vocational schools to help pupils to choose wisely and then to train them in their chosen field to the point at which they may enter industry advantageously. No claim that an entire trade can be taught satisfactorily and entirely within a school can stand practical test; young workers may be instructed in industrial schools so well by individual care and attention that they should be given credit on apprentice time.

This depends upon the method of the instruction. The theoretical and technical branches of the trade should be given closely in conjunction with real shop practice work. Just as far as possible, this should be upon productive work. Certain exercise work is probably indispensable, in order to give a wide variety of jobs to every boy, but to the extent that it is possible the work should be real work and for use. Employers and employes should get together on this point and agree to help remove the difficulties in the way of securing such work for the schools. We have come near to quarreling over this, and we must not do so. Do not misunderstand me. I do not wish the pupils exploited. If they are properly taught, there can be little exploitation. As soon as enough skill has been acquired to make exploitation possible, the educational value of that work ceases. I want pupils to be instructed upon real, legitimate work. Under proper instruction, the amount of work of the pupils will not offset the work which their instructors, drawn from competition in the industry, would be doing if employed in the trade and not at teaching.

"There should be a careful selection of candidates eligible to receive training as printers." All minors are not qualified to become printers. Certain physical and mental qualifications make for success in the trade. Sixteen years of age, mentally and physically fit, possessed of the rudiments of a common school education; these are certainly not very exacting requirements and with the exception of the age requirement, present little chance for discussion.

The age of sixteen, at the time of beginning apprenticeship, is in keeping with the trend of all industry. It has been found that the services of the 14-16-year-old untrained minor is of comparatively small value. He would be better at school receiving some proper training a portion of his time. But it is absolutely unfair on one hand to close the door of skilled industry to minors until they are sixteen and on the other hand to permit them to leave school and scramble for the blind-alley, dead-end jobs awaiting them, or remain in school engaged in school work which not only does not fit them for employment, but actually distorts their conception of life and a living.

Groups of society are attempting to regulate these matters in spots—and it is well that they are. Are they giving attention to the whole contour? Society as a whole must get at this task. We must rise above the whole problem and regulate for all with regard for all and in the interests of all. To regulate a chosen few into the advantages of a craft may temporarily advantage that few and the craft, but what of those who are regulated out? They are with us. Do the machinists want them? Do the electricians want them? Nobody seems to want some of them: History and experience is full of the successes of those who did not seem to be worth training and full of the failures of the very elect.

Let us have definite requirements for admission to training classes, but let us complete the program by furnishing a long line of other opportunities for those who can not meet these particular requirements. "Thou shalt not" is by no means a worn-out and unnecessary command, but those who give it should follow quickly with that other injunction from Holy Writ: "Am I my brother's keeper?" Upon the spirit and manner of enjoining the one and answering the other, hangs success or failure.

We are entering upon a very disturbed period of our industrial history. Many new practices are bound to be tried. In any program for vocational training which we undertake, we must have in mind certain factors which, aside from war conditions, have contributed to this unrest.

During war times, these factors will not function as they have during the last decade, but with a return of peace they will recur with added force.

I list some of them below:

Worldwide movement arising from a laudable desire for better living conditions.

Protest against low wages, long hours and improper working conditions.

Desire of workers for voice in determination of working conditions and revolt against arbitrary treatment of individual workers and suppression of organization.

Unemployment and insecurity of employment.

Unjust distribution of the products of industry.

Misunderstanding or prejudice.

Agitation and agitators.

Rapid rise in prices as compared with wages.

Rapidly growing feeling that redress for injuries and oppression can not be secured through existing institutions.

Your program gives consideration to many of these and, I think, in quite a degree offers help. Any program which does not consider them all will not be of lasting benefit.

We will do our best to co-operate with any working plan which receives the support of a representative body of our citizens and promises good for those concerned.

Co-operative Agreement to Properly Direct Instruction in Printing in the Public Schools.

Local apprentice committees are urged to make effective a definite program as a means of regulating instruction in printing in the public schools to prevent the abuse of bringing into the trade partially trained compositors which the industry has no employment or need for. Establish with newspaper publishers and book and job employers a joint apprentice committee composed of equal representation. This joint committee to get in touch with the board of education and propose the following co-operative arrangement:

Instruction in printing should be confined to one centralized school.

Instructors employed should be practical printers of not less than five years' experience.

All apprentices employed in composing rooms covered by agreements between the union and employing printers and publishers should be required to attend the school for academic and trade instruction not less than one afternoon and one evening each week, at no loss of pay to the apprentice.

Only such number of young men not regularly apprenticed in the trade as would be required to fill apprentice positions should be permitted to receive instruction in printing in the school.

When there is a position open for an apprentice in the composing room of any concern a party to the agreement between the union and the employing printers and publishers, it should be given to one of the boys receiving instruction in the school, and who, in the judgment of the instructor in charge, is best qualified to fill same.

The product of the students receiving instruction should be confined to printed matter used by the school.

The equipment of the school printing plant should be sufficient for the instruction needs.

The Purpose To Be Accomplished.

Every effort should be made to stimulate active interest on the part of the apprentice. He should be made to realize the advantage of developing into a competent journeyman printer. Care should be taken not to burden him with instruction he will be unable to properly assimilate. It should be borne in mind that most of our apprentices are of the age when their characters are being molded. They have not the same viewpoint of the responsibilities of life as a matured person. Careful instruction each year in the essentials of the trade will develop skilled journeymen upon the completion of the five-year apprenticeship period, and the development of skilled journeymen is the object of our program.

Committee on Apprentices of the United Typothetae and Franklin Clubs of America.

The following statements by Dr. Frederick W. Hamilton and Henry P. Porter outlines the purpose and activities of the committee on apprentices of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America:

BOSTON, MASS., May 16, 1917.

B. G. Brady, 321 Old South Building, Boston, Mass.:

DEAR MR. BRADY—In accordance with your request, I am sending you a statement of the aims and purposes of the committee on apprentices of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America. I have thought best to make this statement in tabular form so that it would give at a single glance the scope of our work, and an idea of the purposes upon which it is based, particularly with regard to that part of it in which you, perhaps, are most nearly concerned, that is, the training of apprentices.

The United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America committee on apprentices desires,

I. With regard to apprentice training.

(A) To secure a universal apprenticeship.

(B) To make such apprenticeship real, i. e., including provision for giving and requirement for taking regular instruction, with a progressive scale of wages, advances conditioned on satisfactory progress in learning the trade.

(C) To utilize to their fullest extent public and private agencies for the teaching of apprentices, especially by part-time and continuation methods.

(D) To prevent the training in full-time schools of printing of more apprentices than the industry can absorb.

(E) To prevent the exploitation of schools of printing commercially.

(F) To maintain the closest possible relation between all schools engaged in any form of instruction in printing and the industry.

II. To provide the adequate teaching material for the instruction of apprentices.

III. To provide facilities for the training of men already in the industry who desire greater skill.

IV. To provide technical education for those men who desire to prepare themselves for positions of supervision and control.

V. To provide training in business administration for those who desire to prepare themselves for the conduct of business.

The committee on apprentices of the International Typographical Union can co-operate with this committee, especially with regard to I.

(A) By the adjustment of union apprenticeship rules to the accomplishment of these purposes which are understood to be the purposes of the International Typographical Union as well as of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America.

(B) By exerting the influences of the International Typographical Union to prevent the abuses hereinbefore mentioned.

We count upon the co-operation of your committee at all points. Many things which may be done can not be indicated in so brief a statement. The success of any system of apprentice training depends very largely upon the attitude of journeymen and particularly of foremen toward the apprentice and toward his training. In this regard the co-operation of your committee and the local committees of the International Typographical Union can do much to secure successful results.

Perhaps a brief additional word regarding the work of our committee for the past year would not be unwelcome. I need not remind you that it is not always easy to state definitely the results of the work of such a committee. We have made considerable progress in what has seemed to us to be for the moment one of our most pressing duties, namely, the production of our textbooks. We think we can see our way clear to the publication of a very considerable part of this series before the summer is over. We have improved the work in all of our higher institutions for the education of printers. We have secured the approval of a standard apprentice indenture and have worked out co-operation with public and private institutions to a point beyond any previously reached. Up to the present this co-operation has been worked out in but few places, but these are important as being the proving ground for the system, and models for future development along the same lines. I feel that, while the results of our year's work have not been spectacular, and can not be stated in striking statistics, they have been in the highest degree important, and that steady and solid progress has been made toward the attainment of the aims which we share with you.

Very truly yours,
FREDERICK W. HAMILTON,
National Apprentice Director.

BOSTON, MASS., May 22, 1917.

B. G. Brady, 321 Old South Building, Boston, Mass.:

DEAR MR. BRADY—In response to your request for a statement from me regarding the work of the committee on apprentices of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America, I do not know that I can make any statement that will be of more interest to your members than to direct their attention to the last public statement of your former chairman, A. W. Thomson, which was printed in the supplement to your January Bulletin, entitled "Co-operation Is the Touchstone."

I have read this statement several times and I think it is a most excellent presentation of the work in which all printers, both employers and employed, must co-operate in order to bring about a better condition for the printing industry.

This committee is working along identical lines. It is doing its work quietly, but nevertheless efficiently, and has already accomplished much of value.

You have an equally important work to perform and judging from what you have accomplished I am sure that the printing industry in the near future will be a much better vocation for all concerned.

Very truly yours,
H. P. PORTER,
Chairman Committee on Apprentices.

Uniform Wage Scale and Regulations for Apprentices.

In making new agreements and wage scales local unions are urged to incorporate provisions to adequately conserve the welfare of the apprentice. The following form is recommended for this purpose as a guidance for scale committees:

Apprentices may be employed in the ratio of one to every ——— journeymen members of the typographical union regularly employed. Provided, that no office shall be entitled to an apprentice unless at least one journeyman, outside of the proprietor, shall be regularly employed in the composing room.

The foreman of the office and the local apprentice committee shall examine applicants and determine if they are mentally and physically fitted to the trade. The examination must prove that applicants for apprenticeship possess the rudiments of a common school education.

Apprentices shall not be less than sixteen years of age at the time of beginning their apprenticeship. They shall be registered by the secretary of the local typographical union, and they shall serve an apprenticeship period of five years before being admitted to journeyman membership in the union.

At the end of the second year, if apprentices prove competent, they must be admitted as apprentice members of the union, at which time they shall be registered with the secretary-treasurer of the International Typographical Union, who will assign to each junior member a registry number.

Starting with the third year, apprentices are entitled to and must be in possession of an apprentice working card, endorsed by the secretary of the local typographical union. Cards for the fourth and fifth years can not be granted until apprentices have passed examinations showing that their workmanship entitles them to promotion.

The foreman and chairman shall see that apprentices are afforded every opportunity to learn the different trade processes by allowing them to work in all departments of the composing room. When apprentices show proficiency in one branch, they must be advanced to other classes of work.

Should an apprentice be careless and neglectful of the duties required by those in control of his trade training, his case shall be investigated by the local committee on apprentices and presented to the union for action.

The grade and class of work to be taught apprentices shall be distributed as follows:

NEWSPAPER.

First Year—Apprentice should be employed at proofing galleys, straightening leads and slugs, holding copy, or such other work as he may be assigned to by the foreman.

Second Year—Apprentice should be employed at least 50 per cent of his time in the adroom. This period to be devoted to teaching him the case, type faces, distribution, and all the rudiments of the trade.

Third Year—Apprentice should be employed at least 75 per cent of his time in the adroom. This period to be devoted to teaching him all the intricate handiwork of the craft, and include proper display of ads, use of borders and ornaments, marking out of type matter for machines, relationship of type faces and their correct use, etc.

Fourth Year—Apprentice should be employed full time on adroom and make-up work. This period to be devoted to mastering all the detail work in ad composition and, after its completion, apprentice to be given thorough training on forms; the latter to include placing of ads, make-up of news and editorial pages, classification and make-up of liner pages, lock-up of forms for stereotype room, etc.

Fifth Year—Apprentice should be employed in the first three months of this period exclusively at reading proof. The second three months he should be employed on the layout of ads and general composing-room work, so that he can master every phase of ad construction. The last six months the apprentice is to be instructed exclusively on any and all typesetting machines in use in the office where he is employed.

BOOK AND JOB.

First Year—Apprentice should be employed at proofing galleys, straightening leads and sluga, holding copy, or such other work as he may be assigned to by the foreman.

Second Year—Apprentice should be employed at least 40 per cent of his time on composition and distribution. This period is to be devoted to teaching him the case, type faces, distribution and all the rudiments of the trade.

Third Year—Apprentice should be employed at least 60 per cent of his time on composition and distribution. This period to be devoted to teaching him all the intricate handiwork of the craft, and include proper display, use of borders and ornaments, grouping of type masses, relationship of type faces and their correct use, etc.

Fourth Year—Apprentice should be employed at least 80 per cent of his time on composition and distribution. This period to be devoted to mastering all the detail work in composition, and should also include imposition of eight, twelve, sixteen and thirty-two-page forms.

Fifth Year—Apprentice should be employed in the first three months of this period exclusively at reading proof. The second three months he should be employed on the higher classes of composition, such as booklets, catalogs, magazine ads, color work, etc. Time should also be devoted toward making the apprentice proficient in imposition.

The scale of wages for registered apprentices shall be as follows:

For the third year, not less than $.. per week.
For the fourth year, not less than $.. per week.
First half of fifth year, not less than $.. per week.
Last half of fifth year, not less than $.. per week.

Registered apprentices shall be given the same protection as journeymen, and shall be governed by the same shop rules, working conditions and hours of labor.

Beginning with the third year, apprentices shall be enrolled in the course in printing approved by the International Typographical Union and shall pay to the secretary-treasurer of the local union the sum of ..... per week until the full tuition is paid. Apprentices are required to make quarterly reports to the local apprentice committee showing the degree of proficiency attained through technical study.

Apprentices shall undergo regular yearly examinations before the local committee on apprentices. Their work must show if they are entitled to the increased wage scale provided in this contract. The employer or his representative has the right to be present and take part in any and all examinations.

No apprentice shall be employed on overtime work unless .... journeymen in the same office are employed on the same shift; at no time shall any apprentice have charge of a department.

Chairmen of offices where registered apprentices are employed are required to make quarterly reports to the local committee on apprentices. These reports must show if the agreed on conditions are being fulfilled by all parties to this contract—whether apprentices are being held back or if they are advanced in the different processes of the trade, and where apprentices are negligent or incapable of becoming competent workmen it must be set forth in the report.

The local union reserves the right to refuse to register apprentices in any office that has not the necessary equipment to afford instruction being given in the different branches of work agreed upon.

No apprentice shall leave one office and enter the services of another employer without the written consent of his first employer and the president of the union.

Recommendations.

In the belief that to secure the best results in the work of apprentice training standardization of that training is essential, we recommend that all unions incorporate a clause in their contracts with the employers that all apprentices be required to take up and complete the course in printing approved by the International Typographical Union before being admitted to journeyman membership. By this plan a boy going from one jurisdiction to another has no interruption in his trade training; he takes up his studies in the new jurisdiction just where he left off.

We believe that the work of the committee on supplemental trade education and the committee on apprentices is so closely related that an amalgamation of the two is desirable and therefore recommend that one committee be appointed by the president to take care of the work of both, this committee to be composed of five members, of which the president shall be an ex-officio member.

The Late A. W. Thomson.

On December 31, 1916, when the news of the death of A. W. Thomson was sent out from Indianapolis, it caused sorrow and sadness to many thousands of union printers within the ranks of the International Typographical Union. "Booth" Thomson was a familiar figure at numerous conventions of the International Typographical Union, and had endeared himself to a numberless host of friends through his kindly and lovable demeanor. A forceful and fluent talker, he became a conspicuous personage at many of the yearly gatherings of the union printers.

It was through his oratorical ability that he earned the appellation of "Booth." Of commanding presence and powerful voice, he was a forceful speaker and debater, and whenever he addressed a convention he was given rapt attention by the officers, delegates and visitors.

"Booth" Thomson was a member of Cleveland Typographical Union for close to forty years, and was regarded as one of the most influential union men in the country. He was president of No. 53 for four terms; secretary-treasurer for twelve terms; chairman of the committee that negotiated the first wage agreement for machine operators, and served on each succeeding scale committee (both book and job and newspaper) until his demise; chairman of the convention committee in 1912; delegate on nine different occasions, being elected to Cincinnati in 1883, Buffalo, 1887, Chicago, 1893, Milwaukee, 1900, Colorado Springs, 1906, San Francisco, 1911, Providence, 1914, Los Angeles, 1915, and Baltimore, 1916. He was elected as organizer for the third district in 1894, under President Prescott; appointed by President Lynch as reading clerk at the golden jubilee convention in Cincinnati in 1902; selected by President Duncan as chairman of the laws committee at the Providence convention in 1914; and served on numerous committees at the other conventions to which he was a delegate. In every instance he performed his duty in a noble and unselfish manner, and some of the most beneficial and enduring legislation enacted by the parent body were the product of his fertile brain.

In his local and in the International he was ever striving to build laws and solve problems that would accrue to the benefit of the members and add luster and brilliancy to our great organization. He possessed a powerful and analytical mind that was remarkable, for no question ever presented itself concerning union affairs but he was able to give a satisfactory solution.

Great as was his work and activities for a quarter of a century in behalf of the organized workers of his craft, the noblest and most enduring service he contributed was during the last two years of his life. First as chairman of the commission on vocational training, and later as chairman of the committee on apprentices.

Owing to negligence on the part of employers and employes the training of apprentices was entirely overlooked until it was fast becoming a serious menace to the welfare of our trade. Surrounded with perplexities that would discourage the average person and make him hesitate to assume the task of finding a remedy for the abatement of this evil, had no terrors for "Booth" Thomson. In his customary wise manner he sought for a specific that would not only correct but prevent further abuses emanating from this source He outlined plans and set about taking a canvass of the entire jurisdiction, so that he could apply his efforts and time to the standardization of training for apprentices.

At the Baltimore convention he prepared amendments to then existing laws governing apprentices which had for their purpose the guidance of local unions in dealing with the boys entering the trade. The wisdom of such action is attested to by many of the larger unions adopting regulations which will practically insure these unions that none but competent journeymen will be turned out in their jurisdictions in the future.

His cheerful disposition, his loyalty to the cause of unionism, his many contributions to the progress and success of the International Typographical Union, will be appreciated and cherished for years to come by those who knew him in life, but the masterful work performed by him in behalf of the apprentice boy will bear infinite fruit and serve as an everlasting monument to the memory of dear old "Booth" Thomson.

Thanks.

In conclusion, we wish to express our sincere appreciation of the counsel and assistance of President Scott and Secretary-Treasurer Hays in the furtherance of this most important work. We also extend our thanks to the members of local apprentice committees and the officers and members of subordinate locals for their active co-operation.

Respectfully submitted,

BERT G. BRADY, Chairman,
JAMES J. HOBAN, Secretary,
CHARLES HERTENSTEIN,
Committee on Apprentices.

REPORT OF A. F. OF L. DELEGATES

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—The thirty-sixth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor was held in Baltimore, Md., November 13-25, 1916, inclusive. In point of representation it was one of the largest gatherings ever held by that body, 394 delegates being reported in attendance, who represented 2,114,000 members.

The delegates and visitors were extended the usual welcome by the mayor of the city, the governor of the state and a number of other distinguished citizens from various walks of life, and the entertainment, special meetings and other functions arranged by the local unions of Baltimore and surrounding cities and towns for visiting union officials made the occasion both pleasurable and profitable.

Without going into detailed description of the activities of the Baltimore convention (which are fully set forth in the annual report covering more than 400 pages), it may be stated that the outstanding features of the gathering were the action taken relating to militarism, the high price problem and the so-called Adamson eight-hour law.

After a lengthy debate upon a report in which a committee virtually sanctioned military training in the public schools, the recommendation of the committee was defeated and the whole subject of militarism was referred to a special committee, which subsequently submitted the following as the declaration of the federation on this vital issue, which was unanimously adopted:

We are unalterably and emphatically opposed to "militarism," that system fostered and developed by tyrants with the object of supporting their arbitrary authority and utilized by those whose predatory designs or ambitions for power and worldly glory lead them to invade and subdue other nations, destroying their liberties, acquiring their wealth and fastening the yoke of bondage upon them.

The American trade-union movement is convinced by the experience of mankind that "militarism," even in its less horrid manifestations, brutalizes those influenced by the spirit of the institution. Under the baleful thrall of the savage instincts which it arouses, the finer elements of humanity are strangled. Under "militarism" a pseudo-patriotism is established in the minds of the people wherein men believe that there is nobility and heroism in dying for the glory of a dynasty, or the maintenance of institutions which are inimical to human progress and democratic institutions. "Militarism" is the appeal of arbitrary and irresponsible force as opposed to reason and justice.

Resistance to injustice and tyranny is that virile quality which has given purpose and effect to ennobling causes in all countries and at all times. The institutions of our country and the freedom won by its founders would have been impossible had they been unwilling to die in defense of their liberties. Only a people willing to maintain their rights and defend their liberties are guaranteed free institutions. Conditions foreign to the institutions of our country have prevented the entire abolition of organized bodies of men trained to carry arms. A citizen soldiery supplies what would otherwise take its place, a large standing army—to which we are unalterably opposed as tending to establish "militarism" in all of its phases. Large standing armies threaten the existence of civil liberty. The history of every nation demonstrates that as standing armies are enlarged the rule of democracy is lessened or extinguished. Our experience has been that even this citizen soldiery, the militia of our several states, has given cause for gravest apprehension. At times their ranks have been recruited from professional thugs, criminals and employes of corporations involved in conflict with workmen who are endeavoring to protect their rights and interests and elevate their standards of living.

During industrial disputes the militia has been called upon to support the authority of those who have desired to enforce martial law, while the courts were open and civil authorities competent to maintain the supremacy of civil law.

We declare that the militia of our several states should be organized and controlled by the democratic institutions of our country, so that this voluntary force of citizen soldiery may never be diverted from its true purpose to be used to jeopardize or infringe upon the liberties of our people.

The right to bear arms is a fundamental principle of our government, a principle regarded at all times by free people as essential to the maintenance of their liberties and institutions. We demand that this right shall remain inviolate.

Unquestionably the perpetuity of our ideals of government and the maintenance of our free institutions depend largely upon the character of training received by the youth of today—the citizen of tomorrow. While demanding that our public schools shall so teach our children as to develop keen, ready minds, and inspire them with high and lofty ideals fully prepared to intelligently exercise the duties and responsibility of a free people, we also demand that the body of every child be so trained in our schools as to develop them into full manhood and womanhood. We likewise insist that the youth of today—the worker of tomorrow—be so trained as to take his place in our industries fully equipped and prepared to protect his rights as a worker and to properly exercise his influence in our economic and industrial life.

We are, however, unalterably opposed to any form of physical training or any quality of mental education, which would tend to inculcate the spirit of "militarism." The child's immature and impressionable mind must not be taught to think, except with horror, upon the killing of human beings. To arouse the thought that any of their school hours are devoted to preparation for the possible use of arms against their fellow men, is to brutalize their instincts and subvert the influence of the necessary lessons of humanity, peace and good will which it is the duty of our public schools to impress upon them.

A number of resolutions were introduced dealing with the high cost of living and arbitrary advance of prices partly due to the war, shortage of production and principally the successful combination of capitalists to corner the market. The discussion of this problem necessarily took a wide range and demands were made that the government interfere with the alleged rights and privileges of certain classes of business interests to gouge the public to the limit, as, for instance, the paper manufacturers who, as has been clearly proved, have enforced great hardship on the printing industry because they had the power to combine and monopolize production. Not only were investigations and publicity demanded, but the government was urged to place an embargo on all commodities exported until such time as prices reached the normal level that generally prevailed before the outbreak of the war in Europe.

The following proposition, introduced by the delegates representing the International Typographical Union, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union, the International Photo-Engravers' Union and the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, was adopted after being slightly amended in phraseology:

Whereas, As a result of its recent investigation of news print paper prices, the Federal Trade Commission declares that during the first half of this year, when prices were already soaring to unprecedented figures, the average cost of producing news print paper in domestic mills was less than $1.65 a hundred pounds, or below the average cost of production in the last three years; and,

Whereas, Contract prices rose this year from less than $2 per hundred pounds to $3 and $3.50, and on current market purchases publishers have been compelled to pay as high as $7 or more for paper bought in the same way prior to January 1, 1916, for between $2 and $3; and,

Whereas, The facts obtained by the Federal Trades Commission show that the price of news print paper has advanced beyond all reason, considering the cost of manufacture, thereby indicating the existence of an illegal conspiracy to control prices and to extort illegitimate profits for jobbers and manufacturers; and,

Whereas, The exorbitant and still growing prices charged for news print and other papers have had the effect of forcing some newspapers to suspend publication, others to consolidate, and still others to reduce the number of pages printed, thereby greatly reducing the number of employes in departments under the jurisdiction of the international unions represented in the International Allied Printing Trades Association; and,

Whereas, Many newspaper publishers and commercial printers are reluctant to volunteer evidence tending to establish the existence of an illegal conspiracy, formed for the purpose of compelling the payment of extortionate prices for papers used in the printing industry; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, in behalf of the men and women employed in the printing industry, urges an immediate and thorough investigation by the department of justice, to determine the influences which have effectively controlled the prices of printing papers during the past year, and which threaten to still further increase the prices of the same; and, be it

Resolved, That the department of justice be urged to take up the Federal Trade Commission's report and immediately institute investigations through federal grand juries in the larger cities of the United States for the purpose of obtaining evidence of the illegal conspiracies which are believed to exist; and, be it

Resolved, That the executive council of the American Federation of Labor is hereby authorized and instructed to take such steps as may be necessary to obtain action by the Federal Trade Commission, the department of justice and by congress to the end that the printing industry may be rescued from the clutches of those who are unjustifiably manipulating the prices and supplies of papers used in printing.

The Adamson eight-hour law was the subject of considerable discussion, and the executive officers of the four railway brotherhoods were guests of the convention on the eighth day and explained their movement for the shorter workday and increased wages. In view of the action of congress in passing the Adamson bill and the impending attacks upon that measure in the courts, a resolution proposing that organized labor bend its efforts to secure action from state legislatures to restrict the workday in all industries to a maximum of eight hours was referred to the executive council with instructions to investigate the whole subject of legal procedure in this regard and report to the next convention. The subject of old age pensions, which was brought to the attention of the convention by a resolution introduced by your delegates as well as by several others, was also referred to the council for further investigation and a report later.

The convention urged that all affiliated international, state and local unions do all in their power to make the injunction question a paramount issue to the end that the provisions of the Clayton act may be incorporated in the statutes of the various states. It was also recommended that steps be taken to secure the passage of laws prohibiting the conferring of police powers on private guards and to prevent the transportation of strikebreakers from one state into another.

The American Federation of Labor officials were instructed to make special efforts to organize the school teachers of the country and also clerical and office help, nurses and attendants in hospitals and workers in other professions who are in an unorganized condition and unable to make united efforts to improve their conditions. Numerous affiliated organizations requested that special efforts be put forth to increase demands for products that bear their union label, which appeals were endorsed.

A warning was sounded to the workers of the country against the underhanded efforts that are now being made by enemies of trade unions to secure the enactment of laws in the various states to enforce compulsory arbitration or compel men and women to remain at work while some sort of an investigation is to be made relating to the demands that may be made. Such a law is now in operation in Canada and also in the state of Colorado, while President Wilson also recommended to the last congress that a similar measure be passed to deal with disputes in industries affecting interstate commerce. The right to cease work, where no contract operates to the contrary, for any reason or none is not to be surrendered by the laboring people of the country unless they are willing to wear the yoke of a new form of slavery.

Resolutions were introduced by Delegate John P. Frey, of the International Molders' Union, looking to the creation of a legal bureau by the federation. After considerable discussion this resolution was referred to the committee on laws, which reported favorably an amendment to the constitution increasing the per capita tax of international and national unions from three-fourths of a cent per member per month to 1 cent. An amendment which placed the per capita tax at seven-eighths of a cent per member per month was defeated.

In the discussion of this proposed amendment, it was conceded that the gross receipts of the federation for the preceding financial year had covered all disbursements and had left a comfortable balance in the hands of the treasurer. It was also conceded that the legal affairs of the large national and international unions could not be handled through such a department in Washington, and that it would be of little, if any, benefit to them. Since the proposed increase in the per capita tax would have amounted to more than $60,000 per year, and since the necessity for this increased tax was not apparent, the proposition was overwhelmingly defeated on a roll call by a vote of 11,866 against, to 8,722 for, a two-thirds vote being required to adopt. The undersigned delegates voted against the proposed increase in the per capita tax, believing there was no necessity for it.

Some of the old jurisdictional controversies cropped out again, several new ones made their initiatory bow and a few were adjusted to the satisfaction of the organizations interested.

The labor press, in which many of our members are actively ihterested, was given unstinted praise for conducting educational work necessarily preceding organization, and affiliated international and local unions were requested to advertise in and subscribe for the labor papers and thus assist in building up an institution that is a power for good, especially at a time when most needed.

The incumbent officials were re-elected, and Frank Farrington, of the miners, and John Golden, of the textile workers, were chosen as delegates to the British Trade Union Congress, while Emanuel Koveleski, of the hotel and restaurant employes, was named as delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress. Buffalo was selected as the next convention city.

Thanking the membership of the International Typographical Union for the honor conferred upon us to serve them as delegates to the American Federation of Labor, we remain

Yours fraternally,
MARSDEN G. SCOTT,
MAX S. HAYES,
H. W. DENNETT,
HUGH STEVENSON.

Note by Delegate Frank Morrison.

I concur in the above report, prepared by my colleagues, except their reference to their vote against increasing per capita tax to the American Federation of Labor for the establishment of a legal bureau of information. I voted to increase the per capita tax, because:

(1) The 1913 convention of the American Federation of Labor, Seattle, instructed the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to establish a legal department, the International Typographical Union delegates to that convention voted in favor of the instructions and the Providence convention of the International Typographical Union endorsed their action;

(2) The executive council of the American Federation of Labor reported to the Baltimore convention, 1916, that they could not establish a legal department because of lack of funds.

(3) The conventions of the American Federation of Labor for several years past ordered an assessment of 1 cent to be levied to organize the women workers, and at the Baltimore convention it was decided that no further assessments should be levied, except in case of a prolonged strike or lockout. Hence, if convention had increased per capita tax one-twelfth of a cent, which I advocated, the amount paid by the International Typographical Union this year would, under the proposed increase, have been exactly the same per capita as paid last year.

(4) The increase of per capita from three-fourths to seven-eighths of a cent would cost the International Typographical Union less than $52 per month, but the total collected would be sufficient to carry into effect the instructions of the Seattle convention, and leave a substantial balance to intensify American Federation of Labor activities.

(5) It is my belief that the members of the International Typographical Union are willing to give an additional one-twelfth or even one-fourth cent per member per month to be used by the officers of the American Federation of Labor to carry on its legislative and organizing campaigns which have been so beneficial to hundreds of thousands of wage workers and at a time when the forces that are antagonistic to the labor movement are bending every energy to stem the tide of organization and stay trade union efforts to establish improved working conditions.

Respectfully submitted,
FRANK MORRISON.

COMMITTEE ON POSTAL TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE SERVICE

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on postal telegraph and telephone service submits the following:

Since our last report nothing in a legislative way has been accomplished toward the advancement of this great and needed reform in this country's otherwise excellent and up-to-date postal service. Governmental ownership and operation of the means of transmitting and receiving communications by wire (and wireless and every other agency that may hereafter be devised or invented) would make our country's postal service the equal, if not superior, to that of any other nation in the world.

We again recall to the attention of our membership the fact that the present postmaster general, in his first annual report to congress, in December, 1913, recommended legislation that would make the sending of communications by wire or wireless a governmental monopoly. This recommendation has since been renewed annually, and the postmaster general strongly and ably urges the propriety and necessity of congress giving him authority to act in accordance with the provisions of the law of July 24, 1866, which affirmed the jurisdiction of the government over the then existing telegraph service and gave the numerous companies then in operation five years' lease of life, when they might be taken over by the government at their appraised valuation at the pleasure of congress. More than fifty years have now passed without congressional action. In the meantime, however, the telegraph companies were not idle. By 1874, eight years after the passage of the law of 1866, they had all been gathered under the wings of the Western Union, originally a small local New York corporation, chartered by that state in 1852. The telegraph monopoly by a private corporation was then complete, and it has remained a monopoly up to this date.

When Mr. Burleson's first report and recommendations were published many of our leading newspapers threw up their hands in amazement and horror. Not a few of these journals had in the past, particularly during the strikes and blacklisting of telegraphers in 1871, 1883 and 1907, been strong advocates of a governmental postal telegraph, and fiercely denounced the monopoly for its tyrannical and unjust treatment of its employes. Estimates of the cost of the postmaster general's "innovation" ranged from seven hundred millions of dollars and upward, which figures were many millions out of the way. The estimated cost looked and sounded enormous, and the cause of postal telegraphy and telephony received scant support from the press generally. Since 1913, world conditions have sustained terrific reverses. Our troubles with Mexico early made necessary governmental control or censorship of the wire service, and our entry as a participant in the great European war, after a long series of outrages and sacrifices of the lives of hundreds of American citizens and the destruction of many millions of dollars of American property, renders that censorship still imperative.

But the wire monopolies are getting all the profit of the increased business, which rightfully belongs to the government. Had congress acted promptly on the postmaster general's recommendation a very large sum could have been realized from the telegraph and telephone service, which would have aided materially in rendering unnecessary some forms of taxation now proposed to raise funds for the successful prosecution of the war. For instance, the increase in postage rates on publications and the proposed tax on advertisements. As this report is being written the senate committee on finance is giving hearings to newspaper publishers to learn the effect of the war taxes on the latter's business. All who have thus far testified have given most gloomy evidence as to the disastrous results which they have good reason to fear. With the increased cost of war news and the acute print paper situation owing to alleged scarcity, real or artificial, the printing business has been sorely stricken ever since the outbreak of the greatest war in all history.

It seems to your committee that no better time than the present will ever come for the government to declare a monopoly of the existing wire services and any and all others that may hereafter be devised, and thus restore to the people of this country a purely public function, so unwisely turned over to private control while the telegraph was still in its infancy and its tremendous future possibilities and usefulness unknown and unsuspected.

A few years ago a few hundred millions added to the expenses of our government created a great sensation among the people. Not so now, however. Congress is now appropriating by the billion, and we apprehend that there are more billions yet to come. The wire service added to the postal service would soon pay the cost of its acquisition under the terms of the law of 1866, which still remains on the statute books, unamended, and is known as the "national telegraph act."

In conclusion, we desire to say that there appears to be nothing left to your committee to do but to patiently watch and wait developments and as opportunity occurs to be ready to present to our national legislators the facts and arguments briefly outlined in the foregoing and such others as long study of the subject has placed at our disposal.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

UNION PRINTERS HOME

REPORT OF TRUSTEES.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—The board of trustees of the Union Printers Home herewith submits a detailed report of its transactions for the year ended May 31, 1917.

The report contains the minutes of the meetings of the corporation and board of trustees, the reports of standing committees, the financial statement of the treasurer, and the report of the superintendent, the latter document including a brief report from the Home physician.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES—ANNUAL MEETING.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., September 18, 1916.

The Board of Trustees of the Union Printers Home met Monday, September 18, 1916, at 10 A. M. at the Union Printers Home in the board room of the main building.

There were present at the session President Marsden G. Scott, Vice-President Thomas McCaffery, Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays, Trustees Michael Powell, Miss Anna C. Wilson, George P. Nichols and Walter E. Ames.

On motion of Secretary-Treasurer Hays, S. S. Leslie was appointed doorkeeper for this session of the board.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays was instructed to invite Secretary-Treasurer W. W. Drayer, of the Journeymen Stonecutters' Association of America, who was present at the board meeting by invitation of the officers of the board, to accompany the board on its inspection of the buildings and cemetery lots and also to occupy a seat during the meetings of the board while he is present in Colorado Springs.

The following report of Superintendent Daley, of the Union Printers Home, was read:

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., September 18, 1916.

To the Members of the Board of Trustees, Union Printers Home:

MISS WILSON AND GENTLEMEN—I herewith submit for your consideration the following report of the business transactions of the Home since the special meeting of the board of trustees in July of this year, together with recommendations:

As directed by the board of trustees the work of building an extension to the main building was started as soon as possible after the adjournment of the special meeting of the board in July. The foundation has been laid and work on the basement is well under way. Contracts have been let for the purchase of stone and other building material. Work is being pushed as rapidly as possible in order that the building may be enclosed before the rainy or winter season sets in.

Resident Trustee McCaffery, Master Mechanic Portner and myself have had several conferences with Architect Hetherington with reference to plans and specifications for interior work on the new addition. The architect is ready to appear before the board to explain in detail the proposed work as far as possible.

When Architect Hetherington appeared before the board of trustees in July to explain his plans he neglected to say anything about a larger kitchen and serving room for the hospital department. An enlarged kitchen and serving room are absolute necessities. This improvement can be made in one of two ways. First, by building a new addition, which will be adequate for many years, and, second, by enlarging the present short order kitchen and enlarging the serving room by tearing out the walls between the present serving room and annex dining room and using part of the annex dining room. I would suggest that the board make a decision in this matter at this meeting.

As authorized by the finance committee of the board of trustees at its meeting in April, 1916, the following matters have been taken care of:

The greenhouses have been repaired and put in as good condition as possible. The houses are old and too small, but we will have to do the best we can with them this year. The building of new greenhouses was laid over for consideration at a later meeting.

Five dozen "Wear Ever" aluminum serving trays were purchased at a cost of $113.69.

An electric vacuum cleaner was purchased at a cost of $60.

A horse lawn mower was purchased at a cost of $82.67.

Surgical instruments in the sum of $117.92 were purchased for nose and throat work.

As authorized by the board of trustees, a King automobile was purchased at a cost of $1,480.25.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

1. Our general form of insurance is some nine years old and some changes and additions should be made to adequately protect our property under present conditions. I recommend that Charles T. Fertig, of the Fertig Insurance and Investment Company, be asked to appear before the board and make suggestions that he believes will better protect the Home in the matter of fire insurance.

2. Owing to the large number of patients in the sanatorium at the present time, many of whom are bed patients, I find that in order to get the best results it will be necessary to employ an interne permanently, or to employ the medical consultant at least two hours every day of the week, instead of two hours per day, three days each week. I recommend that the board take action on this matter at this session.

3. When the new addition is completed it will be necessary to install a new range, dishwasher and plate warmer. The range is quoted at $195, the dishwasher at $475 and the plate warmer at $95. In order to install this equipment so that there will be no delay in opening the new addition, it will be necessary to place the order in the near future. I recommend that the superintendent be authorized to purchase the above equipment.

4. I also recommend that the superintendent be authorized to purchase all necessary furnishings for the new addition as soon as needed.

5. In my report to the finance committee I said that "the outside of the main building and the annex ought to be painted this year;" but I suggest that this work be delayed until the new addition is completed, after which the old work and the new work can be done at the same time. I recommend that the superintendent be authorized to have this work done.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN C. DALEY, Superintendent.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that the president be authorized to appoint the usual committees, and that the report be referred to the proper committees. This motion was unanimously adopted.

On motion of Secretary-Treasurer Hays the superintendent was instructed to invite Charles T. Fertig, of the Fertig Insurance and Investment Company, to appear before the board Wednesday morning.

On motion of Secretary-Treasurer Hays the secretary was instructed to post notices notifying the residents that the board will hear any complaints or suggestions on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

On motion of Trustee Powell, Architect T. D. Hetherington, of Colorado Springs, was invited to appear before the board on Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock.

A further motion was made by Trustee Powell that the hours of the meeting of the board be daily from 10 A. M. to 12:30 P. M., and from 1:30 P. M. to 5 P. M. This motion was unanimously adopted.

On motion of Secretary-Treasurer Hays the superintendent and the matron of the Home and the Home physicians were invited to appear before the board on Thursday morning.

A communication was read from Charles Maskrey. On motion of Secretary-Treasurer Hays this communication was referred to Vice-President McCaffery with instructions to investigate and report to the board.

A communication was read from Susan S. Harris, director of the Colorado Springs Society of Occupational Therapy.

Trustee McCaffery moved that the secretary be instructed to acknowledge the receipt of this letter and to state to Miss Harris that the board did not feel in a position at the present time to engage in the work. This motion was adopted unanimously.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that the superintendent and resident trustee be authorized to take up the question of what shall be done with the land in front of the main building, with a view to getting possession of part of the street, if possible, or purchase from the Palmer estate all that tract belonging to the estate. This motion was unanimously adopted.

The following committees were appointed by the president:

Committee on rules—Michael Powell, George P. Nichols, Anna C. Wilson.

Committee on inspection of buildings—Michael Powell, George P. Nichols, Walter E. Ames.

Committee to visit hospital—Thomas McCaffery, Walter E. Ames, Anna C. Wilson.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that the annual inspection of buildings and the cemetery lots take place this afternoon at 1:30. This motion was adopted.

On motion the board adjourned to reconvene at 1:30 P. M.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1916.

The board of trustees met at 10 A. M. as per adjournment with all members present, and President Scott in the chair.

The following supplemental report of the superintendent was read:

In the matter of placing windows in the tents, which was referred to the superintendent, Resident Trustee McCaffery and the Home physicians, I desire to say that upon investigation it was found that the ventilators in 75 per cent of the tents were closed and in some instances the doors were shut. At the time the petition was presented to the board of trustees asking that windows be placed in the tents the weather was unusually hot (the hottest in many years). The master mechanic, resident trustee and superintendent are of the opinion that if the residents of the tents will keep their doors and ventilators open there is no necessity for placing windows in the tents. The physicians agree with us on this point.

As directed by the board of trustees at its last annual meeting, the resident trustee and the superintendent called on Mayor McKesson and Commissioner Anderson for the purpose of trying to get the city to erect a new bridge or cement culvert to replace the old and dilapidated bridge on Pikes Peak avenue and to fix up the roadway leading to the Home. After a lengthy conference, the mayor and commissioner agreed to do this work. A cement culvert has been constructed, but thus far very little has been done to put the roadway in proper condition.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN C. DALEY, Superintendent.

On motion of Trustee Powell the board took up the recommendations contained in the report of Superintendent Daley, the recommendations and the actions thereon being as follows:

2. Owing to the large number of patients in the sanatorium at the present time, many of whom are bed patients, I find that in order to get the best results it will be necessary to employ an interne permanently, or to employ the medical consultant at least two hours every day of the week, instead of two hours per day, three days each week. I recommend that the board take action on this matter at this session.

On motion of Trustee McCaffery action on this recommendation was deferred until after the Home physicians had appeared before the board.

3. When the new addition is completed it will be necessary to install a new range, dishwasher and plate warmer. The range is quoted at $195, the dishwasher at $475 and the plate warmer at $95. In order to install this equipment so that there will be no delay in opening the new addition, it will be necessary to place the order in the near future. I recommend that the superintendent be authorized to purchase the above equipment.

Trustee Powell moved that the recommendation be concurred in. This motion was unanimously adopted.

4. I also recommend that the superintendent be authorized to purchase all necessary furnishings for the new addition as soon as needed.

Trustee Powell moved that the recommendation be concurred in. This motion was unanimously adopted.

5. In my report to the finance committee I said that "The outside of the main building and the annex ought to be painted this year;" but I suggest that this work be delayed until the new addition is completed, after which the old work and the new work can be done at the same time. I recommend that the superintendent be authorized to have this work done.

Trustee Powell moved that the recommendation be concurred in. This motion was unanimously adopted.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that the report of the superintendent regarding the greenhouses, the "Wear Ever" aluminum serving trays, the electric vacuum cleaner, the horse lawn mower, the surgical instruments and the King automobile be approved. This motion was unanimously adopted.

On motion of Secretary-Treasurer Hays the superintendent and the resident trustee were authorized to include a serving room for the sanatorium in the improvements now being made.

Trustee Powell moved that the action of the superintendent and the resident trustee in the supplementary report be endorsed. This motion was unanimously adopted.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that the superintendent and resident trustee be instructed to continue their efforts to have the road between the Home and Colorado Springs put in proper condition. This motion was unanimously adopted.

Trustee Nichols moved that the board entertain for one day on the Home premises the delegates and visitors to the convention of the International Typographical Union to be held in Colorado Springs in August, 1917; and that the sum of $1,500 be apprppriated for the use of the superintendent and the resident trustee in providing this entertainment. This motion was unanimously adopted.

On motion of Secretary-Treasurer Hays the superintendent was instructed to take up the question of the advisability of procuring treatment for Resident William Nixon other than that which he was enabled to receive at the Home.

Architect Hetherington appeared before the board by invitation and explained to the board the plans of a larger kitchen and serving room for the hospital department.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that the superintendent and resident trustee be instructed to have cement finish used in the new serving room. This motion was unanimously adopted.

On motion of Trustee Powell the matter of curbing or marking the new plot in the cemetery was referred to the superintendent and the resident trustee with instructions to report to the finance committee.

On motion the meeting adjourned.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 20, 1916.

The board met at 10 A. M. as per adjournment with all members present, and President Scott in the chair.

Charles T. Fertig, of the Fertig Insurance and Investment Company, appeared before the board in response to an invitation issued at the Monday session.

On motion of Trustee Powell the superintendent and resident trustee were instructed to take steps to get a valuation for insurance, to report to the finance committee, and also to secure information as to the rewiring of the old parts of the main building.

On motion of Trustee Powell the secretary was instructed to write a letter to the Portland Milling Company expressing the appreciation of the members of the board of trustees for the courtesies extended to them on their recent visit to the mill.

On motion of Trustee Powell the superintendent was instructed to purchase a new chair for Resident James L. Pitts.

On motion of Trustee Ames the request of Resident James L. Pitts that rubber wheels be placed on tables, dressers and beds on all of the overhead rooms was referred to the superintendent and resident trustee.

On motion of Trustee Powell, Secretary-Treasurer W. W. Drayer, of the Journeymen Stonecutters' Association of America, who had been a guest of the board for several days, addressed the board as follows:

Mr. President, if you please, I desire first, I assure you, to thank you and the board of trustees for the courtesy and hospitality shown me during my short visit here at the Union Printers Home.

I may say that several years ago, when trade conditions were good in our line, a movement was started to establish a home for our aged and infirm members, but before that project was ever started we became involved in trade difficulties, and I may say that we were troubled with the installation of machines, and unlike the typographical union, who manned and controlled the machines when they were introduced in the trade, we, instead of taking hold of the machines, attempted to put them out of business, with the result that a dual organization was formed by the employers which not only materially decreased our membership but almost bankrupted our organization. For that reason the home proposition laid dormant for a number of years.

In 1913 several locals throughout the country again submitted this home proposition, and being acquainted with Mr. Hays, shortly before our Kansas City convention I extended to him an invitation to visit our convention and explain the establishment of the Printers Home and what it required to keep up an institution of this kind, that we might be enlightened as to the possibility of our organization establishing such a home. Mr. Hays cheerfully complied with the invitation and came out and in an address outlined the establishment of this Home, and I might say that he amazed our members when he advised them what it would cost to put up an institution of this kind, and what it cost to maintain one after it was established. Nevertheless they instructed me at some future time to visit the Union Printers Home and obtain some idea as to the cost of maintaining it. I had promised Mr. Hays on several occasions that I would come out with him; I had promised him so many times that at this time I felt as though I really should go, and I want to assure you that my visit here is an occasion that I shall ever remember with pleasure.

After inspecting the Union Printers Home in company with the board of trustees, I must congratulate the International Typographical Union and the board of trustees upon this wonderful institution and what it is doing for its aged and sick members. It must be seen to be appreciated, as one can not from any description realize the proportions of this institution and what it means to the sick and aged members of the union.

There is not any speech that I desire to make this morning further than to thank this board of trustees for the courtesies and hospitality shown me while I have been here in Colorado Springs. I thank you.

President Scott replied to Secretary-Treasurer Drayer as follows:

I am sure I echo the sentiments of all the members of the board when I say that if we have been useful to your organization in any way or thrown any light on this subject we are very much pleased. We are glad to know you have enjoyed your visit here.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays presented the following as a proposition coming from the Baltimore convention of the International Typographical Union, having been referred to the executive council and the board of trustees:

Proposition No. 167—By Delegate Woolsey (Springfield, Mo.):

Amend article ix, constitution, by adding the following new section:

UNION PRINTERS HOME ENDOWMENT FUND.

Section —. There is hereby created the "Union Printers Home Endowment Fund," the same to consist of such moneys and other property as may be donated to or otherwise provided for such fund. All such funds shall pass through the hands of the secretary-treasurer of the International Typographical Union and then go into the hands of the secretary-treasurer of the Union Printers Home Corporation as the official custodian thereof, subject to investment as hereinafter provided. The principal of such fund shall be held perpetually by the International Typographical Union and be invested and reinvested by it, through and by the executive council, as provided by law. All interest and income derived from the investment of such funds shall go into the "Union Printers Home Fund," and shall be used toward the maintenance of said Union Printers Home. Such endowment fund shall be invested and reinvested from time to time by the secretary-treasurer in bonds of the United States, or in approved non-taxable state, county, township, city or school district bonds within the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union, or loaned upon unencumbered improved real estate situated within said jurisdiction and reasonably worth double the amount so loaned thereon. The secretary-treasurer shall furnish a blank upon which all donations to said endowment fund shall be made, and there shall be printed annually in the reports of officers a list of the names to date, chronologically arranged, of all donors of $25 or more to the "Union Printers Home Endowment Fund."

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that this be referred to the executive council with a request to the council that they take the matter up and have a proposition properly prepared to present to the next convention. This motion was unanimously adopted.

On motion of Trustee Powell the board adjourned for the purpose of inspecting the main building.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, SEPTEMBER 20, 1916.

The board reconvened at 1:30 P. M. with all members present.

Resident John Dingell, of Colorado Springs No. 82, protested against the rest hours for sanatorium patients, and asked that they be reduced to two and one-half hours.

On motion of Trustee Powell action on this request was deferred until after the Home physicians had appeared before the board.

Resident John Gale, of No. 16, Chicago, complained about the noises and the smoking in the pavilion, which prevented the improvement the Home physician claims should be made in his case.

Trustee Powell moved that this be brought to the attention of the superintendent and the Home physician, and that they be instructed to have the rules enforced, and report to the board if they are unable to have same enforced.

Resident Samuel Boll, of New York No. 6, requested that he be provided with two pairs of rubber stockings.

On motion of Trustee McCaffery this matter was referred to the superintendent and the Home physician.

Resident H. Harrald, of New York No. 6, requested that the library rules be impartially enforced or abrogated.

Trustee Nichols moved that the question of the enforcement of the rules in the library be referred to Vice-President McCaffery to be taken up with the regular librarian, with a view to having all works of reference placed in a section by themselves, and giving the residents opportunity to consult these books without the necessity of first seeing the librarian, if such plan proves feasible. This motion was unanimously adopted.

The following communication was read from Resident B. F. Smythe:

UNION PRINTERS HOME,
COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.,
September 20, 1916.

Trustees Union Printers Home:

GENTLEMEN AND MADAM—I beg leave to submit for your consideration the accompanying proposition and specimen pages of "The Library of Original Sources," and trust you may see your way clear to purchase the ten volumes for the Home library. There is nothing of the character of this work to be found among our selection of books, and while it might not appeal to the average printer, with a mind for yellow-back literature, as being of as much importance as a game of solitaire, yet there are others who would cherish a privilege to examine such original sources of man's development during so long a period of time as 9,000 years with great satisfaction.

Hoping the matter may be favorably considered by you, I am, gentlemen and madam,

Very truly yours, etc.,
B. F. SMYTHE.

The committee on inspection of buildings presented the following report:

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., September 20, 1916.

Your committee begs leave to present the following report on the grounds, cemetery, and the maintenance of the Home.

All the improvements authorized by the board and the finance committee have been carried out in a satisfactory manner.

Satisfactory progress is being made in the erection of the addition.

The live stock, barns and stables were found in good condition.

The librarian, Oscar Howard, still maintains his reputation of conducting the library in an able manner. He has been well assisted by the late Mr. Lehman.

The grounds have been maintained in the usual high standard of past years, and the head gardener, George Forbes, is to be congratulated on his work.

We also wish to express our appreciation of the services rendered by the different residents in the care of the trucks, garden, and assisting in the work of the laundry and the mechanical staff.

The cemetery plots were found to be in first-class condition.

The superintendent and Mrs. Daley still maintain the high interest they have in every resident at the Home, their untiring efforts on behalf of the residents being such that they should be highly commended.

MICHAEL POWELL,
WALTER E. AMES,
GEORGE P. NICHOLS.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that the superintendent be authorized to have a panel placed in the proper position in the present extension containing the names of the trustees who are responsible for the present improvements being made and who carried through the work of securing the money to build the present extension, together with the names of the superintendent and the agent. This motion was unanimously adopted.

On motion the meeting adjourned.

THURSDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 21, 1916.

The board met at 10 A. M. as per adjournment with all members present, and President Scott in the chair.

On motion of Trustee Ames the request of Resident B. F. Smythe that ten volumes of "The Library of Original Sources" be purchased for the Home library was referred to the superintendent and librarian, with instructions to purchase the same if deemed advisable.

The committee appointed to visit the patients in the hospital reported as to the condition of each member in that institution.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that the report of the committee be referred to the superintendent and the Home physician. This motion was unanimously adopted.

At this time Doctors Giese and Runyon appeared before the board and made statements as to the medical department.

Superintendent Daley in his report to the board made the following recommendation:

2. Owing to the large number of patients in the sanatorium at the present time, many of whom are bed patients, I find that in order to get the best results it will be necessary to employ an interne permanently, or to employ the medical consultant at least two hours every day of the week, instead of two hours per day, three days each week. I recommend that the board take action on this matter at this session.

The board discussed this proposition with the doctors and the superintendent, and the matter was referred to the president and the secretary-treasurer to bring back to the board at its next session.

Doctor Giese recommended that some money be appropriated for the purpose of providing a medical library for the use of the physicians in the sanatorium, and also that some current medical periodicals be subscribed for.

On motion of Secretary-Treasurer Hays the recommendation of Doctor Giese that two lenses be purchased for the microscope was referred to the superintendent.

Doctor Giese recommended that the physicians be authorized to attend at least two conventions, having for their object the prevention and cure of tuberculosis.

Referring to the communication received from Resident Charles Maskrey and referred to Trustee McCaffery, Doctor Giese stated Mr. Maskrey's anemic condition was caused from the use of morphia, and that there was no known cure for locomotor ataxia.

On motion the meeting adjourned.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, SEPTEMBER 21, 1916.

The board reconvened at 1:30 P. M. with all members present.

Trustee Nichols moved that the petition from Resident John Dingell that the rest hours for sanatorium patients be reduced to two and one-half hours, be referred to the committee on rules. This motion was unanimously adopted.

On motion of Trustee Powell the question of consulting with Attorney Kinsley regarding the endowment fund was referred to President Scott, Vice-President McCaffery and Secretary-Treasurer Hays.

On motion of Trustee Nichols the meeting adjourned.

FRIDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 22, 1916.

The board met at 10 A. M. as per adjournment with all members present, and President Scott in the chair.

A request was read from Resident R. S. Mayhall that he be permitted to appear before the board. This request was granted.

The committee on rules presented the following report:

Amend section 22 of the general rules and regulations to read as follows:

Meals will be served in the main dining room during the following hours: Breakfast, from 7:15 to 8:15; dinner, from 11:45 to 12:45, and supper from 5:45 to 6:45. Sundays and holidays, supper will be served from 5 to 6. New Year's day, I. T. U. Memorial day, Decoration day, Fourth of July, Labor day, Thanksgiving and Christmas will be observed as holidays. No meals will be served except during the hours mentioned. A bell will be rung fifteen minutes before each meal, and each meal will be announced by the second ringing of the bell. All who are able must attend the general table. Suitable meals will be prepared and sent to the rooms of the sick.

The recommendation of the amendment of section 22 was concurred in.

Amend section 34 of the general rules and regulations to read as follows:

Loud, profane or improper language; reading aloud, singing, whistling or boisterous conduct is positively prohibited in the halls or the assembly room. The penalties for violation of this rule shall be the same as those prescribed in rule 28.

The recommendation of the amendment of section 34 was concurred in.

Amend section 37 of the tuberculosis sanatorium rules and regulations to read as follows:

Meals will be served during the following hours: Breakfast, from 7:30 to 8:30; dinner from 12 to 1, and supper from 5:45 to 6:30. Sundays and holidays supper will be served from 5 to 5:45. New Year's day, I. T. U. Memorial day, Decoration day, Fourth of July, Labor day, Thanksgiving and Christmas will be observed as holidays. No meals will be served except during the hours mentioned. Residents must attend all meals promptly. A bell will be rung fifteen minutes before each meal, and each meal will be announced by the second ringing of the bell. All who are able must attend the general table. Suitable meals will be prepared and sent to the rooms of the sick.

The recommendation of the committee to amend section 37 was concurred in.

Amend section 40 of the tuberculosis sanatorium rules and regulations to read as follows:

Sputum cups must be used by all tubercular patients while in the buildings, on the verandas or grounds, or in the vicinity thereof. These cups must be carried in cup holders furnished by the Home. These cups can be procured from the nurse at 9 A. M. and 5:30 P. M.

The recommendation of the committee to amend section 40 was concurred in.

Amend paragraph 3 of section 54, superintendent, matron, physicians and nurses' rules and regulations, to read as follows:

The medical director shall visit the Home on six days a week, from 8 to 10 o'clock A. M., consult with the Home physician and render such medical assistance as may be deemed necessary.

The finance committee reported that it had made arrangements with Doctor Giese to continue in his present position, visiting the Home six days every week and spending two hours every day in the institution, at a salary of $2,000. The committee also reported that it was its opinion, as well as the opinion of Doctor Giese, that when the present extension to the south wing was completed and filled it would be necessary to have an assistant for the Home physician.

The board concurred in the report of the committee that Doctor Giese should visit the Home six days a week and that his salary should be increased to $2,000.

The committee on rules recommends that the following paragraph be inserted as No. 51, and that paragraph No. 51 shall be changed to paragraph No. 52:

That when the Home physicians report a resident is sufficiently improved to work, that resident shall be so notified by the superintendent. If said resident declines to vacate upon such notice, the matter shall be reported to the board of trustees.

The board concurred in this recommendation.

On the petition from a number of the sanatorium residents for a change in the rest hours, your committee recommends that the previous action of the board in regard to the rest hour be affirmed.

MICHAEL POWELL,
GEORGE P. NICHOLS,
ANNA C. WILSON.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Resident R. S. Mayhall appeared before the board and presented the argument that under the present conditions it was impossible to get the sanatorium residents to come before the board and make suggestions or complaints. It appeared to be his idea in some instances the residents would not do this for fear of contempt of the other residents. In other cases the idea seemed to be conveyed that it was useless to come before the board because the board would make no ruling that would appear to be against the management or the Home physician. A long discussion occurred between Mr. Mayhall and the members of the board upon this subject.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that the board appropriate the sum of $125 per year for three years to be expended for medical works and medical magazines. This motion was unanimously adopted.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that the Home physicians be authorized to attend two conventions having for their objects the prevention and cure of tuberculosis. This motion was unanimously adopted.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that the sergeant-at-arms, Seaber S. Leslie, be allowed $5 for his services during the meeting of the board. This motion was unanimously adopted.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that Vice-President McCaffery be allowed the sum of $250 for his services during the year in connection with the Home. This motion was unanimously adopted.

The nomination and election of officers then took place.

Vice-President McCaffery took the chair and Marsden G. Scott was nominated and unanimously re-elected as president.

The president resumed the chair and Vice-President Thomas McCaffery was nominated and unanimously re-elected as vice-president.

J. W. Hays was nominated and unanimously re-elected as secretary-treasurer of the board.

The president declared that two standing committees—the committee on admission and the finance committee—and the executive board would be continued until the first of November.

On motion the meeting adjourned.

SATURDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 23, 1916.

The board met at 10 A. M. as per adjournment with all members present, and President Scott in the chair.

The committee on rules presented the following supplemental report:

We recommend that section 46 of the rules and regulations of the tuberculosis sanatorium, "Only patients in the earlier stages of tuberculosis shall be admitted to tents," be stricken out.

This recommendation was unanimously concurred in.

At the request of the board Attorney Kinsley appeared and discussed with the board the legal phases connected with the establishment of an endowment fund for the Union Printers Home.

After this discussion Secretary-Treasurer Hays presented to the board the following proposition establishing an endowment fund for the Union Printers Home. This procedure is in accordance with the provisions of the by-laws of the Home:

ARTICLE VIII.

UNION PRINTERS HOME ENDOWMENT FUND.

Section 1. There is hereby created the "Union Printers Home Endowment Fund," the same to consist of such moneys and other property as may be donated, devised, bequeathed or otherwise contributed to such fund.

Sec. 2. The principal of such fund shall be held perpetually by the Board of Trustees of the Union Printers Home and their successors, and shall be separate and distinct from other funds and be invested and reinvested in bonds of the United States, or in approved, non-taxable state, county, township, municipal or school district bonds within the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union.

Sec. 3. The executive committee of the Board of Trustees of the Union Printers Home shall have power to invest the principal of the Union Printers Home Endowment Fund, or any part thereof, in securities of the character provided in section 2 subject to the approval of the Board of Trustees of the Union Printers Home.

Sec. 4. All interest and income derived from the investment of such fund, or any part thereof, shall be deposited to the credit of the Union Printers Home, and shall be used for the maintenance of the Union Printers Home.

Sec. 5. The secretary-treasurer of the Union Printers Home shall prepare and furnish a blank upon which donations to said Union Printers Home Endowment Fund may be made and there shall be printed annually in the report of the board of trustees a list of names of all contributors to the Union Printers Home endowment fund.

Sec. 6. The fund hereby created shall not preclude or affect the right of the Union Printers Home to receive devises and bequests and to accept and execute trusts as now provided by the charter, constitution and by-laws of the Union Printers Home.

The president declared the additional article to the by-laws of the Union Printers Home establishing an endowment fund as provided above adopted in accordance with the provisions of the by-laws of the Union Printers Home, and directed the secretary-treasurer to so amend the constitution and by-laws of the Union Printers Home.

Trustee McCaffery moved that the rules as amended be reprinted. This motion was unanimously adopted.

Residents John Paul, of Quebec; J. M. Messer, of Knoxville, Tenn., and W. S. Powers, of Seattle, Wash., were called before the board, and the board instructed them most emphatically that no residents of the pavilion would be allowed to disturb other residents who were making an effort to recover from their afflictions, and that if this annoyance continued, and the superintendent was unable to determine who were the offenders, it would be necessary to create vacancies in the entire pavilion and allow members who are on the waiting list to come to the Home.

The vice-president was authorized by the board to give full publicity to the establishment of the Union Printers Home endowment fund.

The president, in view of the fact that Trustees Powell and Ames were attending the last meeting of the board, made for the members of the board presentations as follows:

Mr. Powell, you have been here quite some time. I will say this, and I think the other members will agree with me, that every act of yours on this board has been prompted by a desire to be of service to this institution, and I know that we all regret that the time has come when your term of office ends. It is a sad feature of service to a labor organization that when those who have worked faithfully for a long while, trying to build it up and better it, find they must sever their official relations, and I want you to know that we all of us regret very much that you will not be with us next year. As a slight token of appreciation of your cooperation with us, we present to you a traveling bag, and we hope that you will bring it with you to Colorado Springs next year to the convention. I do not know of any more that I can say except to wish you good luck through the years to come.

In reply to President Scott, Mr. Powell made the following remarks:

Mr. President and Members of the Board—In the six years that I have been on this board I have experienced some of the most pleasant times that I have had in my life. It is a great work in which I have always taken much interest, and I have always tried to do my best for the members and for the Home.

I have never met on this board any person whose work was not for the interest of the Home. I have never met anybody on this board who played politics for their own benefit—they have always worked for the benefit of the Home.

I have sat on the board with President Lynch, Mr. Shepard, Mr. Wood, Mr. McKee and the present members, and not one of them to my own knowledge has endeavored to do anything but that which would be for the best interests of the Home. We sometimes differ in regard to the method, but I am one who, if I make a proposition to the board and the rest of the members do not agree with that proposition, I do not think that they are against me. I am willing to submit to their judgment on the proposition.

I thank you very heartily for all the kind words President Scott has said, and I heartily appreciate the bag which has been presented to me.

President Scott addressed Trustee Ames as follows:

We know that you, too, have been earnest in your efforts to co-operate with the rest of us, and we regret that you will not be with us next year. We want you to take with you the pleasant recollections of your associations here and a slight memento of our good wishes. We have one of the watch charms of the International Typographical Union and a pair of sleeve buttons. We hope in the years to come that when you look at these you will remember your pleasant associations as trustee of the Union Printers Home.

Trustee Ames replied to President Scott as follows:

Mr. President and Members of the Board—In my associations with the board I have felt that each and every member has striven to do the best he could for the interest of the Home and the residents of the same. I shall always remember with pleasure my associations with the members of this board, and I trust the members who succeed us will have the same object in view that we have all had, namely, the betterment of the Home.

Further than that I can not say anything except to thank you all for your kindness, also the superintendent and Mrs. Daley for the many favors they have shown me and also my wife when she was with me, and I hope to meet you all here next year.

There being no further business to come before the board, it was on motion adjourned.

J. W. Hays, Secretary-Treasurer.

MEETING OF HOME CORPORATION.

Colorado Springs, Colo., November 11, 1916.

The annual meeting of the Union Printers Home Corporation convened in the city of Colorado Springs, Colo., on Saturday, November 11, 1916, at 7:30 p. m., in accordance with the provisions of article ii of its by-laws, due notice of said meeting having been given to all members of the corporation. The following members were present, either in person or by proxy: Marsden G. Scott (by proxy), J. W. Hays (by proxy), Anna C. Wilson (by proxy), Michael Powell (by proxy), Walter E. Ames (by proxy), George P. Nichols (by proxy) and Thomas McCaffery.

The minutes of the last annual meeting of the corporation, held November 6, 1915, were read and approved.

The annual report of the board of trustees, which included reports from the various standing committees, Secretary-Treasurer Hays and Superintendent John C. Daley, was submitted, read and approved.

The terms of membership of Michael Powell and Walter E. Ames having expired, their resignations were presented, as required by article i of the by-laws, and duly accepted.

The following communications from Secretary-Treasurer Hays, certifying to the International Typographical Union's endorsement of Malcolm A. Knock and William Mounce for membership in the Union Printers Home Corporation, were received and ordered placed on file:

Indianapolis, Ind., October 30, 1916.

To the Corporation of the Union Printers Home:

This is to certify that Malcolm A. Knock received the endorsement of the International Typographical Union at the referendum election held on May 24, 1916, and is hereby declared the nominee of the International Typographical Union for membership in the corporation known as the Union Printers Home for the term beginning November, 1916, and ending November, 1919.

Fraternally yours,
J. W. Hays,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Indianapolis, Ind., October 30, 1916.

To the Corporation of the Union Printers Home:

This is to certify that William Mounce received the endorsement of the International Typographical Union at the referendum election held on May 24, 1916, and is hereby declared the nominee of the International Typographical Union for membership in the corporation known as the Union Printers Home for the term beginning November, 1916, and ending November, 1919.

Fraternally yours,
J. W. Hays,
Secretary-Treasurer.

In compliance with the instructions of the International Typographical Union as certified by its secretary-treasurer, Malcolm A. Knock and William Mounce were unanimously elected to membership in the Union Printers Home Corporation for the term beginning November, 1916, and ending November, 1919.

The obligation of Malcolm A. Knock and William Mounce, properly signed and attested, as required by law, were presented, read and approved, and ordered placed on file.

Officers of the corporation for the ensuing year were then elected as follows: President, Marsden G. Scott; vice-president, Thomas McCaffery; secretary-treasurer, J. W. Hays.

The following persons were then declared to be the duly elected and qualified members of the Board of Trustees of the Union Printers Home: Marsden G. Scott, J. W. Hays, Anna C. Wilson, George P. Nichols, Malcolm A. Knock, William Mounce and Thomas McCaffery.

No further business appearing, the annual meeting of the Home Corporation was declared adjourned. THOMAS MCCAFFERY, Vice-President.

HOME BOARD FINANCE COMMITTEE.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., May 14, 1917.

A meeting of the finance committee of the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home was held in the superintendent's office at the Home on May 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18, 1917.

The finance committee met at the call of President Scott. The committee is composed of President Scott, Vice-President McCaffery and Secretary-Treasurer Hays. President Scott being unable to attend the meeting, appointed Trustee George P. Nichols, of Baltimore, Md., to act as his proxy, and Trustee Nichols was present in place of President Scott.

The first matter taken up by the finance committee was the situation existing in the medical department of the institution because of the recent resignation of Doctor Runyon, who had been the Home physician and was reappointed by the board of trustees at its last meeting. The superintendent was instructed to ask the medical director, Dr. Charles O. Giese, to appear before the committee at 10 o'clock on the morning of Tuesday, May 15.

The secretary then read the report which Superintendent Daley had prepared for submission to the finance committee. The report and recommendations contained therein were as follows:

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., May 14, 1917.

To the Members of the Finance Committee of the Board of Trustees of the Union Printers Home:

GENTLEMEN—I herewith submit for your consideration the following report with recommendations. The report covers the important financial transactions of the Home from June 1, 1916, to May 1, 1917.

The various matters referred to the superintendent, resident trustee and physicians by the board of trustees in September, 1916, have been taken care of in the best possible manner.

1. The superintendent was authorized to purchase an invalid chair for resident James L. Pitts. The chair has been purchased.

2. The suggestion of James L. Pitts that rubber wheels be placed on tables, dressers and beds in all the rooms above the first floor was taken under advisement and I am of the opinion that the noise he complains of does not warrant the expenditure of a large sum of money to carry out his suggestion. There is very little noise caused by the moving of furniture while the rooms are being cleaned.

3. Resident Samuel Boll's request for two pairs rubber stockings was granted.

4. Resident B. F. Smythe asked the board of trustees to subscribe for ten volumes of "The Library of Original Sources" for the Home library. After a conference with Trustee McCaffery and the librarian, Mr. Howard, it was decided not to purchase the books. The librarian said there were very few calls for books of this description.

5. As authorized by the board, a revised edition of the book of rules was printed, and every resident of the Home was furnished with a copy.

6. The board of trustees appropriated the sum of $125 per year for three years to be expended for medical books and magazines. The following books were purchased on recommendation of the medical director, Dr. Charles O. Giese:

5 volumes Osler Modern Medicine	$25 00
1 volume Fishberg Tuberculosis	5 00
1 volume Mallory & Wright	3 00
1 copy Knight & Bryant	1 00
1 copy Beck	75
2 copies Pottenger—Tuberculosis	12 00
Total	$46 75

Other books and magazines will be purchased when requisition is made by the medical director.

7. As authorized by the board of trustees, the expense of Dr. W. D. Runyon, former Home physician, were paid for attending the tuberculosis congress meeting in Louisville, Ky., in October, 1916. His total expenses were $117.65. Doctor Runyon submitted the following report:

"COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., November 1, 1916.

"John C. Daley, Superintendent Union Printers Home, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

"DEAR SIR—Herein I beg leave to report upon the proceedings of the Mississippi Valley Conference on Tuberculosis, which I had the pleasure of attending October 4, 5, 6, at Louisville, Ky. Representatives from every state in the conference district were in attendance. These included sanatorium workers, medical and lay, visiting nurses and officers of the various state and county anti-tuberculosis societies. Over four hundred registered.

"The object of the meeting was to bring about a closer relationship between anti-tuberculosis agencies in the Mississippi valley and to provide for an interchange of ideas and experiences; to strengthen and extend the work of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis; to arouse the people of this valley to the need for concerted action, both public and private, against tuberculosis and to effect closer co-operation between anti-tuberculosis societies and other health agencies.

"In order to effectually cover the many subjects connected with the anti-tuberculosis crusade and to secure the maximum interchange of ideas, the program was arranged so that each day, in addition to the general session, a time was set aside for consultation tables.

"Some of the subjects for discussion were: 'Organization in Small Communities,' 'Fresh Air Schools,' 'Publicity,' 'Sanatorium Construction,' 'Early Diagnosis,' 'Sanatorium Maintenance,' 'Nurses,' etc.

"Each consultation table was presided over by a chairman; every one a well-known worker in his line. The arrangement of subjects and the informal manner in which they were treated, proved to be very instructive, and more profitable than any other feature of the meeting, giving one an opportunity to hear the actual experiences of others.

"In addition to the general session and consultation tables, there were demonstrations, lantern slides and photographs, illustrating the unceasing warfare being waged by state, city and town against the 'great white plague.'

"Especially interesting was the general session devoted to educational campaigns in the treatment of tuberculosis. Perhaps this topic appealed to me more than any other because of the fact that many of the residents of the Union Printers Home and sanatorium have been a factor in disseminating the literature that has enabled others to learn before too late the lesson of hygienic living.

"One paper in particular on 'Newspaper Publicity,' gave this agent alone great credit for the prevention of much infection. Nevertheless, the prevention of tuberculosis is a matter of education. It appeals to me that in THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL and various bulletins issued by the board of trustees and many subordinate unions, the International Typographical Union has in addition to the Home and sanatorium, the most effectual weapons to further utilize in preventing the spread of tuberculosis among its members.

"The last general meeting took up the consideration of 'Essentials in the Treatment of Tuberculosis' in the order of their importance. First came 'rest' and 'exercise;' secondly, 'fresh air;' and lastly, 'supervision of patients in sanatorium.'

"En route to and from the conference I took occasion to visit several institutions. It is almost impossible to enumerate the many ideas gained in a brief report. But, first, I might say that the Union Printers Home and Tubercular Sanatorium is free from many handicaps which prevent so many state and county, as well as municipal, sanatoria from developing a greater degree of efficiency in dealing with the tuberculous. Practically every institution visited is woefully short of funds. They are compelled to rely upon legislative bodies for appropriations. In nearly every case a waiting list of several months prevented them from receiving cases when most favorable for treatment, or entirely discouraged applicants from entering a sanatorium at all. Their buildings on an average were two years behind the needs of the community, and it was especially pleasing to me to know that already additional room is being provided for at the Home.

"Another feature frequently encountered was the lack of room for medical services; in fact, the increased cost of maintenance and disrupting of medical as well as domestic services was oftentimes occasioned by the lack of what is apparently unessential in the way of arrangement of rooms and equipment.

"It was again a pleasure to recount the careful plans and probable equipment you have shown me of the wing now building and the proposed hospital wing. If these plans are carried out there will be no hesitancy in saying that you will have one of the finest sanitoria in existence.

"The consensus of opinion among medical men caring for all classes of cases such as we do here is that the permanent type of building is not only necessary as regarding service, but in economy of administering and maintenance it is always best.

"We are lacking in a few days, but these are essential, and it is a matter of regret to me when I feel compelled to acknowledge their existence. First, and perhaps the most important, is our application of rest and exercise (the latter carefully controlled and regulated) in the treatment of tuberculosis. Rest is the only way out for the active tubercular. Needless to say that rest should be taken in massive doses regarded as a necessity and taken in a manner anticipating a return to health. We are not doing this enough here. However, I am very optimistic.

"Too many 'half through' feel the returning general strength and interpret it as an arrestment or cure and leave the sanatorium to return to work much against our wishes. This will result in one way only, a breaking down and a harder fight than ever to come back. The improvement in lung condition comes only after the general condition improves and then very slowly. I feel that the future will remedy this situation materially, as we are determined to place each resident's condition fully before him and attempt in every legitimate way to encourage staying until results are such that he will be able to return home—not as a burden to his family, but to take his place in the shop and again be an economic as well as social factor in the community.

"These are the only standards by which to gauge the value of sanatoria to any organization, state, community or otherwise, and without sufficient time spent in residence these results are impossible.

"We stand alone in permitting the use of all forms of tobacco. The few sanatoria permitting its use allow only smoking, and that only during a short period after meals. Chewing tobacco is absolutely prohibited. First, because of the body's need for saliva in aiding digestion, and, secondly, because of the increased cough and expectoration which follows the use of tobacco in this form. Recent steps have eliminated to some extent excessive smoking and chewing among the hospital residents.

"The conference emphasized to all the fact that medical science has not given us any new or positive cure for tuberculosis. This is not an indication that progress has not been made in the treatment of tuberculosis, but each one is working along well recognized lines, using rest, exercise, fresh air, and, in selected cases, tuberculin, and pneumothorax to accomplish permanent results.

"The Union Printers Home tuberculosis sanatorium can compare with any seen when considering diet, maintenance and care given residents. It was indeed a great pleasure to attend this meeting, and I earnestly hope that we can, as a result, use much of the information gained in securing better results for the members of the International Typographical Union in residence at the Home, I am, Respectfully,

"W. D. RUNYON, M. D."

8. Architect Hetherington has made drawings of a tablet or panel to be placed in the new addition to the main building, as directed. These drawings are submitted to the committee for a decision.

9. The resident trustee and the superintendent have been successful in their efforts to have the road between the Home and the city of Colorado Springs placed in proper condition.

10. All matters referred to the superintendent by the board with reference to complaints by patients were given consideration and remedied so far as possible. In the case of noise by employes, an effort has been made to reduce it to a minimum. In a large institution where a great number of people are employed it is impossible to keep them from making more or less noise. I do not believe employes make noise intentionally.

11. The following is a list of surgical instruments purchased and repairs made on instruments from June 1, 1916, to May 1, 1917:

One pair Cassebury scissors	$1 56
Kyles nasal tubes	1 65
One Ballinger knife	90
One Hajek gauge No. 3	1 80
One Ballinger Foster spectrum	66
One Holmes scissors	6 00
One Ballinger knife, small	1 80
One Ballinger knife, large	2 25
Four cautery tubes	1 20
One cautery point	1 50
One B8075 scissors	1 25
One B7691 scissors	1 40
One eustachian catheter	40
Refitting and remounting microscope	9 00
Repairs on old style dial Tycos sphyg	3 00
Two Progress irrigators No. 60, two-quart	3 75
One tympanum perforator	1 50
One lid scalpel	1 50
One prostatic catheter	1 00
One Yankauer eustachian catheter	1 50
One Bistoury, Cvd.	1 50
Two Jackson cataract knives	3 00
One Furuncle knife	1 00
One DeZing electric optoscope No. 1030	18 00
One DeZing electric ophthalmoscope No. 165	20 00
One set Yankauer eustachian bougies	4 75
One No. 2257 irrigator, two-quart	1 50
Repairing incubator	17 75
Total	$111 12

12. Following instructions of the board of trustees I have obtained estimates on placing all electric wires in conduit in the old part of the main building as well as in the annex. Following are the estimates:

MAIN BUILDING.

Wiring to outlets, using cords (no switches on walls)	$470 00
Carpenter work	60 00
Total	$530 00
Wiring, using receptacles and switches	$674 00
Carpenter work	120 00
Total	$794 00

ANNEX.

Wiring to outlets, using cords (no switches on walls)	$445 00
Carpenter work	105 00
Total	$550 00
Wiring to outlets, using receptacles and switches	$615 00
Carpenter work	205 00
Total	$820 00

If the finance committee decides to do this work I recommend that wiring be done, using switches and receptacles. The work should be done in the main building as soon as possible in order to take advantage of the reduction in insurance rates. If the annex is to be razed in the near future, I would advise against the expenditure of the sum required to do this work, otherwise the work ought to be done in this building while the changes are being made in the main building.

13. The following table shows the expenditure for special medical services, together with cost of caring for patients at hospitals from June 1, 1916, to May 1, 1917:

14. I took up the matter of curbing the large plot in Evergreen cemetery with C. F. Aldrich, the gentleman who did the work on the other two plots belonging to the Home, and he informed me that he could not do the work, as a city ordinance prohibits the curbing of plots in this section of the cemetery in the future. If a monument or marker of some kind is desired, prices can be obtained after the design is decided on.

15. During the month of April one of the old horses was taken sick and it was necessary to kill it. Its mate is more than twenty years old and is practically down and out. As it is necessary to have a heavy work team, I purchased a four-year-old matched team, together with the harness, for $380.

16. Work on the new addition is progressing as rapidly as possible. We expected to have the building completed and ready for occupancy in June, but the inclement weather during the winter and spring held up work to such an extent that we can not complete the work until some time in July. The exterior of the buildings are being repainted with a light-colored paint, which gives the institution a more cheerful appearance. All necessary interior work is also being done.

17. Orders have been placed for furnishings for the new addition and it is expected that delivery of enough of it will be made so that there will be no delay in opening this part of the institution after it is completed.

18. Trustee McCaffery and the superintendent are making arrangements for the entertainment of the delegates and visitors to the convention in August, as directed by the board of trustees. There are some matters with reference to the program for Home day that we want to discuss with the finance committee.

19. Trustee McCaffery, Attorney Samuel H. Kinsley and the superintendent took up with the city authorities, as directed by the board, the procuring of the strip of land directly in front of the Home property. The city council has voted to vacate the land in question and turn the same over to the Home. Attorney Kinsley has the matter in hand and we will undoubtedly have title to the property in a short time. When title is received the land can then be graded and parked if the finance committee so decides.

20. Trustee McCaffery and I were instructed to get a new valuation on the Home properties for insurance purposes. I have taken an inventory of all properties belonging to the Home, showing the value to be $454,174.66. I am submitting the same for your consideration.

21. Charles T. Fertig, who carries the greater part of the insurance on the Home buildings, has been furnished with a copy of the inventory and will have a revised form for insurance to present to the finance committee on a day to be set by the committee.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

1. The plaster in the superintendent's office is in very poor condition. I recommend that the office be replastered and painted so as to conform with the main office. It is estimated that this work will cost $250.

2. The Home is sadly in need of a root or vegetable cellar. Under present conditions it is impossible to take care of more than enough vegetables to feed the residents and employes for about three weeks. If we had a large cellar we would be in position to buy vegetables in large quantities in the fall, thereby saving a considerable sum of money. It is estimated that a cellar forty by twenty-eight feet would cost about $4,000. I recommend that the finance committee consider the advisability of building a cellar immediately.

3. On previous occasions I brought to the attention of the finance committee and the board of trustees the necessity of building new greenhouses. The present houses are in very poor condition, and I believe it is a waste of money to try to patch them up. The houses are so small that the gardener has difficulty in trying to raise enough stock for flower beds for use in summer time. It is estimated that new houses would cost about $4,000. I recommend the erection of new houses.

4. The present summer house on the croquet grounds is in a dilapidated condition and should be replaced by a more sightly building. I recommend that a lattice summer house be built, the cost of which is estimated at $90.

5. Each year we spend considerable money for varnishing the floors of the main building and superintendent's dining rooms. The varnish does not wear more than two months, and I am of the opinion that it would be cheaper to have the floors covered with inlaid linoleum, which is easier to clean, looks better, and will wear for a number of years. I recommend that the dining rooms be covered with linoleum.

6. Suggestions have been made that an addition be built to the laundry building and machinery installed so that all laundry work can be done at the Home. At present the shirts and collars are laundered downtown. It would cost approximately $3,500 to build an extension to the laundry building, and this, together with the cost of machinery and extra help to do the work, would mean a considerable sum of money. Under the present high cost of material and the shortage of labor, I am of the opinion that there would be no saving in the cost of doing up shirts and collars at the Home. However, I suggest that the matter be given consideration by the committee.

7. On January 5, Dr. W. D. Runyon, who had been Home physician for nearly a year, resigned, and since that time Dr. W. H. Cryer has been acting Home physician. Dr. Cryer has been working from month to month with the understanding that if his services proved satisfactory he would be willing to sign a contract for a specified time with the finance committee when it meets in Colorado Springs, provided the salary could be agreed upon. I also have applications from several other physicians who are anxious for the position. I recommend that the committee decide on the appointment of a Home physician at this session.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN C. DALEY, Superintendent.

At 12 o'clock noon the committee adjourned to meet at 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The committee met at 2 P. M., as per adjournment, with Vice-President McCaffery in the chair.

There being no further business ready for the committee at this time, adjournment was taken to Tuesday morning, May 15, 1917, at 10 o'clock.

TUESDAY, MAY 15, 1917.

The committee met at 10 A. M., as per adjournment, with Vice-President McCaffery presiding.

On the advice of Superintendent Daley some of the residents of the institution were asked to appear before the committee in order to take up some grievances that it was believed might be held by the residents, which they did not care to bother the board with. The entire morning session was taken up with discussions of this character and perhaps some matters straightened out that will give the residents a better understanding of what to do in case they are not entirely satisfied with the methods followed out in the various departments.

At 12 noon the committee adjourned to 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The committee met at 2 P. M., as per adjournment, all members present and Vice-President McCaffery presiding.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays read a communication from the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Colorado Springs, Colo., inviting the members of the committee to a luncheon on the following day.

On motion the invitation from the chamber of commerce to attend luncheon Wednesday noon was accepted, and Secretary-Treasurer Hays was selected to make a statement before the members of the chamber on the International Typographical Union and the Union Printers Home.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays now read the following communication from the Hub Clothing Company:

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., April 28, 1917.

John C. Daley, Superintendent Union Printers Home, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

DEAR SIR—We regret exceedingly the necessity of informing you that it will be absolutely impossible for us to furnish suits and hats to the Home at the old prices. The raise in prices in this class of merchandise has made it prohibitive for us to be able to furnish you this merchandise at the old prices.

It will be necessary for us to have $1 more per suit, and 25 cents additional on every hat. We feel justified in asking this modest advance in these two commodities, and sincerely hope that you will be able to see your way clear to grant it.

Thanking you for past favors, and assuring you of our intention to please you at all times, we are,

Sincerely yours,
THE HUB CLOTHING COMPANY,
By D. J. FINKELSTEIN, President.

On motion, the communication from the Hub Clothing Company was referred to the superintendent of the Home and the resident trustee with full power to take action thereon.

The committee then took up the question of entertainment on what is to be known as "Home Day" during the coming convention of the International Typographical Union to be held at Colorado Springs.

A tentative program was submitted by Superintendent Daley and Trustee McCaffery and after some discussion and slight changes thereto, it was agreed to. Under the final arrangement "Home Day" will occur on Wednesday of convention week and the exercises will take place during the afternoon. The program as now laid out provides that at 1 P. M. on the date mentioned, there will be a band concert on the Home grounds; at 2:30 P. M., speaking will be started to continue for one hour and a half. Among the speakers it is contemplated that we will have the governor of the state of Colorado, the mayor of the city of Colorado Springs, and President Marsden G. Scott. One or two other speakers are in contemplation, but it is expected that the address of the afternoon will be delivered by ex-President James M. Lynch, of Syracuse, N. Y. At 5 P. M. a barbecue will be served upon the Home grounds. During the interval between the speaking and the barbecue, and during the barbecue, a band concert will be in progress. After the completion of the service of the barbecue, those in attendance at the celebration will be allowed to do as they like and follow their own inclinations.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays read a letter from Representative Strief, of the International Typographical Union, regarding the bringing of the union printers' band, of Des Moines, Iowa, to the convention. The committee had no authority to take action on this matter and the letter was referred to the local convention committee of No. 82.

On motion it was decided that the matter of decorating the Home grounds for "Home Day" during convention week should be referred to Superintendent Daley and Resident Trustee McCaffery, with full power to act.

The question of a souvenir to be given out on "Home Day" was referred to President Scott and Secretary-Treasurer Hays with full power to act.

On motion, Superintendent Daley and Resident Trustee McCaffery were authorized to expend during the coming season in Colorado Springs the usual amount for newspaper advertising, and in the usual manner.

At 5 P. M. the committee adjourned to meet at 10 A. M. Wednesday, May 16, 1917.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 16, 1917.

The committee met at 10 A. M., as per adjournment, all members present and Vice-President McCaffery presiding.

On appointment, the medical director of the Home, Doctor Giese, appeared before the committee. Doctor Giese made the following statements regarding the medical department of the Home:

The former resident physician having vacated in January, 1917, we instituted a number of inquiries as to where we could get some one who was competent to fill the place as resident physician, and as a result of these inquiries we have several applications on file here at the office. However, we knew of Doctor Cryer, who had formerly been a patient at the Woodmen sanatorium and who had also done some work out there, so at my suggestion he came here—not as an expert in the treatment of tuberculosis, but to do what work he could. I am spending two hours each day at the Home, and my associate, Doctor Goodson, has been here about one hour each evening and in that way we have managed to get along quite well.

The compensation which Doctor Cryer has received has not been such as we could ask a man to work for any longer, and the question comes up as to what the finance committee wishes to do, whether they wish the continuance of his services, or whether they wish to consider the applications which we have on hand.

Doctor Cryer is a well-qualified man. He has not a great deal of experience in the treatment of tuberculosis, but is acquiring that knowledge quite rapidly and his knowledge along medical lines is very good. He uses good judgment, and so far as I know, attends strictly to his own affairs. He understands laboratory work to a certain extent.

As regards salary, Doctor Cryer ought to have his board, not necessarily that of his wife, but his own board and, I think, about $100 a month.

Mr. Daley stated "that he and Trustee McCaffery had agreed upon paying the house physician a salary of $125 and his board only, or $100 a month and his board and also that of his wife, he to pay his own house rent, etc."

Mr. Hays: "I move that the finance committee recommend to the board of trustees that Doctor Cryer be employed as resident physician on the advice of the superintendent, Doctor Giese and Resident Trustee McCaffery." Motion carried.

Doctor Giese: "A motion was carried by the board of trustees that one of the doctors should attend a tuberculosis conference in Kentucky and that the other doctor should go to the national tuberculosis meeting which met in Cincinnati on the eighth, ninth and tenth of May. I had fully intended to go to this meeting and had all arrangements made, but owing to conditions coming up in my family I could not get away. Now, I would ask the committee at this time to change the motion of the board of trustees which approved my attending the national conference in Cincinnati, and allow me to attend the American Medical Association, which has a large amount of time given over to tuberculosis. While this is not a meeting entirely for tuberculosis, I feel that we would derive great benefit from it. This meeting is to be held in New York city on June 4, 5 and 6, 1917."

Mr. Hays: "Mr. Chairman, I move that it be the sense of this committee that under the action of the board of trustees at its last meeting, the medical director of the Home is fully within his rights when he selects a convention or conventions to be attended by the medical director or the Home physician." Motion adopted.

After the above statement by Doctor Giese a general discussion took place regarding the salaries which were to be paid, and what was to be done with reference to continuing the employment of Doctor Goodson and Doctor Robinson, after which Doctor Giese was excused, and the report with recommendations made by the superintendent was given consideration.

Upon reading the report of the superintendent and the recommendations connected therewith, the following action was taken:

1. The plaster in the superintendent's office is in very poor condition. I recommend that the office be replastered and painted so as to conform with the main office. It is estimated that this work will cost $250.

On motion the recommendation was concurred in.

2. The Home is sadly in need of a root or vegetable cellar. Under present conditions it is impossible to take care of more than enough vegetables to feed the residents and employes for about three weeks. If we had a large cellar we would be in a position to buy vegetables in large quantities in the fall; thereby saving a considerable sum of money. It is estimated that a cellar forty by twenty-eight feet would cost about $4,000. I recommend that the finance committee consider the advisability of building a cellar immediately.

Secretary Hays moved that the superintendent and resident trustee, together with the master mechanic, be instructed to build a root and vegetable cellar as soon as they can properly do so. Motion carried.

3. On previous occasions I brought to the attention of the finance committee and the board of trustees the necessity of building new greenhouses. The present houses are in very poor condition, and I believe it is a waste of money to try to patch them up. The houses are so small that the gardener has difficulty in trying to raise enough stock for flower beds for use in summer time. It is estimated that new houses would cost about $4,000. I recommend the erection of new houses.

Moved that this recommendation be held over until the meeting of the board of trustees. Motion carried.

4. The present summer house on the croquet grounds is in a dilapidated condition and should be replaced by a more sightly building. I recommend that a lattice summer house be built, the cost of which is estimated at $90.

Moved that this recommendation be concurred in. Motion carried.

5. Each year we spend considerable money for varnishing the floors of the main building and superintendent's dining rooms. The varnish does not wear more than two months and I am of the opinion that it would be cheaper to have the floors covered with inlaid linoleum, which is easier to clean, looks better and will wear for a number of years. I recommend that the dining rooms be covered with linoleum.

Moved that the recommendation be concurred in. Motion carried.

6. Suggestions have been made that an addition be built to the laundry building and machinery be installed so that all laundry work can be done at the Home. At present the shirts and collars are laundered downtown. It would cost approximately $3,500 to build an extension to the laundry building, and this, together with the cost of machinery and extra help to do the work, would mean a considerable sum of money. Under the present high cost of material and the shortage of labor, I am of the opinion that there would be no saving in the cost of doing up shirts and collars at the Home. However, I suggest that the matter be given consideration by the committee.

On recommendation No. 6 of superintendent's report, the finance committee, after having given this paragraph due consideration, decided that the building of an extension to the laundry would not be a profitable investment at this time especially.

7. On January 5, Dr. W. D. Runyon, who had been Home physician for nearly a year, resigned, and since that time Dr. W. H. Cryer has been acting as Home physician. Doctor Cryer has been working from month to month with the understanding that if his services proved satisfactory he would be willing to sign a contract for a specified time with the finance committee when it meets in Colorado Springs, provided the salary could be agreed upon. I also have applications from several other physicians who are anxious for the position. I recommend that the committee decide on the appointment of a Home physician at this session.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN C. DALEY, Superintendent.

Recommendation No. 7 covered by action on the employment of Doctor Cryer.

The report of the superintendent contains the following paragraph:

Trustee McCaffery and myself were instructed to get a new valuation on the Home properties for insurance purposes. I have taken an inventory of all properties belonging to the Home, showing the value of $454,174.66. I am submitting the same for your consideration.

The itemized list of all the properties belonging to the Home corporation, both real and personal, is contained in the report of the superintendent to the finance committee. The following recapitulation gives the total values of the various items mentioned:

The question of readjusting the insurance upon the buildings and contents of the Union Printers Home was then taken up and the following communication which Superintendent Daley had received from Charles T. Fertig, of the Insurance and Investment Company, of Colorado Springs, bearing his name, together with a statement which Mr. Fertig made as to the previous valuation on the buildings, and the insurance now being carried:

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., May 9, 1917.

John C. Daley, Superintendent Union Printers Home, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

DEAR MR. DALEY—I am enclosing you herewith a statement showing the values of your respective buildings, also the contents thereof and the amount of insurance which is now carried on each item; these figures being, of course, taken from the inventory which you recently furnished me.

It is needless to say that the proportion of insurance to value is in my opinion very small indeed and does not in any material sense offer the protection that it should. I am merely referring to the matter at this time so that you may have it in mind at the time of your board meeting, which I understand will be on the fourteenth.

Trusting that this information may be of value to you, I beg to remain, with best wishes,

Yours truly,

CHARLES T. FERTIG.

THE UNION PRINTERS HOME.

By arrangement previously made, Mr. Fertig appeared before the committee to take up with the members personally the question of the insurance and the amount that should be carried.

During the discussion with Mr. Fertig the list of the Home property that had been compiled by Superintendent Daley, as submitted to the committee, was carefully gone over together with the previous figures that were submitted by Mr. Fertig. After a thorough discussion of the question of insurance in all its phases, the committee decided that the Home property was not covered by a sufficient amount of insurance, and on motion, Superintendent Daley and Resident Trustee McCaffery were instructed to take out insurance policies on the buildings and furnishings on a basis of not less than 66⅔ per cent on the valuation of the Home property. This motion was adopted.

On motion, Superintendent Daley and Resident Trustee McCaffery were also instructed to take up with Mr. Fertig and investigate the advisability of taking out insurance policies and having them so written as to provide for the payment of premiums on an annual basis on term policies.

At this time Mr. Fertig was excused and Doctor Cryer, who was acting as Home physician, was asked to appear before the committee, and in reply to questions made a statement regarding to his employment as Home physician.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 12, SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

Following instructions of the board of trustees, I have obtained estimates on placing all electric wires in conduits in the old part of the main building as well as in the annex. Following are the estimates:

MAIN BUILDING.

Wiring to outlets, using cords (no switches on walls)	$470 00
Carpenter work	60 00
Total	$530 00
Wiring, using receptacles and switches	$674 00
Carpenter work	120 00
Total	$794 00

ANNEX.

Wiring to outlets, using cords (no switches on walls)	$445 00
Carpenter work	105 00
Total	$550 00
Wiring to outlets, using receptacles and switches	$615 00
Carpenter work	205 00
Total	$820 00

If the finance committee decides to do this work, I recommend that wiring be done using switches and receptacles. The work should be done in the main building as soon as possible in order to take advantage of the reduction in insurance rates. If the annex is to be razed in the near future I would advise against the expenditure of the sum required to do this work, otherwise the work ought to be done in this building, while the changes are being made in the main building.

Mr. Hays: "I move you, Mr. Chairman, that the superintendent and Trustee McCaffery be instructed to place all the electric wires in the main building not now in conduits, in such receptacles, the work to be done in accordance with the recommendation of the superintendent, that wiring be done using switches and receptacles, at an estimated cost of $794." Motion carried.

Mr. Hays: "I further move that the question of the wiring of the annex be held over until the meeting of the full board." Motion carried.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 14, SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

"I took up the matter of curbing the large plot in Evergreen cemetery with C. F. Aldrich, the gentleman who did the work on the other two plots belonging to the Home, and he informed me that he could not do the work, as a city ordinance prohibits the curbing of plots in this section of the cemetery in the future. If a monument or marker of some kind is desired, process can be obtained after the design is decided on."

Mr. Hays: "Mr. Daley reported that he had taken up the matter of curbing the large plot in

Digitized by Google

Evergreen cemetery with the parties who did the work on the other two sites belonging to the Home, and ascertained that similar curbing could not be done in other parts of the cemetery, and suggested the erection of a monument or marker of some kind."

Action upon this portion of the superintendent's report was deferred to the full board meeting. Motion carried.

The committee adjourned to attend the luncheon to be given by the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce, at which the members of the committee and Superintendent Daley were requested to be guests.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The committee met at 2:30 P. M., as per adjournment, with all members present, Vice-President McCaffery in the chair.

At 3 P. M., in accordance with an appointment, Attorney Kinsley, who does the legal business for the Union Printers Home, appeared before the committee.

Attorney Kinsley made the following statement regarding a piece of land immediately connected with the Home grounds on the west side and lying between the Home grounds and what will eventually be the permanent roadway:

During the past month or six weeks several matters of interest with reference to the Home have been referred to me. First, the tract of land immediately west of the Home property, which is now apparently included in what is known as Main street, being the extreme eastern limit of the city of Colorado Springs.

A number of years ago the tract of land just west of the property of the Union Printers Home was platted by the Colorado Springs Company as the "East End Addition." As I have said, it laid to the extreme eastern limits of the city. Just east of the most easerly lots there was a vacant piece of ground, which was designated as Main street. As the lot lies approximate, but does not exactly conform to the points of the compass, there was left a wedge-shaped piece of land in front of the Home about 170 feet wide nearest to the gate and about 130 feet at the northwest corner of the Home property. At the present time, and for some months past, it has presented an unsightly appearance owing to the cutting out of the earth for the track by the street car company, and leaving a bank differing in shape and hight.

After the original plat of the addition had been filed, the Colorado Springs Company attempted to vacate the block immediately east of the Home property, and also the site designated on the plat, and now claim that the site is the property of the Colorado Springs Company. This claim is disputed by the city of Colorado Springs, and I think, with good reason, for the land, having once been dedicated as a public highway and been used as such, can not be withdrawn by the original owner, so at the present time the site may be considered a public highway.

About a month ago Mr. McCaffery, Mr. Daley and myself waited upon Mr. Anderson, commissioner of public works, and in whose department the matter of sites is included, and stated to him that it was the desire of the Home to have that property improved by the city if the city would undertake it, but if the city would not do so, then requesting that the city would vacate that portion of the site immediately in front of the Home property so as to leave the street a continuous width of 100 feet, and allow the Home, by reason of its proximity, to acquire the wedge-shaped tract of land immediately in front of the Home property, so that it might be improved by the trustees, prior to the holding of the annual convention.

Mr. Anderson expressed a willingness to attend to this, and upon his suggestion I addressed him a communication setting forth the situation and the desire of the Home, upon which it was brought up before the meeting of the city council, consisting of Commissioner Anderson, City Engineer Mallon and City Attorney Bennett. I have not been informed as to the conclusion they have arrived at, but have been assured by each member of the committee that it was the purpose of the city to accede to the desire of the Union Printers Home.

Mr. Hays: "Mr. Chairman, I move you that the superintendent and resident trustee be instructed, if title is secured to the strip of land directly in front of the Home property, to do what may be necessary to grade and park the land, previous to the meeting of the convention of the International Typographical Union in August, 1917." Motion carried.

Some two years ago a resident of the Union Printers Home who died had filled out one of our regular blank forms as to the disposition of his property in the possible event of his death. In this blank is a provision for the disposition of any money which the resident may have at the time of his demise. In this case the resident stated that he desired such moneys as he may have at the time of his death to go to the Union Printers Home. Upon his death it was found that something over $300 was to his credit in a savings bank in the city of Colorado Springs. When the Home attempted to get this money it found out that the document which had been signed was not sufficient to warrant the transfer of the money under the laws of the state of Colorado. The matter was given to Attorney Kinsley, who looked it up and made a statement thereon.

Mr. Kinsley was instructed by the committee to draft a form which would be sufficient to cover cases of this kind, the same to be submitted to the committee before final adjournment.

At 4:30 P. M. the executive committee of the convention general arrangements committee of Colorado Springs Typographical Union No. 82, appeared before the finance committee for the purpose of discussing the coming convention. The executive committee which appeared before the finance committee was composed of members W. J. Reilly, Stephen O'Donnell, J. E. Cheely and E. D. Woodworth.

About an hour and a half was spent in general discussion in regard to convention arrangements, and as a result, the program which the local committee desires to carry out during the convention has been so arranged that it will interfere with the workings of the convention to the least possible extent, and will in no way interfere with the program arranged on the Home grounds for "Home Day."

At 6 P. M. the committee adjourned to meet at 10 A. M., May 17, 1917.

MAY 17, 1917.

The committee met at 10 A. M., as per adjournment, with all members present and Vice-President McCaffery presiding.

At the last meeting of the board of trustees, the superintendent and resident trustee were authorized to have a bronze tablet or tablets placed upon the new addition of the south wing, setting forth the date of construction and containing the names of the officers of the board of trustees, together with the names of the superintendent and the agent. Drawings for the tablets mentioned were submitted to the committee by Superintendent Daley and the committee instructed him as to the style of tablet that should be used, and selected the location for same on the new addition where it should be placed.

On motion, Superintendent Daley and Resident

Trustee McCaffery were instructed to ascertain between this time and the meeting of the full board what it would cost to secure the balance of a strip of land lying west of the Home grounds and between the Home grounds and what will be the permanent roadway, and lying west of the Home gate.

Superintendent Daley and Resident Trustee McCaffery were instructed to have the master mechanic of the institution put concrete foundations under the tents at present in use in connection with the hospital department.

Superintendent Daley called to the attention of the committee the fact that frequently special medical attention is required by residents of the Home because they believed the Home treatment did not suit their particular cases. The finance committee decided that previous action of the board gave the superintendent and the medical director authority to act in cases of this character.

At 12 noon the finance committee adjourned to 10 A. M., Friday, May 18, 1917.

MAY 18, 1917.

The finance committee of the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home met at 10 A. M., as per adjournment, with all members present and Vice-President McCaffery in the chair.

Some discussion took place as to the improvements being made on the Home property and the committee took a recess for the purpose of inspecting the new buildings and additions, kitchen facilities, etc. The committee reconvened at 11:30 A. M. and on motion Trustee Nichols was appointed to draft a report to the committee on the inspection of improvements on the buildings. The report follows:

The finance committee inspected the condition of the construction work on the new annex and submits herewith the results of its investigation:

Notwithstanding the unusually rigorous weather that prevailed throughout the Pikes Peak region during the past winter and the consequent interruption to construction work, satisfactory progress has been made and we are assured by Superintendent Daley and Master Mechanic Portner that the building will be completed and ready for occupancy by July 1, 1917.

Work on the new dining room (for use by hospital patients) has so far advanced so as to have been in condition for use since the early part of last March. The new dining room has capacity to feed 168 persons at one time. A part of the dining room has been partitioned off and is being used at present as a short-order kitchen.

The finishing touches are being made to the dormitories, which, when completed, will add thirty-five rooms to the capacity of the Home.

All the furniture for the annex has been ordered and much of it has been delivered at the Home.

On account of wages, the books of Superintendent Daley show that up to May 12, 1917, $9,980.44 had been paid for labor in the construction of the annex.

All the materials used in the construction of the annex were purchased in Colorado and all money spent for labor has been distributed in Colorado Springs and vicinity.

Although there has been an enormous increase in the cost of building materials and also important increase in wages since the construction work on the annex began, the committee is pleased to report that the total cost of the construction and furnishing of the annex will be within the estimate agreed upon by the board of trustees at its annual meeting in 1916. This fact was due to the close supervision and judicious purchasing by Superintendent Daley.

Attorney Kinsley was communicated with by telephone and he reported that he would have a report ready to submit at 2 P. M.

The committee then adjourned to 2 P. M. for the purpose of hearing further reports.

At 2 P. M. the finance committee of the board of trustees met as per adjournment, with Vice-President McCaffery in the chair.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays then read a report from the attorney for the Home, Samuel H. Kinsley, regarding the Joseph T. Pierson bequest.

It was moved that the president and secretary of the board of trustees be authorized and instructed to have the bond prepared in accordance with the form drawn by Attorney Kinsley, and deposit the same with the Colorado Savings Bank, Colorado Springs, Colo.

It was then regularly moved and seconded that the president and secretary of the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home be authorized and instructed to furnish a bond to the Colorado Savings Bank in the sum of $800, to cover any liability in regard to the Joseph T. Pierson money now on deposit there. Carried unanimously.

Attorney Kinsley submitted a blank as an amendment to the present blank provided for a statement of members who are becoming residents of the Union Printers Home.

On motion the document drawn as a will by Attorney Kinsley was referred to the regular meeting of the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays moved that the finance committee of the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home appropriate the sum of $50 to recompense Vice-President McCaffery for his attendance on the finance committee at this session.

Secretary Hays put the motion and it was unanimously adopted.

It was moved and seconded that the finance committee adjourn to 10 A. M., Saturday, May 19, 1917. Motion carried.

SATURDAY, MAY 19, 1917.

The committee met at 10 A. M., as per adjournment, all members present and Vice-President McCaffery in the chair.

The only matter which the finance committee had to consider was that relating to a strip of land on the west side of the Home grounds which it was expected would be released to the Home in order that it might be properly improved before the meeting of the International Typographical Union convention in August next.

A full report thereon not being obtainable, the matter was turned over to Superintendent Daley and Resident Trustee McCaffery, with full power to take action thereon when report was received.

The finance committee then adjourned sine die.

Respectfully submitted,

J. W. HAYS, Secretary-Treasurer.

Main building addition	14,023 15
Open air pavilion	9,902 80
Additional land purchase	3,500 00
Maintenance, salaries, repairs, improvements, etc., from opening of Home to May 31, 1917	1,521,907 71
Total	$1,714,271 42
Balance in fund May 31, 1917	30,479 37
Total	$1,744,750 79

During the fiscal year there was an average of 212 members per month at the Home. To get the net cost of maintenance, building expenses and money refunded should be deducted from the total expenditures as follows:

Total expenditures for year		$156,726 69
Building repairs and improvements	$32,239 61
Refund transportation	1,005 36
Sale of cow, calves, etc.	334 93	33,579 90
Net cost of maintenance		$123,146 76

On the basis of 212 members, the average cost of maintenance was $580.88 per member per year —$48.40 per member per month.

As has been explained in my previous report, the figures in the annual statements of the superintendent of the Home and the secretary-treasurer are not the same, due to the manner in which the business of the Home is transacted.

At the end of each month the superintendent makes up his report to the trustees and incorporates therein expenditures incurred at the Home. The report of the superintendent and the bills are carefully scrutinized by Resident Trustee McCaffery, and when approved by him forwarded to the other members of the finance committee. In due season the monthly report of the superintendent and the approved bills reach the secretary-treasurer and checks for the bills are then issued. Under this plan the secretary-treasurer does not receive the bills for any month until about the eighteenth or twentieth of the next month. For this reason the secretary-treasurer paid in the fiscal year ending May 31, 1917, bills incurred at the Home for the month of May, 1916, to April, 1917. The report of the superintendent for the fiscal year ended May 31, 1917, included the bills for the month of June, 1916, to May, 1917. Both reports include twelve months' business, but not the same twelve months, and to this is due the difference in the items appearing in the reports, although both statements are correct. Again, the report of the secretary-treasurer contains some items of expenses not handled by the superintendent—expenses of trustees' meetings, printing for the trustees, clerical work on Home business at headquarters and other items. Respectfully submitted,

J. W. HAYS, Secretary-Treasurer.

Upon the advice of the Home physician, to whom all petitions are submitted for an opinion as to the physical condition of the applicant, your committee disapproved thirty-five applications that came before it in the fiscal year. The members whose petitions were acted upon unfavorably were afflicted as follows:

Locomotor ataxia, 6; paralysis, 4; epilepsy, 1; last stage of tuberculosis, 2; insane, 4; helpless, and unable to travel, 10; one was rejected because he sought reinstatement for the purpose of entering the Home; one because he applied for readmission within six months after leaving the Home; one on account of his previous record and five because of insufficient membership.

The Home has been crowded throughout the year and members have constantly been awaiting admission thereto. It is hoped this condition will be relieved when the addition now in process of erection is completed and opened. Admissions are now authorized as vacancies occur and in the order in which petitions are received and approved. During the year, as in the past, a number of members have gone to the Home, been admitted and remained a very short time and vacated before the physicians believed them able to work. These members seek readmission. A member going to the Home with a view to regaining his health should remain until the physician believes he can leave without injury.

Respectfully submitted,

George P. Nichols,
Marsden G. Scott,
J. W. Hays.

MONTHLY AVERAGE OF RESIDENTS.

June	209	January	214
July	221	February	210
August	217	March	208
September	215	April	207
October	212	May	205
November	211
December	214	Total	2,543

Average number for the year—212.
Average cost per week per resident—$8.16.

The monthly average number of residents in the Home for the year was ten more than last year, when the average was 202. While the average number for the year was 212, we have had as high as 225 residents in a given month. On May 31, 1917, there were 211 residents at the Home, with approved applications enough on file in the office to fill the remaining vacant beds.

The average number of residents in the sanatorium was 106, the highest number in any one month being 109 and the lowest number being 98.

The average number of residents in the main building was 106, the highest number in any one month being 116, and the lowest number being 99.

FURNISHING ACCOUNT.

Following is the furnishing account by months for the past year:

June	$935 56	January	$379 81
July	326 10	February	470 49
August	440 42	March	2,236 85
September	777 73	April	1,295 02
October	432 80	May	919 38
November	523 12
December	639 06	Total	$9,376 34

CEMETERY ACCOUNT.

The Union Printers Home plots in Evergreen cemetery were kept in first-class condition during the year. The graves of all deceased residents are provided with headstones, which give dates of birth and death, together with the number of the union to which the deceased was affiliated. The graves are in line so that any one desiring to find the resting-place of a relative or friend can do so without difficulty. As has been the custom in the past, flowers were placed at the entrance to the three plots on Memorial day. The cost of caring for the plots was $285.

Average for twenty-five years, $28.82.

The above table shows that the Home has been in existence for twenty-five years and the average cost of maintenance for that period was $28.82 per month. The average cost per month of maintaining a resident during the last year was $32.63. The average cost of maintaining a sanatorium resident was $40.73, while the average cost of maintaining a main building resident was $25.73. The average cost of maintaining a resident of the sanatorium was $15 a month more than the cost of maintaining a resident of the main building.

"The high cost of living" has not as yet affected the residents of the Home. While it is true that everything that is necessary to maintain the Home and its residents has advanced materially in price the people domiciled in the Home receive the same quantity and quality of necessities that was furnished previous to the present unsettled conditions throughout the country. Groceries, meats, flour, etc., are purchased in large quantities at wholesale prices. Below is a table giving a list of articles that are used daily in which the prices for May, 1917, are compared with those of May, 1916:

	May, 1916.	May, 1917.
Beans, navy, lb.	$0 07½	$0 16
Butter, lb.	30	40
Corn, case	2 20	3 20

Cracked corn, cwt.	1 35	3 00
Alfalfa, ton	16 00	23 00
Blue stem hay, ton	17 50	21 00

The increase in prices shown in the above table is the more significant when one considers the quantity consumed in a month, viz.:

Seven hundred and seventy-five pounds of butter, 215 pounds of crackers, 450 pounds of coffee, 1,560 dozens of eggs, 2,800 pounds of flour, 7,600 pounds of meat, 7,000 pounds of potatoes and 500 pounds of fish; ten dozen each of two-pound cans of corn, peas, string beans, tomatoes; eight dozen each of canned pears, peaches, plums, pineapple, etc. Fresh vegetables are provided in season. In the dairy department we consume in a month an average of 4,000 pounds of bran, 1,700 pounds of wheat and cracked corn, 1,500 pounds of hay and twenty tons of alfalfa.

In previous reports I stated that the main building residents (the aged and superannuated residents) with the exception of those on special diets, eat the regular meal, while patients in the sanatorium who are able to go to the dining room have the privilege of ordering steaks, eggs and chops in lieu thereof. Patients who are unable to go to the dining room are given special privileges in ordering their meals. In the forenoon of each day a lunch, consisting of crackers and milk, is supplied for any of the sanatorium patients who care to partake of it. In the afternoon fresh fruit is provided. The menu is changed every day so that the same kind of meat or vegetable is not on the regular bill of fare twice in any one week.

AMUSEMENTS.

As has been our custom in the past, Sunday evening moving picture shows were given to the residents of the Home and their friends, from the first Sunday in October to the last Sunday in March. The shows consisted of three reels of pictures, together with a four-piece orchestra. On many occasions vocal solos were sung by friends of the Home from the city who volunteered their services.

Digitized by Google

On June 8, 1916, the residents enjoyed a day's outing in Cheyenne Canyon.

On June 11, 1916, Prof. Fred Fink's orchestra of twelve pieces entertained the residents, employes and their friends with a musical program.

On August 3, 1916, the second picnic of the season for the residents of the Home was held at Stratton park. At both of these picnics luncheon was served by the management of the Home. During the day those in attendance enjoyed themselves in various ways, viz.: burro racing, cracker eating and watermelon eating contests, potato races, etc.

On August 10 the crippled residents of the Home were given an automobile ride around the city and through the canyons.

During the winter three progressive euchre parties were given in the library. The first party was given on Thanksgiving night, the second during Christmas week, and the third on St. Valentine's night. Prizes were given to the winners and refreshments were served during intermission. After the card games were over dancing was indulged in by those whose physical condition was such that no harm could come to them through the exertion caused by dancing.

On March 15 a concert was given at the Home which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. When concerts or shows are put on the Home stage I make an effort to secure the best talent possible so as to make the performances worth while.

On May 30 a large delegation of Home residents enjoyed the day on the famous Cripple Creek trip. Luncheon was furnished by the Home management. This trip is considered one of the best one-day trips in the Pikes Peak region.

As usual the indoor amusements during the winter months consist mainly of playing cards, checkers, dominoes, billiards, etc. In the summer-time croquet is the popular diversion. It is a hard matter to arrange for amusements in the summer-time (other than picnics) for tuberculous patients because there are few games that can be played that do not require more exertion and exercise than a patient ought to take.

Following is an itemized statement of money expended for amusements:

Film service	$156 00

REPORT OF HOME LIBRARIAN.

UNION PRINTERS HOME, June 1, 1917.

John C. Daley, Superintendent:

DEAR SIR—In response to your request for a statement of the conduct of the affairs of the Home library for the past year and its present status, I beg leave to submit the following report:

The number of books belonging to the library is 10,006; of this number 1,565 are stored. The stored books consist of duplicate copies on the library shelves, public documents, and other matter of no present day interest.

On account of the scarcity and high cost of paper, our complimentary list of daily papers has been reduced from 148 papers to 114.

The following is a complete list of the reading matter in the library that residents and employes have access to:

Books	8,443
Monthly magazines	34
English dailies	114
Country weeklies	38
Labor weeklies	51

Digitized by Google

Labor monthlies	16
French daily (Canadian)	1
Literary weeklies	8
Religious weeklies	8
Religious daily	1
German dailies	6
German weeklies	10
German monthlies	2
German religious weekly	1
Typographical Journals	175

William A. Musser, of Cincinnati No. 3, has succeeded F. W. Lehman, deceased, of New York No. 6, as assistant librarian.

E. S. Penwell, of Omaha No. 190, has also been appointed an assistant librarian.

The library rules are generally well observed. Only in a few instances have they been transgressed.

The contents of the library are generally well treated by the residents and employes.

Fiction is still the prevailing reading matter sought by the residents.

Good order has prevailed both in the library and assembly room.

The doors of the library are always open before 7 o'clock in the morning, and closed at 9 o'clock in the evening.

The booking hours are: 9 to 11 A. M., 1 to 2 P. M., 3 to 5 P. M., 7 to 8 P. M. Sundays and holidays, 9 to 11 A. M., 6 to 7 P. M.

During the summer months very few books are exchanged in the evening, therefore it has been deemed advisable to suspend evening bookings during those months. Respectfully submitted,

OSCAR HOWARD (Wheeling No. 79),
Librarian.

PENSION ACCOUNT.

The following table shows the amount of money expended by months for pensions to residents of the Home from June 1, 1916, to May 31, 1917. All residents of the Home, with the exception of those from a few of the larger unions, receive 50 cents per week from the Home fund. Unions paying pensions to their members who are at the Home allow them $1 each per week. In addition to their pension a number of residents are employed in various ways around the grounds and buildings, and receive an extra allowance for their services. Should it become necessary to fine a resident for violation of any of the Home rules he loses his pension for a set period, but in lieu of the pension he is furnished with 25 cents worth of tobacco each week until he is again placed on the pension roll. In an institution with more than 200 residents it is necessary to have rules to govern those domiciled therein. The rules are not so strict that any person will have difficulty in observing them.

June	$593 50	January	$457 00
July	507 50	February	467 50
August	613 50	March	585 50
September	482 50	April	431 50
October	472 50	May	423 50
November	582 00
December	466 00	Total	$6,082 50

FARM AND GARDEN.

During the year we raised a considerable quantity of garden truck, such as corn, beets, lettuce, spinach, carrots, rhubarb, etc. We also harvested fifty tons of alfalfa, which was valued at $900.

The Home's herd of thoroughbred Holstein-Friesians consists of thirty-eight milch cows, five yearlings, seven calves and one bull, valued at $8,500. We also have four horses valued at $600. The horses are used exclusively on the farm and Home grounds. There are four hundred chickens valued at $225.

During the year the cattle produced 33,634 gallons of milk valued at $8,408.50, and 1,102 pounds of veal valued at $167.86. We also sold ten calves for $150 and one cow to butcher for $123.23. The chickens produced 1,567¾ dozens of eggs worth $391.74, and 460 pounds of poultry valued at $87.50. Deducting the dairyman's salary, cost of feed and farm and garden expenses, which amounted to $5,183.25 leaves the Home a profit of $4,145.88. Ninety-five gallons of milk are consumed daily by the residents of the Home.

The following table shows the expenditure by months:

June	$280 93	January	$3 50
July	195 41	February	27 17
August	227 55	March	69 33
September	168 00	April	484 48
October	61 03	May	204 35
November	19 75
December	13 50	Total	$1,755 00

PERMANENT IMPROVEMENTS.

In August, 1916, ground was broken for the new addition to the south wing of the main building, which connects the main building with the hospital annex. This addition, when completed, will have thirty-five sleeping rooms, with sleeping porches on the east side of the building which will accommodate fifteen patients. On each of the upper floors are diet kitchens for nurses. On the ground floor is a dining room which has a seating capacity for 168 persons. The dining room is well ventilated and lighted, the entire front being of glass. East of and connected with the dining room by wide swinging doors is a large kitchen. The kitchen is sanitary in construction and is also well lighted and ventilated. Throughout the new addition are fire doors and water curtains, the necessary call bells and signals for nurses and patients.

This addition is to be used for sanatorium purposes exclusively. It is expected that the new building will be completed and ready for occupancy August 1. Up to date $30,693.19 has been expended on the building, $10,580.03 of which was for labor, $2,050 for architects' fees and $18,063.16 for materials. All work, with the exception of plumbing and heating, is being done by day labor.

EXTENSION TO MAIN BUILDING.

August	$1,478 41	February	$3,742 86
September	4,777 48	March	4,113 64
October	2,661 48	April	1,814 61
November	3,360 55	May	2,927 18
December	3,153 66
January	2,663 32	Total	$30,693 19

GENERAL REPAIRS.

In an institution as large as the Union Printers Home it is necessary to do considerable repairing every year in order to keep the buildings in proper condition. All necessary carpentry work, plastering and painting has been done during the year in the buildings in which the residents are domiciled. The barns and sheds have also been put in first-class condition. Repairs were made on the greenhouses at a cost of $207.60.

REPORT OF MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., May 31, 1917.

John C. Daley, Superintendent Union Printers Home:

DEAR SIR—Inasmuch as the medical work of the Home must of necessity follow in a general way the two general divisions of the Home, we have divided our report, for convenience, into two parts, viz., sanatorium and main building.

The frequent change in nomenclature, which has been deemed necessary by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, renders it opportune to insert what might be termed "Definition of Terms," that is, the terms that are applied both in the classification of cases on admission and terms by which we classify cases on discharge:

ON ADMISSION.

Incipient—Slight or no constitutional symptoms (including particularly gastric or intestinal disturbance or rapid loss of weight).

Slight or no elevation of temperature or acceleration of pulse at any time during the twenty-four hours.

Expectoration usually small in amount, or absent.

Slight infiltration limited to the apex of one or both lungs, or a small part of one lobe.

No tuberculous complications.

Moderately advanced—No marked impairment of function, either local or constitutional.

Localized consolidation moderate in extent with little or no evidence of cavity formation, or infiltration more extensive than under incipient.

No serious complications.

Far advanced—Marked impairment of function, local and constitutional.

Marked consolidation of an entire lobe, or disseminated areas or beginning cavity formation or serious complications.

ON DISCHARGE.

Apparently cured—All constitutional symptoms and expectoration with bacilli absent for a period of two years, under ordinary conditions of life.

Arrested—All constitutional symptoms and expectorations with bacilli absent for a period of six months, the physical signs to be those of a healed lesion.

Apparently arrested—All constitutional symptoms and expectoration with bacilli absent for a period of three months; the physical signs to be those of a healed lesion.

Quiescent—Absence of all constitutional symptoms; expectoration and bacilli may or may not be present; physical signs stationary or retrogressive; the foregoing conditions to have existed for at least two months.

Improved—Constitutional symptoms lessened or entirely absent; physical signs improved or unchanged; cough and expectoration with bacilli usually present.

Unimproved—All essential symptoms and signs unabated or increased.

Died.

ULTIMATE RESULTS.

Cured—All constitutional symptoms and expectoration with bacilli absent for a period of five years, under ordinary conditions of life.

Well—Patients who fulfill all the conditions required under "cured" but about whose sputum no definite information can be obtained.

In a study of these tables one feature is, unfortunately, altogether too prominent, viz., that a very large per cent of our residents in the sanatorium are classified as "far advanced" on admission. The result of sanatorium treatment in such cases is unsatisfactory and, too often, only palliative. Just where the responsibility rests for this ofttimes fatal mistake is difficult to determine, but it appears to us to be worthy of investigation by your board since the efficiency of a sanatorium, other factors being equal, depends in a large part on securing these cases early in the course of the disease. This factor often determines whether this institution shall be in reality a sanatorium, that is, a place of temporary residence until health is regained, or whether it shall be simply a home for the remainder of the resident's life.

We have as yet attempted no compilation of "ultimate results," since no data is furnished us after patients are discharged from the sanatorium. It seems to us that such data could be, and should be, supplied, and we respectfully call the attention of the board of trustees to this important point and suggest that the matter be considered by that body at its next annual session. The importance of such data, we think, needs only to be mentioned to be appreciated.

On May 31, 1916, we had in residence in the sanatorium 108 cases which we tabulated at that time in accordance with the above classification as follows:

Incipient	16
Moderately advanced	38
Far advanced	54

From May 31, 1916, to May 31, 1917, we have admitted to the sanatorium ninety cases. These have been classified as follows:

Incipient	20
Moderately advanced	35
Far advanced	35

In the care and treatment of both the sanatorium and main building residents we have attempted to give the best possible service with the means at our disposal. Modern medicine is demanding more and more the employment of exact methods in diagnosis and treatment, more painstaking investigations into the condition of the individual patient, more laboratory investigation, and, consequently, more expense.

At the present time we must of necessity have a considerable amount of this work, such as complicated blood examinations, Wasserman tests, X-ray plates, etc., done outside the institution, a condition of affairs which is unsatisfactory, both to the resident and to the physician.

We hope that the board of trustees may find it possible at no distant time to enlarge the scope of the work by the addition of increased laboratory equipment and more particularly by an increase in the medical staff.

CHARLES O. GIESE,
Medical Director.

TUBERCULOUS PATIENTS.

Dr. Charles O. Giese, a specialist in the treatment of tuberculosis, is the medical director of the Home, while Dr. W. H. Cryer, a general practitioner, is the Home physician. Dr. John R. Robinson is the specialist in the treatment of the eyes, ears, nose and throat. Other specialists are employed when necessary. Seven trained nurses are at the command of the patients. Tuberculous patients coming to the Home are immediately turned over to those in charge of the medical department, and, as the patient is invariably running a high temperature, he is put to bed and is required to remain there until he has a normal temperature. As soon as the physical condition of the patient is such that he can leave the hospital he is given quarters either in a tent or the open air pavilion. Frequently patients vacate too soon and against the advice of the physicians, with the result that in a few months they find themselves again broken down and perhaps in a far advanced stage of the disease.

The following record of tuberculous patients admitted during the year has been compiled:

CONCLUSION.

Of the 147 members admitted during the year, twenty-two who were previously residents of the Home were readmitted. Seven of these were main building residents and fifteen were sanatorium residents. One main building resident vacated giving no reason, one to accept a position, one restored to health, one unable to rest, one for lack of conveniences, one inability to adapt himself to climatic conditions, two to receive other treatment, two to be with relatives, two improved, two altitude too high, two to take pension, three advice of Home physician, one sent home mentally unbalanced, one sent to insane asylum and twenty-one able to work—a total of forty-two.

Sixty-nine residents of the sanatorium vacated as follows: One altitude too high, two not showing improvement, one for family reasons, one advice of Home physician, two to live in town, two to receive other treatment, one condition quiescent, twelve improved, thirteen to be with relatives or family and thirty-four able to work. Four sanatorium residents were expelled for violation of rules.

Of the twenty-nine deaths at the institution, thirteen were from tuberculosis and sixteen from other causes.

Elsewhere in this report is published a table showing the increase in the cost of foodstuffs over that of a year ago. All other commodities purchased for the Home have advanced in like manner. Blankets, linen, chinaware, silverware, shoes, hats, clothing, coal, ice, building materials, etc., have advanced in prices ranging from 10 to 100 per cent. Drugs have advanced in some instances more than 500 per cent, and the prospects are that we will be compelled to pay even higher prices the coming year. When the work now under way is completed and the new addition occupied I am of the opinion that the Home fund will be taxed to the limit. I also believe that further extensions to our buildings should be delayed until conditions are again back to normal.

We are using all available land for crops in an effort to "beat" the high cost of living. A large proportion of the 160 acres of farm land must be used for grazing cattle.

Resident Trustee McCaffery has spent a great deal of time at the Home during the year and has been of much assistance in going over matters pertaining to the building of the new addition. Mr. McCaffery has been a trustee for a number of years and as a result has had much to do with new buildings and additions that have been erected from time to time. He takes a keen interest in the Home and its residents at all times. I desire to take this opportunity to thank him for his cooperation and assistance.

I also wish to thank President Scott and Secretary Hays for their promptness in answering official correspondence.

I desire to thank the members of the board of trustees for their promptness in handling official matters laid before them by me and for their uniform courtesy to Mrs. Daley and myself during the year.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN C. DALEY,
Superintendent.

In presenting the foregoing report the board of trustees of the Home has endeavored to fully comply with the laws requiring that conventions of the International Typographical Union shall be furnished with a complete account of the transactions of those entrusted with the management of the institution.

Respectfully submitted,

MARSDEN G. SCOTT,
THOMAS MCCAFFERY,
ANNA C. WILSON,
MALCOLM A. KNOCK,
GEORGE P. NICHOLS,
WILLIAM MOUNCE,
J. W. HAYS,
Board of Trustees.

Sixty-Third Session

FIRST DAY

MORNING SESSION.

TEMPLE THEATER,
COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.,
Monday, August 13, 1917.

The convention was called to order by Chairman W. I. Reilly, of the convention committee of Colorado Springs Union No. 82, who introduced the Rev. Frank Staff, who delivered the following invocation:

Almighty God, our Father, we own Thy presence, and pray for Thy guidance in all our ways.

Bless Thou the International Typographical Union and the delegates here assembled and give to them wisdom that they may know what is right and best, and courage to do that which they know to be right.

Grant that a spirit of brotherhood and mutual understanding may characterize all their deliberations.

We thank Thee for that brotherhood manifested in their past enterprises and we thank Thee for the Home built here in our midst, and we pray that Thou will prosper them in the future, that through this convention and through similar gatherings Thy Kingdom may come and Thy Will be done on earth as in heaven, that the time may come when all men shall recognize Thy supremacy, Thy Fatherhood and the brotherhood of all men in Christ's name. Amen.

Chairman Reilly welcomed the delegates as follows:

To the officers, delegates, ex-delegates and visitors to the sixty-third session of the International Typographical Union, in behalf of the local arrangement committee I extend to you a most hearty welcome.

It has been eleven years since the International Typographical Union held a convention in the city of Colorado Springs.

I believe for the benefit of the membership in spending a week away from the rustle of the larger cities and for the welfare of your institution situated just outside the city limits of our city, it is a necessity that you hold a convention in Colorado Springs at least every ten years.

We, who live here, are very proud to be a part of the Union Printers Home, we are proud to come in contact with some of our many visitors each year and answer questions about the Home, and by holding your convention in our city it gives the membership at large an opportunity to acquaint themselves with their Home, as I believe that each delegate, when making his or her report to their local union, will certainly tell of how the Home appealed to them. Now I take pleasure in introducing J. E. Cheely, president of No. 82.

President Cheely, of Colorado Springs Union, welcomed the delegates in the following words:

Officers, delegates, ex-delegates and visitors: The sixty-third session of the International Typographical Union will mark the third time in history that Colorado Springs has had the honor of entertaining your convention. The first convention was held in 1896, the second in 1906, and the third, if the rule of holding the convention at Colorado Springs every ten years had been adhered to, would have been held here last year, but on account of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Home falling on this date we will this year hold a double celebration.

I am not going to attempt to make an address. I am here simply to extend to the delegates, ex-delegates and visitors a very cordial welcome in behalf of Colorado Springs Typographical Union No. 82. I also wish to add that our little local, with about seventy-five members, will be only too glad to add to your comfort and pleasure in any way it may be able to. You will have what we can hand you. I thank you.

The orchestra rendered a medley of patriotic airs.

Chairman Reilly, in introducing Mayor Charles E. Thomas, of Colorado Springs, said:

Last April we had a city election in the city of Colorado Springs. I was chairman of this committee. I went to one of the candidates for mayor and told him that we were going to have a convention here and that if he was elected mayor of this city, or that if he would promise to make the talk here, the address of welcome, that we would elect him mayor. We did so.

I take great pleasure in introducing the Hon. Charles E. Thomas.

Mayor Thomas spoke as follows:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—"Bill" always makes good, and the fortunate part is that he tries to make others make good. I want to apologize for my throat. I have been trying for four weeks to rib up for this convention, but unfortunately I have gotten a very bad voice out of it. I wanted to delegate this to some one better qualified to do justice to the occasion. Explaining my reason for it to your genial chairman, he told me a bad throat was always a valid reason, but that it was an overworked excuse, and as I have to live several years more with your chairman, I had rather impose upon the convention than incur his displeasure.

In my brief official experience no more pleasant task has been assigned me than the welcoming of this convention to our city. Endeavoring to greet all of our guests with a hearty welcome, we are particularly desirous that those we know best and think most favorably of shall have a genial and hearty welcome. This is the welcome which this community wishes me to extend to you. This is the welcome which I seek words to express, and yet, my friends, I realize fully that those words are wasted unless they convey to you the joy and pleasure which this community feels in having you here.

Colorado Springs needs no introduction to this organization. That formality was handled about twenty-five years ago when you started the erection of that splendid Home upon the hill, and I can only trust that the organization has as much to be proud of in this city as the city has to be proud of in that magnificent institution. You know, ladies and gentlemen, as mayor of the city, I have charge of the water department, and am strong for the water.

It is not alone through your Home that we know of your organization. We know many of your members and know them well, Daley, McCaffery, Reilly, Cheely, Woodworth, and many others who are factors in your community as well as in your organization, and whose simple request would throw open the doors of this community to you.

You meet here for the third time. You come here as friends visiting old familiar places. Many of you perhaps come for the first time. To those I would like to urge that you see as much of our community and its environment as your time permits. We have many, many things of which we are very proud, and what is sometimes of equal importance, I do not know of one we are ashamed of.

You gather here to discuss questions of your craft; important at any time, but especially so at this particular time when both nations whose flags drape these walls are meeting the unusual conditions of war, conditions which must affect our national lives from the highest to the lowest, and which must impose unusual responsibilities upon all. You as the leaders of progressive thought have your responsibilities. The eyes of unionism will rest on this hall during the next few days. You have sent many of your members to the war; you will send many, many more. When these men go out upon the great adventure, casting aside the ties of home and friends and nation, what will bind them to all that heretofore has constituted their lives? Their nations will designate the part they are to play; this organization must indicate the part it wants to play, and I hope it will be a worthy part. I am quite sure that an organization that cares so tenderly for the old and the indigent will not be unmindful of its duty in this case.

I am incompetent to talk upon the questions of your craft, but I feel perfectly at liberty to suggest this for your serious consideration, and I do so feelingly, because of the experience I have had and am having and doubtless will have as the head of the local exemption board upon the draft, a position which imposes duties that make one chill from natural impulse and forget in the fulfillment of those duties those natural sympathies which tie one to another. From that position I can realize perhaps more fully than most of you the situation that confronts us at this present time.

I want to compliment you upon this splendid gathering, and I want to compliment the local committee upon the effective work which it has done, work which you doubtless appreciate more than the rest of us. I want to say that in looking over this audience there is no reason to believe but that all your deliberations will be wise, your actions good. I want to trust that, as your work is profitable, so may your stay here be pleasurable, enjoying renewed acquaintances, establishing new friendships and enjoying old associations. I trust that the week will be well and pleasantly spent, and I trust that the fragrance of its memory will linger with you after this convention has passed into history. Thank you.

Chairman Reilly introduced George Hemus, of Colorado Springs Union No. 82, who rendered a song which was thoroughly enjoyed by the delegates and visitors. Mrs. Hemus was the accompanist on the piano.

Chairman Reilly introduced Judge Samuel J. Kinsley, who welcomed the delegates and visitors as follows:

Mr. Chairman and Members of The International Typographical Union—Ordinarily we speak of Colorado Springs as the city of sunshine, but I fear from your experience since your arrival from the rather unwelcome skies and the state of the weather you will begin to believe we are a city of moonshine. Perhaps that is an unhappy reference. I thought as the gentleman who last entertained us was singing the song of tribute to the good old home-brewed ale that he struck a more responsive chord than any of the speakers who had preceded him. I want to assure you that it was merely a coincidence that while it was being sung "Bill" Reilly walked in with a pitcher of water.

My friends, this is not a greeting of home folks to strangers; it is rather the extension of a welcome by those who have lived here for many years to those members of our family whom we consider to be our kinfolks. It is not only our home but your home. We boast of our natural attractions, and we point to our visitors the mountains upon our western horizon raising their rugged crags against the sky, and with equal pride we turn to the east and point to that institution upon the hill which was founded by your forethought and benevolence as one of the grandest of our local institutions.

We recognize in this body an organization that is founded and maintained for the purpose of upholding the standards of craftsmanship, of citizenship and of all that is best in life. You have recognized and you have put into a concrete and very significant form those principles which animate every body of men. You have, in your gatherings, indicated that it is your purpose to maintain those standards long since established.

I have been sitting beside Brother Gilmore, and at the close of the second speech he said with gratification, "Bully! two speeches in five minutes; I hope they keep up that record."

There is much in my heart that I should like to say, but I am not going to detain you and keep you from the deliberations of this session. We welcome you, as I said before, as old friends and as kinfolks. We hope your deliberations will be most profitable, as they always are, and that your stay here will be crowned with success, and when you go to your homes you will carry with you most happy memories of Colorado Springs.

Chairman Reilly then introduced D. S. Gilmore, a member of Colorado Springs Union No. 82. Mr. Gilmore spoke as follows:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen—It is my very pleasant duty to add my bit to the welcome that has been extended to you in behalf of this community. We are mighty glad to have you with us.

Also, I thought I might help in convincing you of the sincerity of our welcome by reminding you that this is a tourist resort, and we assume that each of you has brought a piece of change along.

Also, I am to lead this stuff out a little and work in a few ornaments. So, first, I shall tell you something about the place where you are meeting. I'm going to turn the Colorado Springs eagle loose for a minute or two and let him scream.

Step right up, ladies and gentlemen, and have a look. This is Colorado Springs, the biggest little city on the map. It's the best town in the greatest state of the grandest nation in all the world. It's six thousand and thirty-five and sixty-five one-hundredths feet above the sea, occupying a vantage point from which one may look far down on less favored communities that are only a mile high. There is no other spot on God's footstool where the sun and the stars shine any brighter; where the children's laughter is any lighter; where the skies are any clearer or bluer, or the hearts of men any stronger or truer. Here the air and the water are pure, and cool, and sweet, and life is worth while, indeed. Both the air and the water are all free—help yourselves. And say—listen—whisper—you're going to have a better chance to find out about that water thing than you have ever had before at any other convention you ever attended.

This is Pikes Peak, America's most famous mountain. It's fourteen thousand, one hundred and nine feet tall, and is pure, solid granite through and through. Get on top and see how the world is built. Now we will pass through North Cheyenne canyon and the famous Ute pass and see what the world is made of. This is Manitou, where the red man's gods presided over the natural effervescent mineral springs which alleviated so many of his ills.

During this convention, through the courtesy of the Manitou Mineral Water Company, you will be served with waters from these springs in their bottled form. Under the brand "Original Manitou" the glass and cork confine them in an absolutely natural state, even to the bubbles; preserving the snap and sparkle of the mountain air, the tang of the mountain forest, and all the strength and vigor of those mighty hills from whence they come.

And here are vast natural caves—pass right in and see the works on the inside. This is the world-famous Garden of the Gods, a large tract filled with strange natural rock formations. The Garden of the Gods, together with North Cheyenne canyon, the famous High drive, the natural park at Austin's Bluffs, and numerous other features, belong to the public park system of Colorado Springs and comprise what is undoubtedly the most unique municipal park system in the whole world.

That red streak across the face of the mountains is the railroad over the hills to the world-famed Cripple Creek, and land of gold, distant only two hours by rail. The only manufactories we have at Colorado Springs excepting the mills of the gods, which provide new health and happiness, are the mills that reduce the ores of Cripple Creek into gold bricks. I mean the genuine, not the spurious, variety. You may be interested in seeing where the real stuff comes from.

These are only a few of the things we have to show you. In general terms I say without fear of contradiction that within a short radius from our city hall there is to be enjoyed more scenic grandeur and natural wonders than can be found in any equal area on the face of the globe.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, having mentioned some of the notable works of God that we have at Colorado Springs, I assure you that it is with much earnestness that I refer to what we have in the form of a most notable work of man, that stands in its unique position first and foremost of its kind —the Union Printers Home.

Here is a printers' establishment that is a model to all, though it is not equipped with things of steel, and brass, and lead. The leaping current that provides its motive power is the red blood of real humanity. Its only product is a "bounty unpurchasable" in the form of bodily comfort, renewed vigor, restored health, even life itself for those who have fallen in the great struggle in which we all must ever be engaged.

If I continued in an endeavor to express to you what I, and many others, feel regarding that institution, I could easily permit myself to become overwhelmed with emotion. But that is not necessary. You are here and will have opportunity to see, and hear, and enjoy, and think for yourselves. And whatever your relations or political prejudices within the organization are or may have been, even if you have been an anti all your life, as you become familiar with that Home, if you are a man you will be more proud than ever before that you are a printer and a member of the International Typographical Union.

It will make you feel like a millionaire. I mean that. Perhaps you have felt like a millionaire before—and perhaps you had a head on you the next morning. But there's no headache in this proposition. No millionaire ever felt a greater pride of ownership, no millionaire ever knew a greater joy in achievement than you will experience when you thoroughly inspect and understand the Home. You may swell up and strut, and say "I'm the guy who did this!" And you did. You paid your little old fifteen or twenty cents a month and did it all. And if you would pay two bits a month, as you ought to, you could easily get into the "multi" class.

Do you know that one reason Jim Lynch is so big is because he visited the Home so often? He came out once or twice during each year he was on the job, and every time he went back he had his clothes let out. And Scott and Hays are coming up.

In these tremendous times I am proud to think of the history of the International Typographical Union as always having been representative of true patriotism and loyalty—the same kind of patriotism and loyalty that we are called upon to display now in saving the world to democracy. Eleven years ago some of our number were called to the front to carry a fight to the oppressors in the industrial world, while those of us behind the lines contributed to the campaign to the extent of at least one-tenth of all we could earn. Today some of the members of the International Typographical Union are being called to join those khaki-clad hosts of American Liberty Lads, who are carrying a fight to the oppressors in Europe, and those of us who remain behind will back them up as we did before. Thank God that name of Liberty Lads may be as justly applied to the fellows from north of the Dominion boundary line as to those from this side. And thank God that the principle for which we sacrifice is the same as that which has always actuated the International Typographical Union: "The welfare of one is the concern of all."

Ladies and gentlemen, if I have appeared vainglorious in these utterances, it is because I feel that way; and I believe that I am correctly representing the people of this community when I feel and talk that way. We are all glad, and proud; we're proud of our town, and we're proud of the Union Printers Home, and we're proud of the International Typographical Union, and we're glad and proud of this convention. And we hope that you are glad and proud with us, and that you will have a bully good and a profitable time, and that you will want to come here again, and that you will come—soon.

The delegates and visitors sang the following song:

THE UNION PRINTERS HOME.

By D. S. Gilmore, of No. 82.

(Air, "Battle Hymn of the Republic.")

Of all the institutions that the world has ever known,
None are more successful than the ones we call our own;
So we love to sing the glories of the good old I. T. U.,
And the Union Printers Home.

CHORUS.

Glory, glory to the I. T. U.,
Glory, glory to the I. T. U.,
Glory, glory to the I. T. U.,
And the Union Printers Home.

There are many labor unions that are doing all they can
To better the condition of their fellow working man;
But none can match the record of the grand old I. T. U.,
And the Union Printers Home.

CHORUS.

An injury to one must be the real concern of all;
United we must ever stand, divided we might fall;
And this applies not only to the entire I. T. U.,
But the Union Printers Home.

CHORUS.

The lads of the Dominion and the States are now allied,
And in behalf of freedom they are fighting side by side,
As for years they've stood together in the dear old I. T. U.,
And the Union Printers Home.

CHORUS.

In presenting President Scott, Chairman Reilly said:

The next gentleman I am going to introduce needs no introduction. He is the president of our grand organization. I perhaps might stand here and say a great deal about this man, but feel that it is not necessary. There is no use of my taking up the time. I present two gavels, which denote authority, one from a plum tree from the Union Printers Home and the other from a cherry tree from the Union Printers Home. We asked two different men at the Home to make the gavels—one was the carpenter at the Home; the other was a resident of the Home, Jack Champion, the father of, I might say, all mechanics.

I take pleasure in presenting the gavels to Marsden G. Scott.

President Scott replied to the various addresses of welcome as follows:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen—The delegates to the sixty-third annual convention of the International Typographical Union have assembled in a city the rugged and picturesque surroundings of which in themselves are an inspiration. Here in Colorado Springs the impressive handiwork of the Creator confronts us on every hand. The towering peaks and the deep-cut canyons complete a series of pictures which will be photographed indelibly in the minds of every delegate to this convention. In them we should find the incentive to build our institutions upon solid and permanent foundations.

The city of Colorado Springs is dear to the heart of every member of the International Typographical Union. We feel that this organization is a part of this beautiful municipality, for here we have erected a living testimonial of the benevolent spirit of our fraternity, the Union Printers Home.

In behalf of the members of the International Union and the delegates to this convention, it is indeed a pleasure to accept the cordial hospitality so generously offered by the representatives of the city, the local typographical union, and others. You have thrown wide the door of welcome, and in accepting your invitation to enter, we have glimpsed some of the gorgeous views in the several gardens of the gods which are to be found here in nature's playgrounds.

The welcome thus far extended would not be complete, however, without the official greeting of the Board of Trustees of the Union Printers Home. As president of the board, I am authorized to announce to the prodigal sons of the International Typographical Union here assembled that Superintendent Daley has arranged to kill a fatted calf in honor of your return to your Home, and that on Wednesday afternoon, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the institution will be celebrated modestly on the Home grounds. To all of you we extend a cordial invitation to be present.

Individually and collectively the members of this organization require no certificate of patriotism or of loyalty to the governments under which we live. Since the United States and Canada have been forced to participate in a war unparalleled in magnitude in the history of the civilized world, we must contribute our modest efforts to the winning of that war.

From our subordinate organizations in Canada more than five hundred members have enlisted in the forces now at the battle front in France. Of these, forty-two have been killed, and to their widows, fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers, and other beneficiaries this International Union has paid mortuary benefits amounting to more than $12,000. Here in the United States nearly five hundred members have enlisted under the Stars and Stripes, and other hundreds will be drawn under the universal service act.

These conditions have placed upon our shoulders an additional grave responsibility. Come what may, this International Union will stand back of its obligations to those of its members who have enlisted or who may be called for military service. Not for one moment will consideration be given to any suggestion to the contrary.

Fortunately the balance in our reserve mortuary fund is sufficient to meet any emergency which may arise during the coming year. There are absolutely no grounds whatever for uneasiness on the part of our members or the delegates to this convention. In this respect this International Union is fully prepared.

It is a pleasure to state that in the discussion of the war and its problems not one discordant note has been sounded by any of our subordinate unions. Since the decisive step has been taken, the International Typographical Union will follow the flags of the United States and Canada to the victory which must be won.

Nor have we been content with the enlistment of hundreds of our members. The International Union, through the executive council, has subscribed liberally to the liberty loan, and many subordinate unions have purchased these bonds. Thus we are doing our bit, both in the front line trenches and here behind the lines.

It is not improper to suggest that the committee on resolutions shall submit to this convention a suitable declaration definitely and explicitly setting forth our determination to do our bit for the preservation of the institutions which democracy has established. If organized labor is to demand the right to sit at the council table when consideration is given to the readjustments which must follow the conclusion of this world's war, then organized labor must now assume its full share of the burdens and responsibilities which confront us.

In calling attention to the extortionate prices which speculators, promoters and gamblers have placed upon food products and many manufactured articles of commerce we need offer no apology, since President Wilson himself has publicly appealed to these human vultures to curb their appetites for illegal and abnormal profits. Time and again the halls of congress have echoed with righteous denunciations of the individuals and corporations whose activities are principally devoted to schemes to extort through the misfortunes of humanity every ounce of tribute which a helpless citizenship can pay.

Not least of these offenders are the individuals who have seized upon this opportunity to demand extortionate prices for newsprint and other papers used in the printing industry. Thorough investigation by the Federal Trade Commission furnished the convincing evidence that there was no justification whatever for the unnecessary burden which has been placed on our industry by the individuals responsible for these exorbitant prices. Your representatives in the American Federation of Labor convention in Baltimore secured the adoption of resolutions demanding action by the department of justice, and later several of the alleged conspirators were indicted by a federal grand jury in New York city. There the matter rests, and apparently a return to normal prices for newsprint and other papers used in printing will not be forthcoming in the near future.

We are not impatient or unreasonable in pleading for relief from this unjust burden which has been illegally placed upon the printing industry. If congress and the department of justice are powerless in this emergency, then congress should at least refrain from imposing a further burden on the industry by increasing the postage rates on printed matter. If newspapers and periodicals are to be taxed out of existence, if the volume of printed books, catalogues and commercial printing is to be reduced, if thousands of our members are to be forced into the ranks of the unemployed, then the advocates of increased postage rates on printed matter will have won a hollow victory if these ill-advised increases are enacted into law.

In the printed reports for the year the delegates will find a record of the steps taken by the executive council to protect the situations of enlisted members. It is due to the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America to publicly commend the patriotic spirit with which the members of these organizations have accepted the suggestions made by the officers of the International Typographical Union. If the recommendations sent to subordinate unions are followed, the situations of members in war service will be fully protected during their absence. If these recommendations are disregarded the responsibility rests squarely upon the shoulders of the officers of subordinate unions who neglect their duty.

When the selections for war service are completed it is not improbable that in some jurisdictions there may be a temporary shortage of men to fill the places of those eligible under the universal service act. Our first duty in such an emergency is to meet the requirements of those employers having contracts. Members of subordinate unions who have been permitted to accept employment in offices not covered by contracts should be drafted for service in union shops if necessary.

During the fiscal year, which ended May 31, 1917, the gross earnings of the members of this union were $66,652,431, an increase of $3,940,626 over the preceding year. The average earnings per member for the twelve months were $1,086.43, an increase of $45.25 per member over the preceding year.

It is a safe assertion that in one respect at least the record made by this organization during the past year never has been excelled by any international union in America. Out of these total earnings of more than $66,600,000 the members of this union paid less than $5,000 for actual strike expenses. In other words, the members of this union contributed less than one cent each for strike purposes during the twelve months ending on May 31, 1917.

Having established this most enviable record, we are fully justified in insisting that the members of this International Union are fully competent to manage the internal affairs of this organization, and we shall not tolerate any attempt on the part of any autocracy in the trade union movement to meddle with our contracts or to assume control over any matters which are distinctly within the jurisdiction of this union.

Since our last convention the International arbitration agreement between this union and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association has been renewed for a period of five years, and in the annual reports the delegates will find the record of the individual contracts issued under the new agreement.

By the authority of the referendum vote taken in May last, an international arbitration agreement has been entered into between this union and the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America, thus bringing to a successful conclusion negotiations which have covered a period of several years.

If our subordinate unions will now grasp the opportunity which is at hand, the members of this organization employed in the book and job branch of the industry can not fail to reap the tangible reward of a system which has brought industrial peace and increased wages to members employed in newspaper offices.

No man can predict with any degree of accuracy the conditions which may confront the members of this union in the next twelve months. In this convention, perhaps more than in any that has preceded it, there is need of caution in considering propositions which may be submitted for changes in our laws. In previous conventions the officers of this union have vigorously opposed ill-advised legislation looking to a broadening of the scope of the beneficial features of this organization. There is no desire on our part to deprive any member of the right to participate in these benefits if he is legally entitled thereto, but the day is at hand when the members of this union must realize that the laws governing payments from the old age pension fund be based on business principles. If there is to be discrimination, let it be in favor of the member whose loyalty to this union is evidenced by continuous membership rather than in favor of the slacker, who, in many instances, imposes upon our generosity.

The committee on apprentices presents to this convention a report which includes a definite plan for apprentice training and supplemental education. The International Union must now assume this responsibility and establish a system owned, controlled and directed by the responsible officers of this union. This educational feature must be placed on a permanent foundation, its future must be guaranteed, and that can be best accomplished by the adoption of the plan recommended by the committee on apprentices.

Since our last convention death has claimed two former presidents of this organization. John McVicar, president in 1876, died at his home in Detroit in December, 1916. M. R. H. Witter, president in 1884 and 1885, died in St. Louis on the second day of the present month. Death has also taken from us A. W. Thomson, better known as "Booth," chairman of our International committee on apprentices. It is fitting that proper tribute to these veterans be spread upon the minutes of this convention.

In conclusion I request the earnest co-operation of the delegates to the convention and the several committees to be appointed to the end that the result of your deliberations will reflect full credit on the International Typographical Union, and maintain the prestige which we have established in the trade union movement.

President Scott then announced the convention was ready for business and called for the report of Secretary-Treasurer Hays, which follows:

REPORT OF SECRETARY-TREASURER.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 13, 1917.

IRREGULARLY ELECTED.

Credentials have been received from the following delegates, who appear to have been chosen on a date other than that provided by law:

107, Rock Island, Ill., etc.—Charles H. Lohmann.
113, Atchison, Kan.—Robert Tompkins.
119, Jefferson City, Mo.—Thomas F. Walden.
221, San Diego, Cal.—Roy H. Loman.
618, Watertown, Wis.—Helen D. Roglitz.

I recommend that the regularly and irregularly elected delegates be seated in accordance with the established precedent.

LATE CREDENTIALS.

The credentials of the following delegates were not forwarded within forty-eight hours after the election of delegates as is required by section 6, article iii, of the by-laws:

403, Tulsa, Okla.—W. A. Freeman.
563, Rock Springs, Wyo.—J. P. Sheehan.

INELIGIBLE AS DELEGATE.

Credentials have been presented by the following, who is a resident of the Home and who does not appear to have been eligible for election as delegate as provided in section 1, article iii, by-laws:

201, Victoria, B. C.—James Taylor.

Digitized by Google

PROTESTED CREDENTIALS.

Credentials showing that he was elected on other than the date provided in the law have been presented by the following:

170. Tacoma, Wash.—Charles Perry Taylor.

The seating of Mr. Taylor as a delegate has been protested by twenty-two members of Tacoma Union.

ALTERNATE CREDENTIALS.

Alternate Delegate E. F. Graendorf, of San Francisco Mailers' Union No. 18, has presented alternate credentials, but the regularly elected delegate has presented the regular credentials and is present. The alternate claims a seat in the convention and has a letter from the union on the subject.

I recommend that the credentials of delegates which were not filed within the limit of the law, those of the delegate who appears to be ineligible, the protested credentials and the alternate credentials be referred to the committee on credentials.

Respectfully submitted,

J. W. HAYS,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws moved that the report of the secretary-treasurer be received and his recommendations concurred in.

The motion was adopted.

The delegates were then obligated.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws, moved that the president be authorized to appoint the usual convention officers.

The motion was adopted.

President Scott then appointed the following convention officers:

Reading Clerk—Edward E. Padgett, Pittsburgh Typographical Union No. 7.

Assistant Secretary—Estus L. Traylor, Kansas City Typographical Union No. 80.

Sergeant-at-Arms—John J. McCarty, Colorado Springs Typographical Union No. 82.

Messengers—Ernest W. Stewart, Colorado Springs No. 82; Mel D. Forester, Colorado Springs No. 82; Leslie Kaiser, Colorado Springs No. 82.

The officers of the convention were then obligated.

President Scott said a number of delegates had not deposited their credentials late last night when the list of committees was prepared. He appointed the following committees, subject to change if it developed that any delegate named on a committee was not in attendance at the convention:

Committee on Laws—Keating (Milwaukee), Elliot (Toronto), Johns (New York), Johnson (San Francisco), Keener (Tucson), Murphy (Providence), Woody (Richmond).

Committee on Returns and Finance—Trump (Boston), Baldauf (Los Angeles), Connolly (Syracuse), Cox (Albany), Hufham (Raleigh), McCallian (Indianapolis), Steen (Salt Lake City), Watson (Kokomo), Woods (Kansas City Mailers).

Committee on Union Printers Home—Leighley (Pittsburgh), Albrecht (Colorado Springs), Cavanagh (New York), Gustafson (Boulder), Hodgkin (Greensboro), Mullich (Cincinnati), Shepard (Grand Rapids), Smith (Pueblo), Zander (Chicago).

Committee on Subordinate Unions—Bowen (Philadelphia), Amsberry (Bridgeport), Boyd (Des Moines), Culhane (Grand Junction), Googer (Cheyenne), Hickman (Louisville), Lawrence (Hillsboro), Weaver (Wheeling), Wilson (St. Louis).

Committee on Miscellaneous Business—Cato (St. Louis), Alley (Nashville), Colvin (Topeka), German (Springfield, Ill.), Henderson (Council Bluffs), Lamb (Dallas), Steidley (Muskogee), Spyres (Vinita), Thompson (St. Paul).

Delegates Smith (Butte) and Lougheed (Detroit) objected to the appointment of the committee on appeals.

President Scott said the question before the convention was, "Shall the president appoint a committee on appeals?"

Delegates Smith (Butte), Carter (Chattanooga), Owens (Cincinnati), Tullis (Dallas) and Mitchell (Chicago) opposed the appointment of the committee on appeals.

Delegates Campbell (Norfolk), Trump (Boston), Cahill (Lynn), Rifenberick (Albany), Keller (New York) and Harwood (Richmond) favored the appointment of the committee on appeals by the president.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays said:

It seems to me that in the discussion of the question as to whether the appeals committee shall be appointed by the president or elected by this convention is not given the right interpretation by the people who oppose the appointment by the president. They seem to forget that in all committees consideration is given to the propositions that are handed to them by this convention through its officers and assigned by its president; that the last analysis and last decision on these questions lie with this convention. It makes no difference how your committees are selected, nor when or where. Your committee is simply an avenue to collect the facts and submit the ideas of the members of that committee to this convention as to what they believe the best action to be taken by this convention. Nevertheless, especially on the question of appeals, this convention is the deciding ballot, and if a majority of this convention believe that the committee is not making a proper report, if a majority of this convention believe that a committee of members of the International Typographical Union who are prominent and well enough known to be selected as delegates of their local unions and honored with delegateship in this convention are so low that they can be influenced by their appointment to a committee to make a report on the opinion of some one else, then this convention is entirely within its rights in turning them over, and the delegates are derelict in their duty if they do not only turn over the report of the committee, but if they do not take steps to put delegates who will do things of that kind out of this convention.

I realize to some extent why this fight is made here. You all know here that officers of the International Typographical Union have not been honored with a document that has been sent to all of the delegates on an appeal that is to come to this convention, where the officers are vilified and accused of all the crimes that could come under the laws of the International Typographical Union. They will be taken up when the appeals committee reports.

I am not surprised that some people in this convention desire to take steps that they believe will assist in continuing and supporting the vilification that is trying to be made against the International Typographical Union officers. I might say that the International officers will be able to take care of themselves, and when these questions come up they will be handled in the right manner. It makes no difference what the report of any committee will be, these questions will be given due consideration. At the present time I do not believe that this convention desires to further humiliate an officer of the International Typographical Union by adopting a new policy and taking away from him the right to appoint any and all committees in this convention.

The previous question was ordered.

President Scott again said the question before the convention was, "Shall the president appoint a committee on appeals to consist of seven members?"

The appointment of the committee on appeals by the president was authorized by a viva voce vote.

Delegate Powell (Oklahoma City) asked to be recorded as voting against the appointment of the committee on appeals by the president under instructions from his union.

Committee on Appeals—Hoban (Cleveland), Cody (Minneapolis), Conway (Philadelphia), Dawson (Springfield, Mo.), Ellis (San Francisco), Norman (Cincinnati), Remmert (St. Louis).

Committee on Allied Trades—Gottlob (Newark), Brown (Salina), Fentress (Norfolk), Lohmann (Rock Island, Moline, Davenport), Maddock (Lafayette), Naden (Chicago Mailers), Oliver (Fort Worth), Rickert (Waterloo), Rising (San Diego).

Committee on Apprentices and Supplemental Education—Harwood (Richmond), Adler (Boston), Anderson (Omaha), Bancroft (Kansas City), Cole (Toledo), Edie (Springfield, Ill.), Oliver (Denver), Stokes (Baltimore), Walden (Jefferson City).

Committee on Arbitration—Burns (Rochester), Brandon (Washington), Johnson (Erie), Martin (Cleveland Mailers), Rifenberick (Albany), Steffen (Cleveland), Thacker (Milwaukee), Wilson (Columbus), Vest (Decatur).

Committee on Credentials—Powell (Oklahoma City), Beilman (Buffalo), Cantwell (Montreal), Carter (Chattanooga), Groom (Ottawa, Kan.), Ryan (St. Louis), Wagoner (Galesburg), Walton (Scranton), Woodruff (Danville).

Committee on Report of Federation Delegates—Donovan (St. Paul), Appleyard (Tallahassee), Dickinson (Cleveland), Hassett (Memphis), Head (Beaumont), Hetherington (Boston), Lougheed (Detroit), Robinson (Elgin), Wheeler (Sedalia).

Committee on Health—Coplan (Toledo), Brooks (St. Joseph), Gookin (Roanoke), Grothe (Spokane), Herchenbach (Burlington, Iowa), Keifer (Pittsburgh), Kemmerer (Portsmouth), Neely (San Francisco), Wiley (Denver).

Committee on Label—Jolly (Indianapolis), Burt (Mobile), Casey (Wilkes-Barre), Dierkes (Louisville), Eatherley (Toronto Mailers), English (Galveston), Miller (Reading), Rossie (St. Joseph), Wilson (Houston).

Committee on Officers' Reports—Deming (Washington), Courtney (Salt Lake City), Fullam (New York Mailers), Hedderich (Indianapolis German-American), Kenny (Peoria), Musser (Muncie), Sheehan (Rock Springs), Sims (Wheeling), Welsh (Toronto).

Committee on Organization—Coyell (Buffalo), Guetschow (Bloomington), Hoffman (El Paso), McTague (Scranton), Meier (Lawton), Myers (Lansing), Noonan (Boston Mailers), Park (Boise City), Rhyne (Fort Smith).

Committee on Postal Telegraph and Telephone Service—Keller (New York), Stearns (Honolulu), Hughes (Albuquerque), Baum (Huntington), Weissman (Cincinnati Mailers), Brady (Enid), Brown (Des Moines), Marshall (Chicago), Haines (Tacoma).

Committee on Press—Dunham (Springfield, Mass.) Armstrong (Memphis), Bachman (Wichita Falls), Bowen (Washington), Brison (Los Angeles Mailers), Hazlett (Pittsburgh), Jackson (Sacramento), Pampusch (Minneapolis), Rider (Mattoon).

Committee on Provincial, State and District Unions—Cahill (Lynn), Babb (Dayton), Edwards (Trenton), Farmer (Little Rock), Gilbert (Austin), Hunt (Fresno), Kasch (Fort Collins), Mayer (Evansville), Spurgeon (Indianapolis).

Committee on Publicity—Ball (Wichita), Adams (Lincoln), Casaday (Denver Mailers), Cole (Great Falls), Graves (Fort Worth), Harvey (Jackson), Maher (New York), Newton (Nashville), Strange (Winnipeg).

Committee on Resolutions—Campbell (Norfolk), Black (Harrisburg), Hesford (Greeley), Higgins (Syracuse), Kinsolving (Washington, D. C.), Riser (Ogden), Tompkins (Atchison), West (Kansas City), White (Philadelphia).

Committee on Typographical Journal—Rutherford (Baltimore), Brame (Trinidad), Crawford (Leadville), Karns (Sioux City), Lemley (Omaha), Loman (San Diego), Raubinger (San Francisco Mailers), Stephens (Oakland), Taylor (Kansas City).

Committee on Thanks—Waddell (Grand Rapids), Dunkle (Baltimore), Koerps (San Antonio), McArdle (New York Mailers), O'Shaughnessy (Boston), Roglitz (Watertown), Runshe (Ottumwa), Uzzell (Joplin), Winn (Birmingham).

Chairman Keating of the committee on laws moved the hours of the convention be from 9:30 A. M. to 12:30 P. M., and from 2 P. M. to 5 P. M.

The motion was adopted.

Chairman Keating of the committee on laws moved that no proposition be received after adjournment on Wednesday noon, except with unanimous consent.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Chairman Reilly invited all delegates and visitors to the dance to be given at 8 P. M. at Stratton park.

Mr. August Koester, chairman of the Ex-Delegates' Association of Denver, invited all delegates and visitors to an auto trip through the Denver park system, to be given on Sunday, August 19. He promised every one attending a good time.

The convention then adjourned until 2 P. M.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON CREDENTIALS.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 13, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on credentials respectfully recommends that the following delegates whose credentials were not filed with Secretary-Treasurer Hays within the proper time, be seated:

403, Tulsa, Okla.—W. A. Freeman.
563, Rock Springs, Wyo.—J. P. Sheehan.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegates Freeman and Sheehan were then obligated.

Communications were read as follows:

LANCASTER, PA., August 12, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the Sixty-Third Annual Convention of the International Typographical Union:

GENTLEMEN—The Eastern Pennsylvania District Typographical Union in regular quarterly conference assembled extends greetings and best wishes for harmonious and profitable convention and heartily endorses Scranton's invitation for next year's convention and requests favorable consideration.

Fraternally,
L. B. WANBAUGH,
Secretary Eastern Pennsylvania District Typographical Union.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., August 12, 1917.

John W. Hays, Secretary International Typographical Union, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

Best wishes for a most successful convention. In this time of our own national peril, and in a cause in which our entire membership is united, I am sure our union, true to its historic record, will, through its representatives in convention assembled, take such action as will be of material assistance in bringing victory to the standards of the nations that are battling for freedom and the rights of humanity, and in service to our members who are and will be with the armies overseas.

JAMES M. LYNCH.

CHICAGO, ILL., August 12, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, convention headquarters, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

Fraternal greetings and hearty wishes for a successful convention. May the spirit of advancement that has predominated the grand old organization in the past continue, and may your deliberations retain the high standard of former conventions.

HARRY HILLMAN,
Editor Inland Printer.

CHICAGO, ILL., August 10, 1917.

M. G. Scott, 635-639 Newton Claypool building, Indianapolis, Ind.:

MY DEAR MR. SCOTT—Your very kind invitation to attend and address the sixty-third convention of the International Typographical Union has been received and for which please accept my thanks.

At the present writing I am led to believe that conditions will not permit of my attendance. The convention of the International Photo-Engravers' Union will be held in Rochester, N. Y., beginning on Monday, August 20, next. Our executive council meets two days prior to the opening of our convention, on Saturday, August 18. You will note that hardly sufficient time is allowed me to come to Colorado Springs and return in time to prepare for our convention.

In addition, I find work at present greatly increased, due to the recent death of our secretary-treasurer. I am quite sure than I will have to devote some of my time to our new secretary-treasurer, who, as yet, is inexperienced in the handling of convention work and in making the essential arrangements for such a meeting.

If I can not come I shall certainly avail myself of the opportunity of extending to your officers, delegates and members fraternal greetings and well wishes for a most successful convention. Extending kind regards, I am, Fraternally yours,

MATTHEW WOLL.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 10, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. SCOTT—I am in receipt of your communication of the 5th inst., in which you kindly invite me to attend and address the coming convention of the International Typographical Union, which is to be held in the city of Colorado Springs, Colo., beginning Monday, August 13.

Replying thereto will say that I have some very important matters which will require my presence in the east about the time your convention is to be held and it is very probable, therefore, that I will be unable to avail myself of your kind invitation. However, if I can arrange matters to be with you, you may rest assured that it will give me pleasure to attend.

Assuring you of my full appreciation of your courteous invitation, and with best possible wishes for a successful convention, I am,

Sincerely yours,
A. P. SOVEY,
President International Brotherhood of Bookbinders.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 13, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

The Woman's International Auxiliary to Typographical Union, here assembled in fifteenth annual session, sends greetings to the International Typographical Union at its sixty-third annual convention, and wishes it Godspeed and continued prosperity in all its undertakings now and in years to come. Fraternally,

MRS. JESSE W. ARMISTEAD,
First-Vice-President;
MRS. R. J. LOWTHER,
Secretary-Treasurer.

DES MOINES, IOWA, August 10, 1917.

To President M. G. Scott, Officers and Delegates to the International Convention of Typographical Union, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

GENTLEMEN—I am very glad indeed to convey to you all the greetings and best wishes of The Homestead Company, of Des Moines, Iowa. Thanks to the good offices of President Scott and others, The Homestead Company, during the last year, has unionized all of its various departments, including those of job printing, binding, electrotyping, steel and copper engraving. There are over thirty employed in our typographical department alone who are engaged in the publication of our weekly issue of nearly 400,000 farm papers, and in other printing work. I believe that ours is the only plant in the city of Des Moines in which every department has a contract. I am pleased to say that President Scott expressed surprise at finding so little difference between the scale of wages we were already paying and the regular union scale. In fact, I believe that in some instances we were paying considerably above the union scale. I am also glad to say that the results of unionizing our plant have been very satisfactory and our relations with the union very pleasant indeed. I have always admired the typographical union and been in sympathy with its aims and purposes. I consider it one of the best examples of the beneficent results of organized labor in the country. I am pleased to have my business associate, George Krukenmeier, president of the Des Moines Trades and Labor Assembly, at your meeting. Under his leadership I believe that the problems of labor and capital are being fairly and satisfactorily solved in Iowa's capital city, with the best results for all concerned. Through him I want to express my hope that your gathering may be a highly pleasant and profitable one to you all and may do much to make the coming year the best one in the history of the typographical union.

JAMES M. PIERCE,
President of The Homestead Company, Des Moines, Iowa.

Delegate Merritt (Houston) inquired if the secretary-treasurer had received a telegram from Walter Nail.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays stated he had not received the message in question.

Delegate Merritt (Houston) then presented the following copy of Mr. Nail's message:

HOUSTON, TEXAS, August 12, 1917.

W. E. Merritt, Plaza Hotel, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

May your deliberations be wise and the laws enacted at this, the sixty-third convention of the International Typographical Union, be for the benefit of the membership and may the appeals before the convention be settled in a fair and impartial manner by a committee selected by the delegates themselves. Best wishes and regards to friends,

WALTER NAIL.

President Scott introduced John M. Brophy, vice-president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, who said:

MR. CHAIRMAN, OFFICERS AND DELEGATES OF THE SIXTY-THIRD CONVENTION—It is certainly a pleasure to be designated to attend your convention, and I bring to you a message written by our president, Mr. Berry, who is very much put out because he could not be in attendance at this convention. I will proceed to read the expressions of the international president in behalf of the International Pressmen's Union to your convention.

The message from Mr. Berry to the convention was as follows:

It is with great disappointment that I find myself unable to attend the convention of the International Typographical Union which is being held this year in the city wherein the wonderful institutions erected in behalf of humanity are situated. Through Vice-President Brophy, however, I extend to your delegates and through them to the membership of your International Union felicitations and genuine well-wishes for the success of the International Typographical Union in its struggle for the improvement in conditions for the compositors of North America.

At your convention in Baltimore, where I had the honor and the privilege of addressing you, I urged upon you the great importance of a closer relationship founded upon a definite program that would be in the interest of all of the printing trades artisans of America and the great printing industry of which we are a part. At that time we little conceived that the United States would be brought into conflict with the imperial German government, but the unexpected has happened, and we find our membership in the United States today confronted with the same world's struggle as at that time confronted our membership in the Dominion of Canada. The difference in the present situation is that a greater and more gigantic struggle is in evidence. The United States of America has enacted a selective conscription law which will take from our industry in common with others many of our members; indeed, many of them have already responded to the colors in advance of the application of the conscription measure in the United States government. Previous to the conscription law becoming effective, over 2,000 members of our organization volunteered and are now rendering service to their country. Several hundred of our Canadian members had previous to that time volunteered their services to the Canadian government. The effect of the withdrawal of those of our members in Canada and in the United States must be immediately obvious to your convention and to the students of our great industry. If I be not mistaken, the half has not yet been told, and there will be many thousand printing trades unionists engaged in the world's conflict ere it has been brought to a termination.

The printing trades unions will suffer from the loss of its members, and in this loss the great industry in which we are engaged will suffer likewise. Only the ending of the war will prevent our organizations of the printing industry from being confronted with the most extraordinary and difficult period in the history of their existence. The printing trades unions occupy a position not calculated as being essential in the physical maintenance of the governments into which our jurisdictions extend. Selective conscription, therefore, will be applied into channels that have the least vital effect upon the government's demands. Therefore we must assume that the printing trades unions engaged in an industry of a miscellaneous character will be among the several most vitally affected, and for this reason as an additional cause, I look with extreme regret upon the fact that the five international printing trades unions are still apart from each other in so far as it has to do with the real material things from which the rank and file and the industry are to gain the greatest degree of satisfaction.

At your convention in Baltimore we were brought face to face with the practicability of a federation of international unions engaged in a given industry. At the time of your convention's deliberations in Baltimore the brotherhood of trainmen was negotiating in the White House at Washington to contract for the universal eight-hour day. The result since then is known to the delegates to this convention; suffice to say that without the expenditure of a penny in industrial conflict, and without the stoppage of industry for a second, the brotherhood of trainmen was able to negotiate, to settle and to finally consummate in the courts and out of the courts a universal movement that has given them an eight-hour workday. The contrast must be immediately apparent to you when we recall the struggles engaged in by the printing trades unions. If I am not mistaken your International Union expended approximately $5,000,000 in establishing the eight-hour workday, and lost many hundreds of printing establishments that have not yet been reclaimed for your union. The International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union spent approximately $2,000,000, and lost many printing houses that have not yet been reclaimed. The bookbinders expended a proportionate amount and the results are in general the same as those found in the experience of your organization and of the pressmen and assistants of America. The stereotypers and the photo-engravers, while not having been forced into national conflict, have nevertheless expended much for a similar move. It can therefore be conservatively estimated that eight to ten million dollars have been expended by the five international printing trades unions in the establishment of their universal eight-hour workday, due in the main to their individual activities, and to their individual campaigns. The brotherhood of trainmen secured the same results without loss of a position or the expenditure of a dollar. Certainly no one will gainsay that the printing trades unions are not as intelligent as the trainmen, and indeed it must be accepted that the skill necessary in the production of printing is at least equal to that required in the operation of a locomotive or in the care of a train, and yet the comparison is for us to observe.

The five international printing trades unions are now confronted with a struggle for maintenance, confronted with a struggle for the preservation, of the industry. We need each other more than ever; the printing industry needs joint co-operation between employer and employe more than ever. It is little to our credit for us to say that we as an individual union have established a means of relationship that will care for our respective branch of the trade. There enter into the industry of printing five elements, each of which are essential to the well-being and the existence of the industry. An arrangement by which one organization may feel that its members are protected in this time of chaos falls of its own weight for reason that without the proper protection for other trades of the industry, it will suffer. Composition is without value unless it can be printed. Printing is without value unless it can be bound into books and properly assembled for sale. Composition can not be complete without it embodies its engravings. Printing can not be obtained unless the forms are made into stereotype or electrotype plates, so the theory that any one of the printing trades unions may put forth that the establishment of their trade upon a stable base gives guarantee for permanency of the industry and the abridgment of its difficulties is ridiculous and casts reflection upon our intelligence. The printing trades unions owe something to themselves and owe much to the printing industry, and the present situation can best be met in the interest of the industry and those engaged in it by co-operation between the printing trades unions as a federation and the employing printers of this country working to a common goal.

The employers of America who have given concern to the present and future of the industry are not averse to a federation of the printing trades unions. A great number of employers who realize the difficulties of negotiation in the past believe that best results can be obtained by dealing with the five printing trades unions through a system of federation. The stability of labor cost, the assurance of genuine co-operation, the elimination of destructive, cut-throat competition can best be assured through a system of federation, working with the employers of this country. We must accept the existence of a community of interest in the industry and work to the end of making the industry prosperous in the interest of all. The printing trades unions owe as much in the promotion of the industry to a point of financial success as do the employers themselves. If, then, individual action fails, collective action must be applied, and any organization that objects and opposes federation among the printing trades unions for offensive, defensive and co-operative practices, ignores the very fundamental principle embodied in the organized labor movement. The assembling of units of a trade constitutes the basis of our work; this being true, it must follow that the assembling of organizations of units must be equally as necessary and as effective.

Several propositions have been presented for federation. The writer had the honor and the privilege of submitting to the five international unions a full and complete program for the establishment of an international federation of the five printing trades unions. The details of it have been accepted by the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, by the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers, by the International Photo-Engravers and by the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union. The principle, in so far as federation is concerned, has been accepted by your officials, but the International Typographical Union has declined to accept the entire program, objecting to one feature of it, that being the financial feature. It has been the opinion of the majority of the printing trades unions that a financial system should be applied; that we should collect from our membership a standard per capita to be used in the establishment and maintenance of a fund in the interest of federation. Ten cents per member per month was suggested and was agreeable to the printing trades unions with the exception of the International Typographical Union. Permit me to say that the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union has in a constitutional way provided for the assembling of ten cents per member for the purpose in question, and we now hold ourselves ready to apply ten cents per month per member to the fund in the interest of federation. It has been claimed in this regard that such a financial arrangement would be detrimental to the large unions. Large unions, I presume, are represented by the International Typographical Union and the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union. I am led to believe that your organization now has a membership of about 60,000 members. The International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union has a membership of 40,000. Our organization believes that the only way to meet this situation justly is to recognize the five printing trades organizations as units essential to the business. We believe that the importance of the bookbinders, of the stereotypers, and of the photoengravers to the existence of the printing industry is as great as that of the pressmen or the compositors, and in the assembling of moneys for this purpose every printing trades artisan, whether he be a member of a small organization or a member of the larger organizations, should be called upon to make the same per capita payments to the cause that we have in mind.

It has been said that no practical proposition has been presented. Your convention should be reminded of the fact that this is not correct; that the four printing trades unions have presented a practical proposition and the only disagreement has been over the question of dollars and cents. Since this proposition was presented, we have talked much of federation, but we have disregarded the subject in so far as a finality is concerned. Some of the organizations have entered into long-term contracts which in the opinion of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union is detrimental to the cause and prohibits its early consummation on the part of the five international printing trades unions.

As a representative of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, and acting upon the suggestion of the board of directors of our union, we believe that there should be some decisive action taken by the convention of the International Typographical Union to determine as to what their attitude is to be upon this subject. It is not the desire of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union to force consideration of this subject or to continue its agitation if the International Typographical Union is not desirous of considering the subject from a point of view of determining it as a finality. We believe, therefore, that your convention should say: "We are for federation" or "we are against it," and if for it, say to what extent you will go, and if then the other printing trades unions are unwilling to meet your proposition, and you unwilling to meet their proposition, we can then issue to the membership of our respective unions a definite statement as to our inability to agree. Our board believes, however, that sufficient time has elapsed for the consideration of this subject, and while recognizing it as a big subject, yet we believe that four or five years is sufficient time to pass upon this important matter, and we are especially convinced that a delay of meetings for its consideration covering as it has now nearly two years, indicates that it is not the bigness of the subject causing the delay in consummating the plan, but a degree of objection to its consummation.

Our board is in hopes, therefore, that we will be frank with each other to the end that if we do not desire federation that then we can proceed to act with renewed vigor in our individual capacities. The International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union has held itself aloof from any entanglement that might prevent the consummation of a federated agreement. We are not sorry or disappointed over the results of our action. We have no failures to chalk up against our organization. We are satisfied with the progress that we have made as an individual union, and we believe that for the good of the industry and for the general good of the five printing trades unions federation should be established. I repeat, however, that if it is not desired upon the part of the International Typographical Union, it should be so stated to the end that the subject might be properly brought to a conclusion. It is the hope, therefore, of our board of directors that your convention will direct its officials to make known to our organization at least its conclusions and purposes upon this subject-matter, and we so request such consideration.

In behalf of the pressmen and assistants of North America we congratulate your convention upon its progress and its success. We join with you in the most kindly feeling in the celebration of your annual gathering upon the spot that has done so much for the compositors of America. Those press men who were at one time members of the International Typographical Union and who contributed to the establishment of the great institution at Colorado Springs glory in the progress and the improvements that you have made for the care of your sick and incapacitated. We extend to you, therefore, our congratulations, and with it the message that in the Appalachian mountains the pressmen and assistants of America are likewise fulfilling a great obligation that we feel due to our afflicted brothers in the maintenance of a great sanatorium for consumption, a home for superannuation, and we likewise operate a school in graphic arts. We are glad to say that those institutions are complete, are in operation and have already given splendid results to those unfortunates who have been compelled to attend the institutions that represent the effort and the expenditures that we have made. We join you in this work, and we hope that the example that is exemplified in your Colorado institution will reflect encouragement and give incentive to other organizations of all trades in this and other countries to the point of giving greater consideration to the member who falls by the wayside and needs the helping hand of the stronger member. I wish your convention great success in its deliberations, and I trust that its actions will be conducive to good, not only for the compositors of America, but for the printing trades unions as a whole, and for the great organized labor movement as exemplified in the American Federation of Labor and likewise for the great industry in which we are engaged and upon which we are dependent.

The following letter was read:

BROOKLYN, N. Y., August 9, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR MR. SCOTT—I sincerely regret my inability to attend your convention to be held at Colorado Springs, Colo., beginning August 13, next.

I have, however, requested our secretary-treasurer, Charles A. Sumner, to attend and address your convention as a representative of this union and as my proxy.

Wishing your convention every possible success, I remain with personal regards and best wishes, sincerely and fraternally yours, JAMES J. FREEL.

President Scott then introduced Charles A. Sumner, secretary-treasurer of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union.

Mr. Sumner addressed the convention as follows:

DELEGATES TO THE INTERNATIONAL TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION CONVENTION—It is a great pleasure for me to be with you as the representative of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union. I regret, of course, the inability of our president to be here in person, and as I asked him what he should say and he said he had nothing special to convey to you, I presume about the only thing that I will be expected to say is that we bring you most cordial greetings. This is not the first time I have been in one of your conventions, as I had the honor to represent my local union in the olden days at three different conventions of the International Typographical Union—in 1898, 1899 and 1900. I was somewhat younger then and the training and experience I received from the attendance of those conventions I think the most valuable of any I received during the progress of my years.

If imitation is the sincerest flattery, I am sure the care with which we watch the progress of the International Typographical Union and proceed to follow it, is an indication of the appreciation we have for your splendid organization.

In the many years we were associated with you as part of you, and since we have become an independent organization, I can recall no time when there has been the least misunderstanding or friction between us. Our relations have been so pleasant and cordial, and we have co-operated in so many ways and been so closely associated with you in all these years, that it seems unnecessary for me to say anything by way of appreciation of what you are or to say anything special with regard to our own organization. All I feel I need to say is that we trust and feel assured that your progress is going to be such as it has been in the past, that you are going to be the great pioneer in the labor movement, and that we will try to keep in touch with you and associate with you and help in the great work.

I will close by saying again that we extend to you the cordial fraternal greetings of our International union.

President Scott then presented to the convention Doctor Rutledge, of the Woodmen's sanatorium, saying:

Because our convention is held in Colorado Springs and because of the fact that we have an institution of which we are proud, it is not improper that I introduce to the delegates a representative of a great practical and benevolent organization. It is not exactly a trade union, but it is engaged in work which is very similar to ours. I therefore take pleasure in introducing to you Doctor Rutledge, of the Woodmen's sanatorium.

Doctor Rutledge spoke as follows:

I would not be up here if it were not for the fact that I wanted to see what these fellows were drinking.

Brothers, fellows, I don't know what to call you. It is a great pleasure for me to be here this afternoon and look into your faces and meet the membership that represents the great brotherhood of the International Typographical Union. For years I have been out here, and I have met your hard-working, intelligent and efficient members of the board of trustees. I have often wondered how it was that this gathering always selected such able and capable men to preside over the destiny of your organization, but since coming here and looking into your faces I can readily see the answer, and that is that you haven't anything else to choose from but that class of men. All of us native sons of Colorado have a speech that we always deliver at the opening of any convention. I suppose these speeches were delivered to you this morning, but they are not appropriate this afternoon, when it rains. I am an authority on unusual weather; I am always striking it wherever I go. I went out to southern California and was there a month last spring. They had a gray, cold July; I was out there a month and they told me it was unusual weather. I have been to Florida one week after they had a frost, and a man who wanted to sell an orange plantation would say that was the only frost they had ever had in the state. I have been in Minnesota and Arkansas and nearly smothered while I was enjoying a vacation in some of their summer resorts. I have been riding across the desert plains of Kansas and Nebraska and had to lick the porter pretty near to keep me from freezing to death. I know what unusual weather is. I will say confidentially that this is not an unusual day in Colorado. The only thing unusual about it is that it generally rains when we don't want it to, and hardly ever when we do want it to.

But, brothers, I am glad that you are here. I am glad to be here and testify to the wise administration of the Home here that is in charge of your executive officers. I read last evening of the great battle you had fought, how you had won the eight-hour day law, and were all passing it and all behind it. As soon as I read it the thought came to me that if Mr. and Mrs. Daley ever put in a bill for overtime according to the usual scale, you will think Scott and Hays have made an assessment for strike purposes. But they do not look at this just for the dollars and cents; there are some things in this world that can not be measured with a dollar bill, and the greatest incentive to the greatest work they are doing up there for humanity is the pleasure in the satisfaction that comes to them in the knowledge that they are relieving the suffering and alleviating the sickness and distress of their fellow beings. That is a great work that you are doing up there, and I want to simply say in closing that I bid you welcome to Colorado. You probably have noticed that you are welcome to the city of Colorado Springs. I always think these addresses of welcome should be delivered along the last of the week. During the first of the week you always know you are welcome, but after a while you wonder whether they really mean it or not.

We have a beautiful city here; the mayor no doubt told you about it. I remember a short time ago a gentleman from the south telling of the wonders of Dallas, Texas, and he told me what a great city that was, what wonderful opportunities there were there for making money. I stood for that all right. Then he told me what a bum town Denver was, that there was the least there of any city he was ever in. I stood for that because I had no interests in Denver. He asked me what we had in Colorado Springs. I said, "I don't know from your ideas that we have anything; you seem to be taken with the idea that a city is a place to make money in; we native sons of Colorado can not warm up to that idea of working for money; when we want any money we go up in the mountains and work off a few chips of rock and send them to the mint and tell them how much we want, and we get it, and then we have a city so we can spend it." You probably noticed some people are willing to take your money already.

In conclusion, neighbors and brothers, I want to invite you all down to the Woodmen's sanatorium. The doors there are always open. I do not care what institution you belong to or what society you may be affiliated with, any society or order that believes in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, and is for the promotion of the American home, is my brother, and I extend to him the right hand of fellowship. I invite you to come out there; we have the greatest institution in the world except the Union Printers Home. Every section of the country has its peculiar kinds of hospitalities, the east, the central part, the south and the west. We in the mountains have our kind, too. We are willing to give you anything we have. Yesterday afternoon some people were automobiling and some one said, "Wouldn't it be a great thing if we had Pikes Peak in our community." I said, "If you want it, take it home with you; we don't want it. We have been wanting the government to build a national park for a great many years and they refuse to do it because the peak is in the way, so take it."

Our brand of hospitality is best shown, I think, in the inscription above an old castle, where every visitor who enters can see it as they pass out, and these, as I remember them, are the words:

"Welcome! We bid thee enter and abide and sup with we. And when thou hast refreshed thyself we bid thee go, just so that thou canst come again, and yet again and refresh thyself with we."

Delegate Hunt (Fresno) called the attention of the delegates to the boxes of raisins on their desks. He explained that these raisins were an annual event of the convention and that each delegate from his union for several years had been privileged to present raisins to the convention. Mr. Hunt said he hoped the delegates would enjoy the raisins and eat more of them hereafter.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON LAWS.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 13, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Your committee on laws respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Proposition No. 1—By Delegate Maher (New York):

Amend section 1, article ii, by-laws: "International Elections," to read:

In the December or January, or both, issues of The Typographical Journal.

Digitized by Google

Amend section 6 to read as follows:

Section 6. Elections shall be held on the fourth Wednesday in May, subordinate unions to regulate the place and manner of voting; provided, that members of local unions must personally and secretly cast their own ballots.

Amend sections 7 and 8 to read as follows:

Section 7. The president and secretary of each subordinate union is hereby required, within forty-eight hours after close of the poll, to transmit to the secretary-treasurer a statement showing the total number of votes cast and the number of votes cast for each and every candidate, together with the number of void, mutilated and blank ballots.

Section 8. These returns shall be carefully filed and preserved by the secretary-treasurer, and at 12 M. (noon) on June 7 delivered to the board of electors, which shall be composed of three members of the local union selected by the presidential candidates. In the event of there being but one candidate for president, then the candidates for the secretaryship shall name the other two members of the board, and said board shall immediately proceed (balance of section unchanged).

Add new section to read as follows:

Section —. The secretary or board of election of each local union must keep a record of the number of ballots received, the number used, and the number of unused ballots returned. All ballots or stubs used or unused must be preserved under seal until ninety days after election unless called for in the event of a contest.

Add new section to read:

CONTESTS—HOW INAUGURATED—WHO SHALL HEAR AND DETERMINE.

Section —. Any candidate desiring to contest the election returns as presented by the board of elections shall give notice to the secretary-treasurer of the International Union within thirty days after the publication of the report of said board. The president of the International Union (or in case the president is directly interested in the contest, the first vice-president in his stead) shall immediately appoint a special committee of five members of the local union of the city in which the headquarters is situated, a majority of whom shall be satisfactory to the contestant and none of whom shall have been members of the board of elections, to hear and determine the contest. In case more than one candidate files notice of contest, a majority of said committee shall be approved by all the contestants. Within ten days after the appointment and approval of said committee of contest, the contestant or contestants shall file with the committee a statement of the reason for such contest and the name and number of the local union whose vote is questioned and all other essential matter pertaining to said contest.

The committee shall determine on the preliminary statement provided for in the preceding section if sufficient grounds exist for an investigation, and if they so decide the committee shall proceed to a full investigation of all matters pertaining to said investigation. They shall have power to call for the original ballots of any union and the report of the local canvassing board, and may require statements to be made under oath as to any matter pertaining thereto, and may summon witnesses to appear before them in the headquarters city, or may proceed to any city where the business before them will be facilitated thereby. They shall make a report to the officers of the International Typographical Union of their findings, which shall be final, subject to appeal to the International Union, which appeal may be presented to the next following convention if notice of intention to so appeal is given by the appellant and all interested parties five days before the first meeting day of said convention.

The expenses of said contest shall be borne by the party or parties initiating the contest, should he or they fail to establish that there were substantial irregularities or inaccuracies in the local or International returns, and in case the contestant or contestants prove such inaccuracies or irregularities, the expense shall be borne by the local union or the International Union, as the contest committee shall determine.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 2—By Delegate Maher (New York):

Amend section 5, article ii, by-laws, to read:

Section 5. The secretary-treasurer shall, as soon as possible after the foregoing provisions have been complied with, prepare and have printed the names of all candidates, arranged according to the number of nominations received (when a tie occurs the name to be drawn by lot), together with the name and number of the union of which they are members; this ballot shall bear the official seal of this union, and shall have a numbered, perforated, detachable stub and be so constructed that a voter can with ease designate his choice by making a cross (X) opposite the names of those for whom he wishes to record his vote; he shall supply subordinate unions, free of cost, with a sufficient quantity of such ballots before May 1. No ballots shall be used at such elections except those issued by the officers of the International Union.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Maher (New York) stated the delegates of his union were instructed by referendum vote to vote for the proposition.

The report of the committee was adopted.

The New York delegation asked to be recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 3—By Delegate Maher (New York):

Amend section 1, article vii, by-laws, to read:

Section 1. THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL shall be published once a month and shall contain, in addition to the reports and other matter required by law to be published, the reports of the International and Home audits; official orders, charters granted, charters suspended, and the causes; a list of names and addresses of corresponding or financial secretaries of subordinate unions; a list of deceased members with register numbers; state of trade; advertisements meeting the approval of the executive council; all reports (including detailed statement of expenditures) and proceedings of the officers and members of the corporation of the Union Printers Home; and such other matters as may be of interest and importance to the craft generally.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 4—By Delegate Gookin (Roanoke):

Amend section 1, article viii, constitution, as follows:

ARTICLE VIII.—SALARIES AND EXPENSES.

Section 1. The salary of the president, vice-presidents and secretary-treasurer, in full for the services rendered by each of said officers during the term of office, shall be the sums following: For the president, for services rendered as president of the International Typographical Union and as president of the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home, $3,750 per annum; first vice-president, $175 and traveling expenses to and from the conventions of the International Typographical Union; second vice-president, $550 per annum; mailer vice-president, $350 per annum; and secretary-treasurer, for services rendered as secretary-treasurer of the International Typographical Union and as secretary-treasurer of the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home, $3,750 per annum.

Committee offers the following substitute:

ARTICLE VIII.—SALARIES AND EXPENSES.

Section 1. The salary of the president, vice-presidents and secretary-treasurer, in full for the services rendered by each of said officers during the term of office, shall be the sums following: For the president, for services rendered as president of the International Typographical Union and as president of the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home, $4,000 per annum from January 1, 1918, to December 31, 1918; $4,500 per annum from January 1, 1919, to December 31, 1919; $5,000 per annum thereafter. First vice-president, $150 and traveling expenses to and from the conventions of the International Typographical Union; second vice-president, $500 per annum; mailer vice-president, $300 per annum; and secretary-treasurer, for services rendered as secretary-treasurer of the International Typographical Union and as secretary-treasurer of the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home, $4,000 per annum from January 1, 1918, to December 31, 1918; $4,500 per annum from January 1, 1919, to December 31, 1919; $5,000 per annum thereafter.

Delegate Gookin (Roanoke) thanked the committee for offering a substitute for his proposition instead of reporting it unfavorably. He stated that he doubted if the figures of the committee would meet the approval of the membership and favored his proposition as the best one to present at this time.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee), of the committee on laws, compared the salaries of the officers of the International Typographical Union with those of the officers of other organizations and urged the adoption of the substitute of the committee.

Delegate Connolly (Syracuse) stated he had offered a proposition to increase the salary of the secretary-treasurer, but it had not come before the convention. He favored the substitute of the committee.

Delegates Kenny (Peoria), Mitchell (Chicago) and Smith (Butte) opposed the substitute offered by the committee.

Delegate Smith (Butte) moved that the proposition be referred back to the laws committee and considered later in the session.

The motion was lost.

Delegates Johnson (San Francisco), Cole (Toledo), Johns (New York), Woody (Richmond), Hickman (Louisville), Walden (Jefferson City), Steidley (Muskogee), Cox (Albany), Zander (Chicago), Rifenberick (Albany), Keener (Tucson) and Higgins (Syracuse) favored the substitute of the committee.

Delegate Reeves (Duluth) said he favored a salary of $5,000 per year for the International Typographical Union officers, but did not believe the substitute of the committee would be approved by the referendum. He favored the original proposition.

Delegate Stokes (Baltimore) favored a salary of $5,000 per year for the officers.

Delegate Marshall (Chicago) urged that the salaries of the officers be made $5,000 per year and said he would vote for it.

Delegate Spurgeon (Indianapolis) favored the report of the committee and said he thought the salary of the first vice-president should also be increased.

The previous question was ordered.

President Scott said if he was a delegate he would vote against both propositions because neither, judging by the experience of the past, would be approved by the referendum.

The substitute of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 5—By Delegate Gookin (Roanoke):

Amend section 10, article ix, constitution, to read:

Section 10. The executive council of the International Typographical Union is authorized to expend such sums of money from the general fund of the organization as may be necessary to the conduct of the business of the International, such as payment for services of employes and representatives, strike benefits and special assistance when necessary, officers' and organizers' expenses, printing, publicity campaigns, convention expenses, as provided in the constitution, by-laws, general laws, convention laws, Typographia Amalgamation and the agreement creating the International Allied Printing Trades Association as printed in the book of laws. Provided, that no convention or meeting, nor any official or member of the International Typographical Union of North America shall have power to appropriate or use any moneys or securities in the treasury of this union, nor property or collateral in its possession or custody, for the purpose of bestowing upon any person or number of persons any gift of intrinsic value, granting any gratuity, or as payment for any intangible service rendered or claimed to have been rendered unless expressly authorized by referendum vote.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Gookin (Roanoke) said he could not understand the report of the committee and urged the adoption of his proposition.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws said the committee could see no reason for ordering a referendum vote to correct the wording of the section.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 6—By Delegate Gookin (Roanoke):

Amend sections 16 and 17, article v, by-laws, to read:

Section 16. Any member who has been suspended from membership and subsequently reinstated, in accordance with the laws of the International Typographical Union, shall not be entitled to any benefit if death occurs within three months after such reinstatement.

Section 17. No mortuary benefit claim shall be allowed unless the deceased was possessed of a current working card at the time of death, nor shall a mortuary benefit claim be allowed if, at the time of death, the union of which deceased was a member was in arrears for per capita tax to the International Typographical Union unless and until said delinquent union meets its obligations to the International by paying up all arrearages.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Gookin (Roanoke) favored the proposition.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws, explained the report of the committee.

Delegate Hoban (Cleveland) favored the report of the committee.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays called attention to section 16 and said Mr. Gookin's amendment struck out the fifty-year clause therein and would make the International Union liable for a $400 benefit on members who join the organization late in life.

He urged the adoption of the report of the committee.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 7—By Delegate Gookin (Roanoke):

Amend section 2, article ii, by-laws, to read:

Section 2. Subordinate unions may nominate at the regular meeting in February one candidate for each elective office. Nominations shall be made by ballot and the names of all members who have announced their candidacy as is provided in the preceding section shall appear thereon. Candidates for offices who receive the highest number of votes shall be recorded as having received the endorsement of the union. It shall be the duty of one of the secretaries of each subordinate union taking action to immediately notify the secretary-treasurer, who is directed to close nominations at 12 M. (noon) on March 8, those received after that time to be disregarded; the secretary-treasurer shall publish in the April issue of THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL a list of nominees and nominations, declaring the five candidates for each office who have been supported by the largest number of unions as nominees for the offices for which they were respectively named; Provided, That candidates for the office of president and secretary-treasurer shall have at least fifty endorsers, and all other candidates, except those for offices allotted to the allied crafts, shall have at least twenty endorsers. Candidates for offices allotted to the allied crafts shall have at least five endorsers.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Gookin (Roanoke) urged the adoption of his proposition.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 8—By Delegate Gookin (Roanoke):

Amend section 13, article ii, by-laws, as follows:

Section 13. Members shall be allowed to vote but once at an election of International officials; Provided, That if those charged with the conduct of the election by a subordinate union, or any of them, have reason to believe that a member has voted under the jurisdiction of a sister union, or any member challenges his right to vote on account of belief that he has exercised that right previously, he shall be permitted to vote on signing the following: "I hereby declare on my honor that I have not voted for International officers at this election, and I make this declaration with a full knowledge of the fact that misrepresentation renders me liable to discipline."

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Gookin (Roanoke) urged non-concurrence in the report of the committee and the adoption of his proposition.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws said the amendment of Mr. Gookin opened the way for indiscriminate challenging of votes. He said the present law was sufficient.

Delegate Smith (Butte) favored the report of the committee, and said an "anti" could never be elected to office by amending the law, and declared the only way to elect an "anti" was to get the votes.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegate Gottlob (Newark) moved that the convention, when it adjourns, stand adjourned until 9:30 A. M. on Wednesday.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

The convention then adjourned until 9:30 A. M., Wednesday.

SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

The executive council submits herewith the following report of a meeting of the International Board of Arbitration held in Indianapolis, July 23, 24 and 25:

The International Board of Arbitration of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the International Typographical Union met at 10 A. M. on July 23, 1917, in the office of Chairman Kellogg, of the special standing committee, in Indianapolis, Ind.

There were present representing the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, H. N. Kellogg, Indianapolis, Ind.; C. H. Rembold, Cincinnati, Ohio, and David B. Plum, Troy, N. Y.

There were present representing the International Typographical Union President Marsden G. Scott, Vice-President W. W. Barrett and Vice-President Hugo Miller.

Secretary J. W. Hays being absent on account of illness, Vice-President Barrett was elected acting secretary of the board.

Vice-President Charles N. Smith, of the International Typographical Union, was present during the hearing of the various cases.

JULY 23, 1917.

The first matter to come before the board was the Chicago newspaper scale. Negotiations looking to a new contract and scale of prices had been carried on between the two local parties, the Chicago local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and Chicago Typographical Union No. 16, for a period of two years and seven months, and failing to reach an agreement Chairman Kellogg and President Scott were asked to decide whether amendments to the agreement in effect or differences regarding the terms of a new agreement were arbitrable without the consent of both parties to this existing contract. These officials failing to reach an agreement, the matter was referred to the International Board under the provisions of the Code of Procedure of the Arbitration Agreement.

In submitting the proposition to the International Board of Arbitration, Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 contended that contract provisions could not be submitted to arbitration except with the consent of the local parties, and that therefore as Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 objected, the only parts of the local agreement that could be arbitrated were those sections which referred to wages, hours and working conditions. The Chicago local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association took the opposite view of the matter, contending that both the contract and scale were subjects for arbitration.

The Chicago local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association was represented before the board by Henry N. Cary.

Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 was represented before the board by President John A. Foster, W. A. Klinger, Otto E. Rossner, R. H. Marshall and John A. English.

Mr. Cary opened the discussion for the Chicago publishers, reply being made by Mr. Klinger, representing No. 16. Rebuttal and surrebuttal arguments were made.

At 12 o'clock noon the board went into executive session. At 12:15 P. M. the board adjourned to meet at 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The International Board of Arbitration met at 2 P. M. as per adjournment, all members being present.

Discussion of the Chicago contract case was resumed. The board being unable to arrive at a conclusion on this case it was passed.

Consideration was then given to a case from Chicago involving "machine work on time basis." In this issue Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 contended that under a previous decision of the International Board of Arbitration all men employed on machines on time work (except as provided under section 4 of the scale of prices) should receive pay at the rate of their average.

The publishers being the moving parties, Mr. Cary presented the case for the Chicago local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and Mr. Marshall for Chicago Typographical Union No. 16. A general discussion of the matter was then entered into, after which the board went into executive session. This case was passed.

The International Board of Arbitration then took under consideration another case from Chicago. This case involved the reproduction of matter. The dispute arose through the action of the Chicago Journal in issuing instructions to the foreman not to reproduce certain matter which had been reproduced up to the time of putting the said order into effect, Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 claiming that this section constituted a violation of the provisions of the scale of prices and the local agreement.

The publishers being the moving parties in the case, Mr. Cary presented argument for Chicago local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and reply was made by Mr. Marshall for Chicago Typographical Union No. 16.

At 6 P. M. the board adjourned to meet at 10 A. M., Tuesday, July 24, 1917.

JULY 24, 1917.

The International Board of Arbitration met at 10 A. M. as per adjournment, with all members present.

The first matter coming before the board at this session was an appeal by St. Louis Typographical Union No. 8 from the decision of a local board of arbitration in a discharge case.

President Charles Hertenstein appeared before the board for St. Louis Typographical Union No. 8.

B. E. Bradley appeared before the board for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

After hearing the arguments on this appeal the board rendered the following decision:

This case is an appeal from a unanimous decision by a local board of arbitration, as follows:

On June 9, 1917, there appeared before the undersigned arbitration board, duly selected in accordance with the arbitration agreement between the International Typographical Union and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, Hugh I. McSkimming, foreman of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch composing room, and Albert Sexton, discharged employe, and former chairman of the Post-Dispatch composing-room chapel, both being represented by counsel.

The hearing was an appeal against the discharge of said Sexton by said McSkimming.

After hearing all the evidence presented by both sides an executive session was held, which was attended by Dr. Leon Harrison, the fifth member of the arbitration board, upon his request and by agreement, and the undersigned voted that the preponderance of evidence was strongly in favor of said Hugh I. McSkimming, and his action in discharging said Albert Sexton was approved. Doctor Harrison requested that he be allowed to concur in the findings of the arbitrators and consent was granted.

The appeal is dismissed and the decision of the local board is sustained.

The board then resumed consideration of the Chicago reproduction case.

At 12:30 o'clock (noon) the board adjourned to meet at 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The International Board of Arbitration met at 2 P. M. as per adjournment, with all members present.

After further consideration of the Chicago reproduction case the following decision was made:

It is the decision of the board that the scale of prices does not permit the use of matrices of local advertisements originally set and used in one newspaper office to be used in another newspaper office in Chicago without reproduction. The contention of the union is sustained. The advertisements submitted are strictly local and it is the decision of that board that section 16 of the scale of prices requires the reproduction of matrices of these advertisements if used in other newspapers parties to the contract.

The board then gave consideration to the Chicago case involving machine work on a time basis and rendered the following decision:

In this case the union attempts to construe a previous decision made by the International Board as requiring the publishers to discontinue the employment of machine operators at the scale rate for time work. In the decision referred to the board called attention to the fact that the union had permitted section 8 to govern the employment of machine operators on machines setting advertisements, and that other operators were employed at the hourly rates provided in section 8. Continuing the board said:

It is apparent that these practices were established through the consent of the union, and since the date fixed for the expiration of the scale has passed the International Board will not make a decision upon which machine operators who have been employed on a time basis may set up claims for pay at a bonus rate.

The previous decision of the board was reaffirmed.

Consideration was then given to the following motion, made by President Scott:

That section 6 of the Code of Procedure of the Arbitration Agreement be amended by striking out the words "one such representative of each contending party to be free from personal connection with or direct interest in any newspaper or any labor union," so that the section will read as follows:

Sec. 6. After the questions to be arbitrated have been determined, a local board of arbitration must be formed, composed of residents of the locality in which the controversy arises, two members thereof to be named by each side. The board as thus constituted shall select a secretary from among its members. The four members of the board shall then choose an additional member, who shall be a disinterested party and shall act as chairman of the board. If the chairman of the local board shall not have been selected within thirty (30) days after the questions to be arbitrated have been determined, he shall be named by the chairman of the special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the president of the International Typographical Union, or their proxies, upon the request of either of the interested parties. The two officials named, or their proxies, may for this purpose visit the locality if they deem it necessary. Any expense thus incurred shall be defrayed equally by the parties to the controversy. The chairman of the local board shall preside, put motions, etc., and shall be entitled to vote on all propositions which may properly come before the board in open session. He shall declare a motion carried only when at least three of the arbitrators shall have voted affirmatively thereon. At the conclusion of the hearing the chairman shall retire and the other members of the board shall go into executive session and immediately take up a consideration of the issues involved. If in executive session a tie vote occurs on any proposition, or if there are any differences, questions or propositions which do not receive the votes of three of the four original members of the board, the chairman shall be called in to cast the deciding votes on all unsettled questions or propositions.

Two of the regular members of the special standing committee who had signed the original agreement were not in attendance at this meeting. Chairman Kellogg stated that their votes would be necessary. It was then decided that the votes of these two members (Charles H. Taylor, jr., and W. S. Jones) would be taken by mail and the result announced later.

An appeal by the St. Paul Dispatch Printing Company from a decision of a local board of arbitration in a line measurement case was then given consideration. This dispute originally arose when the St. Paul Dispatch Printing Company reduced the width of the columns of its papers, St. Paul Typographical Union No. 30 contending that payment for type set on machines should be based on the length of line in use when the scale was made. In this contention the union was sustained by the local board of arbitration.

Chairman Kellogg stated that in the absence of Messrs. Taylor and Jones, this case would be held over for the next meeting of the board.

A case from Newark, N. J., which had been before the board at a previous session was also passed.

The board then resumed consideration of the Chicago scale case. At the Monday session of the board this case was discussed at length by the local representatives and the members of the board. It being apparent from the argument presented by the local representatives that there was a misunderstanding between them as to whether the contract or both the contract and scale was before the board for determination as to the arbitrable matter, the board requested that the local parties submit a definite statement of their case, whereupon the representatives of both parties presented the following:

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 24, 1917.

Members of the International Board of Arbitration:

GENTLEMEN—The undersigned representatives of Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 and Chicago Local A. N. P. A. ask that you decide whether

First—That the contract and scale of prices are distinct and separate documents.

Second—That the existing contract, amendments thereof, or any new contract proposals can become subjects for arbitration only by mutual agreement of the parties to the contract.

Respectfully yours,
OTTO E. ROSSNER,
WILLIAM A. KLINGER,
Representing Chicago Typographical Union No. 16.
HENRY N. CARY,
Representing Chicago Local A. N. P. A.

The position of the board on the question submitted was stated orally by Chairman Kellogg, who said that the board's decision on the points would be included in its formal decision covering the entire controversy.

Mr. Cary thereupon presented to the board the following statement:

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 24, 1917.

To the International Board of Arbitration:

GENTLEMEN—Representatives of Chicago Local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and Chicago Typographical Union No. 16, entered into negotiations December 14, 1914, for the purpose of establishing an agreement to control the relations between the two parties.

From the date mentioned until May 31, 1917, a total of 109 conferences were held without reaching a conclusion.

Now, at the expiration of over thirty-one months the publishers, regretting the unfortunate delays which they find continually occurring, find themselves before your honorable body in an effort to compose the differences.

As the representatives of Chicago Local A. N. P. A. and with full authority from that body, and in the hope of avoiding still further delay, I now appeal to you to take the entire matter into consideration for the purpose of reaching a decision which will establish fully, formally and for a definite period the relations between the two parties.

I believe that you have full authority to do this under the provisions of the existing contract between Chicago Local A. N. P. A. and Typographical Union No. 16, which are—

> Provided, That if at the expiration of sixty days said local board of arbitration has not been formed, the matter may be submitted to the National Board of Arbitration upon the request of either party.

In making this appeal it is the hope of the members of Chicago local that prompt action on your part will avoid further delay in this seemingly interminable controversy.

Respectfully yours,
HENRY N. CARY,
Secretary Chicago Local A. N. P. A.

Following this Mr. Rossner presented the following:

July 24, 1917.

To the Members of the International Board of Arbitration:

GENTLEMEN—Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 respectfully requests that you eliminate from both original wage scale proposals such sections or parts of sections as do not properly come within the provisions of the governing arbitration agreement. Respectfully submitted,

OTTO E. ROSSNER,
W. A. KLINGER,
R. H. MARSHALL,
For Chicago Typographical Union No. 16.

At 6 P. M. the board adjourned to meet at 7:30 P. M.

NIGHT SESSION.

The International Board of Arbitration met at 7:30 P. M. as per adjournment, with all members present.

The board resumed consideration of the Chicago scale controversy. Henry N. Cary, for the Chicago Local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and O. E. Rossner, W. A. Klinger, R. H. Marshall and John A. English for Chicago Typographical Union No. 16, presented arguments, after which the board went into executive session.

At 10 P. M. the board adjourned to meet at 10 A. M., Wednesday, July 25, 1917.

JULY 25, 1917.

The International Board of Arbitration met at 10 A. M. as per adjournment with all members present.

The board resumed consideration of the Chicago scale controversy. Discussion was had upon the proposals contained in the communications submitted at the preceding day's afternoon session of the board by Mr. Cary, representing Chicago Local of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the representatives of Chicago Typographical Union No. 16.

The Chicago Union's representatives contending that it was possible for the local parties to reach an agreement on the scale of prices if the contract provisions were declared non-arbitrable, the board did not concur in Mr. Cary's request.

On the proposals contained in the request of the representatives of the Chicago Union the board believed it best not to discuss the arbitrability of sections covering wages, hours and working conditions, as they were not formally submitted by both sides for this purpose when the case was originally presented.

The board then made the following decision:

In this case the parties concerned requested the board to determine whether or not differences relative to the provisions of a new contract may be submitted to arbitration. Both sides agreed that under the existing arrangement differences which relate to wages, hours and working conditions are arbitrable subject to the provisions of the International Arbitration Agreement, which is referred to in the local contract. They differ regarding the arbitrability of contract provisions. All the members of the board heartily support arbitration and believe it to the best interest of local parties that contracts specifically provide for submitting to arbitration all differences, including those relative to new contracts, but the local agreement that applies in this instance repeatedly refers to the arbitration of differences relative to wages, hours and working conditions, and differences regarding the construction and application of the contract, but does not provide for the submission to arbitration of questions involving contract provisions of a new agreement. The board earnestly recommends steps be taken at once to amend the local contract to provide for arbitrating such differences.

Pursuant to the foregoing conclusion, the board finds that the contract proposition of Typographical Union No. 16, submitted on January 28, 1915, is not subject to arbitration; that section 15 of the union's proposal headed "Daily Newspaper Scale of Prices," submitted on January 21, 1915, is not subject to arbitration; that sections 1 to 14, inclusive, of this proposal, relate to either wages, hours or working conditions.

Referring to the publishers' proposition submitted on January 21, 1915, the board finds that paragraphs 1 and 2 of the preamble and sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 28, 29, and 31 to 41, inclusive, contain contract provisions, therefore, are not subject to arbitration, and that sections 6 to 27, inclusive, are scale propositions, as they relate to either hours, wages or working conditions.

As to the sections in propositions of both sides covering wages, hours and working conditions, neither the president of the International Typographical Union and the chairman of the special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, nor the International Board were requested, when this case was presented, to pass upon the arbitrability of the sections. If agreement upon any of these sections is impossible the propositions of both sides should be forwarded to the president of the International Typographical Union and the chairman of the special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association for determination of questions that are subject to arbitration as provided in section 4 of the code of procedure of the arbitration contract which applies to these proceedings.

An appeal by Fort Smith Typographical Union No. 249 against the Southwest American for failure of the publisher to observe the provisions of the code of procedure of the arbitration agreement was then considered and the following decision rendered:

The controversy between the publisher of the Southwest American and Fort Smith Typographical Union No. 249 was brought to the attention of the board through a protest from the typographical union. This protest was sustained. The arbitration agreement and the local contract having expired, and the failure to negotiate a new scale having been caused by the failure of the publisher to observe the provisions of the code of procedure, the board decides that the publisher's claim to the right to arbitration under the contract which expired on April 30, 1917, is not sustained.

At 12 o'clock (noon) the board adjourned.

W. W. BARRETT, Secretary.

The following propositions were presented to the Baltimore convention of 1916 and by that convention referred to the Colorado Springs convention of 1917 through the executive council:

Proposition No. 133—By Delegate McCarthy (Boston):

Whereas, The use of mats by advertisers in the various newspapers throughout the country seems to be on the increase; and,
Whereas, Local unions have no way of determining whether such mats are the product of union labor or otherwise; and,
Whereas, The matter at the present time is handled, to a large extent, in an unsatisfactory manner from a union standpoint; be it
Resolved, That this convention place itself on record as favoring some plan looking toward a solution of the problem by instructing the executive council to thoroughly investigate the matter and report with recommendations to the 1917 convention.

The executive council has had the matter referred to in the above proposition under consideration at various times during the past year, and while it has not been able to work out a plan that is entirely satisfactory it believes that it will be able to do so in the near future. The board of governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association has also given this matter considerable attention and has decided that it is not incumbent upon proprietors of printing offices to be able to show that cuts or mats brought to them for publication in advertising or commercial work of any character are made in union offices, but that the officers of the local unions should put forth every effort to see that both advertisers and printing office proprietors are made acquainted with the places in which union mats or cuts can be obtained. The executive council will continue to use its best endeavor to secure the exclusive use of union-made mats and cuts.

The following from the proceedings of the Baltimore convention has been given consideration and propositions submitted to the laws committee covering this and other points in the pension laws:

Proposition No. 166—By Delegate Jentner (Baltimore):

Amend section 6, article v, by-laws, by striking out "or any member who has reached the age of 70 years, and who had been in continuous good standing for a period of ten years, and who finds it impossible to secure sustaining employment."

Committee recommends that this proposition be referred to the executive council, to report same to the next convention.
The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

The following from the proceedings of the Baltimore convention regarding the erection of a memorial to the inventor of the Mergenthaler machine was referred to this convention and the executive council submits it without recommendation:

Proposition No. 185—By the Baltimore delegation:

Whereas, Baltimore having been the home of Ottmar Mergenthaler, the inventor of the linotype, his family residing in this city at the present time; and,
Whereas, Ottmar Mergenthaler invented and perfected the linotype in this city, therefore, be it
Resolved, That the executive council of the International Typographical Union of North America be and is hereby instructed to lend its aid to the movement looking to the erection of a suitable memorial in Baltimore city to the memory of Ottmar Mergenthaler.

Committee recommends the adoption of the resolution.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays explained the proposition and said that he did not believe the convention should adopt this resolution, after just acting favorably upon a proposition for a memorial for ex-President Prescott. He said that he spoke with due deference to the officers and members of Baltimore Union but he did not want the convention to act on this matter without fully understanding it.
Delegate Daniels (Dallas) said that Secretary-Treasurer Hays had expressed his ideas and suggested that the proposition be withdrawn.
Delegate Thomson (Cleveland) moved that this resolution be referred to the Colorado Springs convention.

The motion was adopted.

The following propositions submitted to the Baltimore convention in 1916 refer to the establishment of a branch of the Union Printers Home in various locations, and the action of that convention is submitted therewith. These propositions were ordered submitted to the 1917 convention at Colorado Springs and the same will be reported upon by the proper committee during the sessions of this convention:

Proposition No. 81—By Delegate Weston (Jacksonville):

Whereas, During the past several years there has been a general agitation for the establishment of a branch home of the Union Printers Home at some suitable place in the south; and,
Whereas, It has been demonstrated that a high altitude is not always beneficial in tuberculosis cases, when the disease was contracted in low altitudes, and that the pine forests of the southeastern states have contributed some most wonderful cures from this dreaded malady; and,
Whereas, We believe no nobler, no grander work could possibly be performed by the International Typographical Union than to extend and enlarge on the great work that has been accomplished at Colorado Springs by this world-famed institution for the care of our brothers and sisters who have been "marked for death," so many of whom have gone back to their loved ones and their labors sound in body and mind, singing the praises of the Union Printers Home; therefore, be it
Resolved, That it be and is the sense of this convention that a suitable branch home be established in one of the pine forest states of the southeast, and that the executive council of the International Typographical Union is hereby designated a committee to investigate conditions and decide upon a suitable location for such a home, to purchase lands and to erect suitable buildings thereon, and otherwise equip and furnish and put in operation a branch home in every way suitable or similar to the already established Home at Colorado Springs; and, be it further
Resolved, That the sum of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary for the carrying out of this resolution, be set aside from the general funds for this purpose, and that upon the adoption of these resolutions by a majority referendum vote of the International Typographical Union membership a special levy of 10 cents per member per month be levied on all working members of the International Typographical Union for such length of time as may be necessary to pay back into the general fund the sum loaned; that upon the completion of said branch home an additional one-fourth of 1 per cent of the earnings of the International Typographical Union membership be levied, and that this sum be regularly transferred to the secretary-treasurer of the Union Printers Home corporation, as provided by section 7, article ix.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Proposition No. 83—By Delegate Henry (Columbia, S. C.):

Whereas, Owing to the extreme inaccessibility of the Union Printers Home at Colorado Springs to unions located in the eastern and southern parts of the United States, and to the proved unsuitability of the climate of Colorado to consumptives coming from warm climates, there is a constantly growing demand throughout the southern and south-central sections of the country for the establishment by the International Typographical Union of a branch sanatorium for the treatment of members afflicted with tuberculosis, to be located at some suitable point in the southeastern part of the United States; and,

Whereas, It is a matter of world-wide knowledge that there are numerous locations in the territory seeking this branch with climate unexcelled for this purpose, where, by availing itself of nature's bounties, the International Typographical Union may prolong and save the lives of many of its members, effecting at the same time a great saving to the treasuries of local unions; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the president of the International Typographical Union be and is hereby instructed to appoint, within thirty days after adjournment of this convention, a commission consisting of five members, three of whom shall be from locals located east of the Mississippi river, whose duty it shall be to collect data and information from cities and communities desiring said sanatorium, making thorough personal investigation into the claims of each, and to report its findings, together with such recommendations concerning the establishment of said sanatorium as their findings may warrant, to the next annual convention of this organization. For their services as such, members of this commission shall each receive the sum of $5 per day and expenses while in the active discharge of their duties; Provided, That members of said commission shall be compensated for their work for a total of not more than thirty days each, except with the consent of the executive council, which is hereby empowered to grant an extension of time with compensation as specified above for a period of fifteen days if in its judgment such extension shall appear necessary to complete their investigation.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Proposition No. 132—By Delegate Baker (Tampa):

Whereas, It is a well-known fact that there is a growing demand for a branch of the Colorado Springs Home in a climate that can treat patients unable to go to the present Home on account of climatic conditions; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the convention that the matter of a branch home be submitted to the referendum at the next regular election.

Committee reports unfavorably.

President Scott ruled that Propositions Nos. 82, 83 and 132, which referred to the same subject as Proposition No. 81, would be referred to the 1917 convention.

The ruling of President Scott was concurred in by the convention.

The following proposition referring to the erection of a building for the headquarters of the International Typographical Union to be designated as the William B. Prescott building was referred to the executive council to be reported upon to this convention:

Proposition No. 183—By Delegate Burns (Memphis):

Whereas, The members of the International Typographical Union are of one mind regarding a fitting testimonial to the memory of the late William B. Prescott; and,

Whereas, The annual rental of the offices of the International Typographical Union amounts to about $5,000, and the need for a home office building has for some time been apparent; be it

Resolved, That the executive council be authorized to investigate the possibility of erecting a home office building in Indianapolis, to float a bond issue to cover same, and that the name of such building shall be the "William B. Prescott building."

We recommend that the executive council inquire into the feasibility of the resolution and report to the Colorado Springs convention in 1917.

The report of the committee was adopted.

The executive council is of the opinion that if a building is ever erected for the headquarters of the International Typographical Union it should not be named after anything except the organization itself, and that it should be emphatically known as an International Typographical Union building. However, owing to the general conditions existing because of the world war and the very high cost of material and labor necessary for the erection of a building, your council believes it unwise to proceed further with this proposition at this time and therefore recommends that action upon the erection of a building for International headquarters be indefinitely postponed.

The following is a proposition and the action of the Baltimore convention thereon intended to provide for the establishment of an endowment fund for the Union Printers Home:

UNION PRINTERS HOME ENDOWMENT FUND.

Section —. There is hereby created the "Union Printers Home Endowment Fund," the same to consist of such moneys and other property as may be donated to or otherwise provided for such fund. All such funds shall pass through the hands of the secretary-treasurer of the International Typographical Union and then go into the hands of the secretary-treasurer of the Union Printers Home corporation as the official custodian thereof, subject to investment as hereinafter provided. The principal of such fund shall be held perpetually by the International Typographical Union and be invested and reinvested by it, through and by the executive council, as provided by law. All interest and income derived from the investment of such fund shall go into the "Union Printers Home Fund," and shall be used toward the maintenance of said Union Printers Home. Such endowment fund shall be invested and reinvested from time to time by the secretary-treasurer in bonds of the United States, or in approved non-taxable state, county, township, city or school district within the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union, or loaned upon unencumbered improved real estate situated within said jurisdiction and reasonably worth double the amount so loaned thereon.

The secretary-treasurer shall furnish a blank upon which all donations to said endowment fund shall be made, and there shall be printed annually in the reports of officers a list of the names to date, chronologically arranged, of all donors of $25 or more to the Union Printers Home Endowment Fund.

Committee recommends this proposition be referred to the executive council and the trustees of the Union Printers Home to report same to the next convention.

Chairman Hoban (Cleveland) of the committee on laws stated the committee thought the proposition a good one, but believed the Home Trustees should be first consulted on the subject, hence the report of the committee.

Delegate Woolsey (Springfield, Mo.) said the report of the committee was satisfactory to him and favored the adoption thereof.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

It will be noted by the action of the Baltimore convention that the proposition was submitted to the executive council and the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home to be reported upon at the Colorado Springs convention.

Your executive council followed out the instructions of the Baltimore convention and presented the proposition to the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home at its last session in Colorado Springs. The board of trustees and the executive council after consultation with the attorney for the Union Printers Home corporation decided that the establishment of an endowment fund for the Home was a matter entirely under the jurisdiction of the board of trustees and therefore took the matter up for final settlement at that time, with the result that favorable action was taken and the laws of the Home corporation so amended as to provide for the establishment of an endowment fund. The law is now in effect, the fund is established and some money has already accumulated therein.

REPORT OF DELEGATE TO TRADES AND LABOR CONGRESS OF CANADA.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—The thirty-second annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada was held in Toronto, Ont., September 25-30, 1916. Two hundred and eighty-eight delegates were in attendance, representing 213 international locals, forty-five trades and labor councils, twenty-six international unions, and fraternal delegates from the American Federation of Labor, British Trades Union Congress, National Women's Trade Union League.

The opening session of the convention was held in the Technical School building. The convention was addressed at this session by the Hon. Findlay MacDiarmid, representing the provincial government; Mayor T. L. Church, representing the city of Toronto; Sir William Houston, chairman of the board of education; D. A. Cary, representing the separate school board, and James Richards (president of the Toronto District Trades and Labor Council.

The other sessions of the convention were held in the Labor temple.

The executive council submitted a comprehensive report of the work of the congress for the previous year. Secretary Draper's report showed a balance in the treasury (less $10,000 to reserve fund) of $2,757.69. The report also showed a decrease in membership of 4,846, compared with last year, and a corresponding decrease in the revenue of $1,053.36. This was due to the severe strain on all international unions in Canada caused by the war.

An outstanding feature of the convention was the visit of the minister of labor. The presence of the minister was thought an opportune time to take up the discussion of the famous "Thetford Mine" case. This was a situation which arose over certain provisions of the Lemieux act wherein it provides for the appointment of a board of conciliation to prevent a strike. The employes made the request for the board; the minister refused on the ground that there were five concerns interested and he would be forced to appoint five boards. This contention of the minister's was thought an unfair one in view of the fact that in their negotiations with the men, prior to the men's request for a board, the employers—the five concerns—were represented by one man agreed upon by the said five concerns.

The case of the miners was clearly expounded by the resolutions committee, and the minister of labor was given an opportunity to clear himself of the reflections cast upon his administration of the provisions of the Lemieux act. A more attentive or courteous hearing could not have been obtained by any one than that given by the congress to Hon Thomas Crothers; and during the course of that attentive hearing, and because of the lack of interruption, the delegates were enabled to follow the minister closely, and, not only by what he said, but by the evident partisan manner in which he said it, it gradually dawned upon the minds of those delegates who were wedded to the arbitration principle of settling disputes, that, with the Lemieux act as at present constituted, and with this particular administrator of it, the repeal of the act was the only course to be adopted.

In reference to the conditions that may arise after the conclusion of the war, the executive council had this to say:

While it is imperative that the delegates to this convention give this important subject their very best and most careful attention, the following suggestions are submitted for your consideration as a means of partially solving the problem or at least of ameliorating conditions:

1. The nationalization of railways, mines and other public utilities.
2. The building of an extensive system of highways.
3. The adoption of a policy for land settlement which will provide sufficient aid to guarantee the settlement on the land of those adapted to, or adaptable for, farming, and that such policy provide for close settlement, so that social amenities be enjoyed to the greatest possible extent.
4. Shortening the work-day to provide opportunity for the employment of every unemployed person.
5. The disbanding of enlisted men to be gradual, covering a period of at least two years after the termination of the war, to enable their being absorbed into the industrial life of the country through immediate employment after discharge.

As to the high cost of living the executive quotes sections of "the war measures act, 1914," showing that all that is needed is an order in council restricting the prices of certain defined articles to certain amounts; such becomes law at once, and the machinery for its enforcement is supplied. Strong representations should be made to the government to take immediate and effective action along those lines.

Following is a brief summary of the more important resolutions adopted by the congress:

Asked for repeal of Lemieux act.

Endorsed a resolution advocating the formation of a Canadian labor party.

Endorsed congress draft of industrial disputes act.

Refused to endorse suggestion that when minister of labor is selected he must secure endorsation of whole Canadian electorate.

Refused to pass resolution requesting the holding open of polling booths until 8 o'clock in the evening, as election act provides sufficient time to vote

Delegates be not seated unless able to produce three labels on wearing apparel.

Endorsed resolution advocating old age pensions and pensions for mothers with children.

Endorsed resolution safeguarding the grants of land, if any, made to returned soldiers.

Endorsed resolutions requesting equalization of pensions of allied reservists with Canadian standard.

Reaffirmed action of Vancouver convention against conscription, and objected to registration.

Increased executive by two vice-presidents.

Authorized selection and set remuneration for parliamentary representative in each provincial legislature.

Endorsed establishment of centrally-located Ottawa headquarters.

Endorsed beer and light wine resolution.

Endorsed eight-hour day law throughout the dominion.

Endorsed exclusion of Asiatics.

Endorsed a resolution to endeavor to have workmen's compensation acts in provinces at present without.

Decided to press for representation on the labor peace conference at the conclusion of war.

The next convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada will be held in Ottawa, Ont.

Respectfully submitted,

Toronto, Ont. SAMUEL HADDEN.

The following communications were read:

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 13, 1917.

J. W. Hays, Secretary International Typographical Union Convention, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America extends fraternal greetings and best wishes for a successful convention.

FRANK DUFFY,
WILLIAM L. HUTCHESON.

DENVER, COLO., August 13, 1917.

To the International Typographical Union, in Convention Assembled, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

DEAR SIRS AND BROTHERS—On behalf of the Colorado State Federation of Labor, I desire to extend to you, and through you to the International Typographical Union, in convention assembled, the fraternal greetings of the organized labor movement of Colorado.

We hope that the deliberations of your convention will be both harmonious and profitable, and that the results of this gathering of the representatives of your organization will bring untold benefits to the members of your organization.

Fraternally yours,
ED ANDERSON,
Secretary-Treasurer Colorado State Federation of Labor.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 14, 1917.

J. W. Hays, International Typographical Union Convention, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

In the name of the great labor movement of America, I send you and through you to the officers and delegates and membership congratulations on the magnificent worth and achievement of the International Typographical Union as well as that of the great labor movement of America. In this crucial time of our country's struggle for justice, freedom and democracy not only for the people of America but for the people of all nations, unity and solidarity in fact and in spirit are essential. May harmony and success attend your convention and your organization remain in the forefront of the battle line for labor justice, freedom, democracy and humanity. SAMUEL GOMPERS.
President American Federation of Labor.

NEW YORK, N. Y., August 13, 1917.

International Typographical Union Convention, Temple Theater, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

Hebrew-American Typographical Union No. 83 sends its greetings and good wishes to the convention. May your work be crowned with lasting success. The progress made by our International Union in the last year tips that of any other organization the world over. Keep up the good work. From the depths of our hearts we send three mighty cheers for our beloved organization.

B. ROTHSTEIN, Secretary.

NAHANT, MASS., August 14, 1917.

John W. Hays, Union Printers Convention Headquarters, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

Boston and New York union printers baseball party send greetings to convention from Nahant, Mass.

H. D. WHITCOMB,
GEORGE E. O'DONNELL, Commissioners.

Delegate Steffen (Cleveland) moved that Secretary-Treasurer Hays be instructed to include in the proceedings of this convention a summary of the celebration of the silver jubilee celebration of the Union Printers Home, to be held this afternoon.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Delegate Hoban (Cleveland), acting for the Most Noble Order of Turkeys, presented the committee on thanks with the sum of $50, the same being the proceeds of a session of the Turkeys held last night.

Delegate Gookin (Roanoke) moved that the official convention picture to be taken during the Home celebration be made a part of the minutes of this session.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON CREDENTIALS.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 15, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on credentials respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

We recommend the seating of H. Percy Jones, of Greenville (Texas) Typographical Union No. 509, and J. J. Harrison, of Pine Bluff (Ark.) Typographical Union No. 447, as fully accredited delegates to the sixty-third session of the International Typographical Union as irregularly elected delegates.

On the credentials of Alex M. Rutherford, of Baltimore Typographical Union No. 12, the committee recommends he be seated as a regularly elected delegate.

The recommendations of the committee were unanimously adopted.

On the credentials of Charles Perry Taylor, who was elected at the meeting of July 29, 1917, and whose seat in the convention is protested by a petition signed by twenty-two members of Tacoma Typographical Union No. 170, your committee recommends that he be not seated.

Delegate Haines (Tacoma) explained the circumstances surrounding the granting of credentials to Mr. Taylor and urged that he be seated.

Delegates Gookin (Roanoke), Smith (Butte), Crawford (Leadville), Digges (Phœnix), Owens (Cincinnati), German (Springfield, Ill.) and Marshall (Chicago) opposed the report of the committee.

Chairman Powell (Oklahoma City), of the committee on credentials, stated the membership of Tacoma Union had not been given proper opportunity to say whether it desired Mr. Taylor to represent it, that his election was irregular, and urged the adoption of the report of the committee.

Delegates Carter (Chattanooga), Beilman (Buffalo), Keller (New York), Gottlob (Newark) and Rifenberick (Albany) favored the report of the committee.

President Scott said this convention and previous conventions had seated delegates not elected on the proper date, but in each case there had been no protest. In this case a protest against the seating of the irregularly elected delegate had been made and the committee could not do otherwise than follow the law which provided a date for the election of delegates.

The previous question was ordered.

The report of the committee in the case of Mr. Taylor was adopted by a vote of 161 for to 54 against. The following is the vote:

AYES.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 15, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on resolutions respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Proposition No. 63—By Delegate Spurgeon (Indianapolis):

Resolved, That the International Typographical Union, in convention assembled, at Colorado Springs, Colo., August 13, 1917, unqualifiedly endorses the stand taken by President Woodrow Wilson in the present great world conflict in Europe, and that this body, representing some sixty-odd thousand members, recommends to its membership that they, individually, strive to help carry out the plans and fulfil the wishes of the United States government, as made known to them by its duly recognized officials, to the end that all the peoples of the world may, as a result of our efforts, speedily obtain and forever enjoy that full freedom and precious liberty which is our glorious portion as American citizens, and which the government of the United States gave to the governments of the world as its sole reason for participating in this great world war.

The committee offers the following substitute:

Whereas, The United States and Canada have entered the world war on the side of democracy as against autocracy and militarism, and have pledged all their resources of manhood and wealth to the prosecution of the conflict to the end that ultimate victory shall bring to the world and all its people the full and free enjoyment and advantages of man's true birthright, that of self-government, and the undisputed exercise of the right to associate himself freely with his fellows in the achievement of all good purposes under that birthright, denying to none the privileges and immunities he claims for himself; and,

Whereas, If organized labor pretends to claim a seat at the council table when negotiations for readjustment of political and economic relations are considered, and agreements between nations are again established, it must be ready to assume its full share of responsibility for proceedings that will lead to and make possible the assembling of that council; and,

Whereas, Many members of the International Typographical Union have already joined the colors, volunteering for service under the flags of their countries, and many more will be called upon to serve under the selective draft; and,

Whereas, This condition must have a disturbing effect on the orderly progress of affairs of the printing and publishing industry, and throw an unusual burden on the membership of the International Typographical Union, in the maintenance of its relations with the employing printers and publishers, and in the management of its own affairs; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the International Typographical Union pledges its unswerving support to the president of the United States in his efforts to maintain the dignity and preserve the honor of the United States in all its relations with all the world, and to secure the safety of all its citizens at home and abroad in the peaceful pursuit of their lawful business, and to insist upon the careful observance of all obligations and requirements of treaties and agreements solemnly entered into covering the rights of American citizens wherever they may be found; and, be it further

Resolved, That this convention urgently directs attention of local unions to the necessity of sustaining such of their members as may be called upon to take up arms in defense of their country and its flag in good standing throughout the period for which they may be required to serve, that they may lose none of their rights and benefits as members of the International Typographical Union while they are discharging their high duty to their country and to mankind; and, be it further

Resolved, That we commend the action of the executive council in taking steps to enter into arrangements with the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America to protect the rights of such members as are called out in their employment, to the end that when they are discharged from serving with the colors they may return to their situations in full enjoyment of all their rights.

Delegate Smith (Butte) opposed the adoption of the substitute offered by the committee.

Delegates Herman (Springfield, Ill.), Campbell (Norfolk) and Dickinson (Cleveland) favored the substitute of the committee.

The substitute of the committee was adopted.

Introducing Chairman H. N. Kellogg, of the special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, President Scott said:

For the past sixteen years this International Union has had contractual relations with the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

I shall not at this time dwell upon the progress we have made since the signing of our first arbitration agreement. In the reports of the officers each year you will find the result of the deliberations of the International board and the decisions handed down by that board.

It has been a pleasant custom to invite to our convention the chairman of the standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and I take great pleasure in presenting to you this morning H. N. Kellogg.

The following is Mr. Kellogg's address:

Mr. President and Delegates to the Sixty-third Annual Meeting of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—It is a very great pleasure to again be with you and tender the compliments of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association to the International Typographical Union. While my attendance at your annual meetings has always been most agreeable, it is particularly pleasant this year, as we are meeting in Colorado Springs because it contains this wonderful institution of yours, which will be a perpetual monument to your organization. This beautiful Home which you have provided for members who are ill, is not surpassed, if, indeed, it is equaled, by any institution of its character throughout the world, and the sacrifices you have made to establish and maintain it give concrete evidence of your broad humanity.

Unfortunately, since I met you in Baltimore a year ago, the irresistible logic of events has involved our beloved country in the terrible conflict abroad. There is no question but that severe trials are in store for every one of us. We can not, of course, know the length of time the struggle will continue, but I am sure we all feel thoroughly convinced that the cause of democracy in the world and the right of each nation to determine its individual destiny will ultimately triumph. While the frightful conflict lasts I am certain that all those present as well as all whom we represent, will properly do their part. Already many of those formerly connected with newspapers that are members of our association have joined the colors and there are none of us that can escape a considerable share of the burden. The speaker has gladly, yet sorrowfully, seen his youngest son enter the United States army and has another son who has expressed his willingness to serve. It goes without saying that if there is any personal service besides that of supporting our government so far as is in his power in a financial way, the speaker is fully prepared to do his utmost. I am sure that all are imbued with the same spirit and that if there are difficulties respecting our relations with each other because of changes in conditions that the war entails we will meet them like men and solve them to the best of our ability in accordance with the principles of right and justice. I am confident this will result because as you know in the past year a new arbitration contract has been concluded that will remain in effect until May 1, 1922.

I noted with pleasure a very large majority of your members voted for the new arbitration contract with the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America, thus showing the rank and file still heartily endorses arbitration as the "safe and sane" method for settling differences. You are thus assured that all questions that come up between your members and the typothetæ will be peacefully adjusted.

You are aware that the International Typographical Union and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association have concluded an agreement to protect those who enlist or are drafted for service in the war so that those who happily return and are able to resume their duties will find their positions awaiting them. Many publishers who are members of our association have already signed amended agreements with local unions to provide the protection referred to and additional contracts are being received in every mail.

I have read with pleasure the record of subscriptions made by your International Union and subordinate bodies to the liberty bonds, thus giving concrete evidence of the loyal support you are giving Uncle Sam.

I have also seen reports of action taken by many local unions to pay the local and International dues of members of their organizations that go to the front, another evidence of the right spirit.

I presume you know that the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union at its meeting in Cleveland last June adopted a proposition under which all members of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' organization who join the army will be preserved in good standing during their absence. I understand the board of directors of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union has also taken such action.

Referring to our new arbitration contract I regret there are still some members of our association that are unwilling to accept it and that a considerable number of the subordinate unions of the International Typographical Union are of the same mind. However, there are now 196 of these agreements in effect, which is forty-six more than were in force five years ago. Hence, it is manifest we are making progress. I believe some local unions voted against the arbitration agreement because of the method provided in the code of procedure for organizing local boards. To meet that objection your executive council and the special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association have amended section 6 of the code by eliminating the words "one such representative of each contending party to be free from personal connection with or direct interest in any newspaper or any labor union." You will, therefore, see that hereafter each side will be free to nominate any two men as members of local boards they may desire. I trust this will result in a considerable number of arbitration contracts being signed in cities where unions have heretofore declined the agreement. I have, however, been surprised and disappointed at the action of certain of your local unions that have enjoyed the protection of our arbitration agreements under the previous five-year contract because they refused to sign the new arbitration contract owing to the fact that their local scale agreements expired at or about the time of the expiration of the old arbitration contract, until the new scale contracts had been made. It seems to me this course is not entirely fair and that unions which have accepted the principle of arbitration and operated under our agreement should without hesitation sign the new contract regardless of the dates of expiration of local agreements.

The officers and members of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association have been very much gratified by the support that has been given to the association by your International officers and many local unions in efforts to prevent the imposition by the government of an unfair discriminating tax on newspapers. That is the right sort of co-operation.

I trust you will have a satisfactory and successful meeting, that the result of your work will redound to the future advantage of your organization, as well as all with whom you have business relations.

I thank you heartily for your kind attention.

President Scott stated the amendment to section 6 of the code of procedure in the arbitration agreement would be included in a supplemental report of the executive council. He said it would have been presented earlier but the negotiations had just been concluded.

The following telegram was read:

PUEBLO, COLO., August 14, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, care Convention, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

Impossible for me to be on hand Wednesday. Held up by heavy rains. Get some one in my place to speak. Uncertain as to when I can get home. B. F. SCRIBNER.

President Scott said he regretted that Mr. Scribner was unable to attend the convention and referred to the arbitration agreement just signed with the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs, of which Mr. Scribner was a representative.

President Scott announced the hour for nominating the convention city of 1918 had arrived.

Delegate Walton (Scranton) nominated Scranton for the meeting place in 1918. He dwelt at length on the beauties of his home town, its many attractive features and surroundings, its even climate and hospitality, and urged the International Typographical Union to meet in Scranton next year.

The following telegrams were read:

SCRANTON, PA., August 14, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Acacia hotel, Colorado Springs, Colo:

The city of Scranton desires to welcome you here next year. A warm and hospitable reception awaits the great union printers' organization in the greatest coal mining center on earth.

EDMUND B. JERMYN, Mayor.

SCRANTON, PA., August 14, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Hotel Acacia, Colorado Springs, Colo:

The Scranton Board of Trade, fourteen hundred strong, unites in extending a most cordial and earnest invitation to the International Typographical Union to make Scranton, the Queen of Anthracite, its next convention city.

MARK K. EDGAR,
Secretary Scranton Board of Trade.

The following letter was read:

HARRISBURG, PA., August 12, 1917.

John W. Hays, Secretary-Treasurer International Typographical Union:

DEAR SIR—The following resolution was presented and unanimously adopted by the Eastern Pennsylvania District Typographical Union, in regular quarterly session assembled, at Lancaster. It is also requested that said resolution be read before the International Typographical Union convention on the day on which the vote is taken for fixing place for holding next convention of the International Typographical Union:

"Whereas, The International Typographical Union convenes this week in annual session at Colorado Springs, Colo.; and,

"Whereas, Scranton Union, one of the constituent unions of this body, is seeking the honor of entertaining the 1918 convention of said body; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Eastern Pennsylvania District Typographical Union, being in quarterly session in Lancaster, Pa., August 12, 1917, unanimously endorses Scranton for this honor; and, be it further

"Resolved, That the secretary of this body at once communicate to the International Typographical Union convention the action of this conference, and that all local unions connected with our district union, which have delegates in attendance at the International Typographical Union convention, be requested to notify said delegates of this action." Yours fraternally,

LINWOOD B. WANBAUGH,
Secretary Eastern Pennsylvania District Typographical Union.

Delegates Hoban (Cleveland), Shields (Chicago), Coyell (Buffalo), Bowen (Philadelphia), Johns (New York), Higgins (Syracuse), Gookin (Roanoke), Trump (Boston), Casey (Wilkes-Barre), Leighley (Pittsburgh), Adams (Lincoln) and Rutherford (Baltimore) seconded the nomination of Scranton.

Delegate Dawson (Springfield) moved that nominations be closed.

The motion was adopted.

Consideration of the report of the committee on laws was resumed:

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON LAWS.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 15, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on laws respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Delegate Murphy (Providence) moved that propositions Nos. 9, 19, 30, 33, 82 and 34, relating to the old age pension fund, be read.

The motion was adopted.

Proposition No. 9—By Delegate Gookin (Roanoke):

Amend sections 6 and 8, article v, by-laws, "Old Age Pension Fund," to read:

Section 6. Any member of the International Typographical Union who has reached the age of 60 years, and who has been in good standing for a period of twenty years, including and antedating the enactment of the pension law, may receive the sum of $5 per week, or any member who has reached the age of 70 years, and who has been in continuous good standing for a period of ten years, and who finds it impossible to secure sustaining employment, or any member having a continuous membership of twenty years who, by reason of his affliction, is totally incapacitated for work, and whose application for admission to the Union Printers Home has been rejected by the trustees thereof, may receive the sum of $4 per week, subject to the provisions hereinafter set forth.

Sec. 8. Any member earning more than $5 or more pay in any one week at the printing trade at the scale of the union with which he is affiliated shall not be entitled to the pension for that week.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 19—By Delegate Honaker (Bluefield):

The following proposition was unanimously adopted by Bluefield Typographical Union No. 644 at its regular meeting July 1, 1917, and its delegate, C. A. Honaker, instructed to present it to the convention at Colorado Springs:

In lieu of present pension laws substitute the following:

Section —. All members who have been members in good standing for a period of fifteen years continuously and who through illness of an incurable kind are unable to make a living at the printing trade shall receive the sum of $5 per week, payment to be made every four weeks.

Sec. —. All members who have been twenty years members continuously for twenty years and whose capacity for earning a living at the printing trade has been eliminated through sickness, injury or any other cause shall receive the sum of $6 per week, payable every four weeks.

Sec. —. All members who have been members in good standing continuously for a period of twenty-five years, and whose capacity for earning a living at the printing trade has been eliminated through sickness, injury or any other cause, shall receive the sum of $7 per week, payable every four weeks, which shall be the maximum sum paid to pensioners.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 30—By Delegate Owens (Cincinnati):

Amend section 6, article v, by-laws, to read:

Section 6. Any member of the International Typographical Union who has reached the age of 60 years, and who has been in good standing for a period of twenty years, including and antedating the enactment of the pension law, or any member who has reached the age of 70 years, and who has been in continuous good standing for a period of ten years, and who finds it impossible to secure sustaining employment, or any member having a continuous membership of twenty years who, by reason of his affliction, is totally incapacitated for work, and whose application for admission to the Union Printers Home has been rejected by the trustees thereof, may receive the sum of six dollars ($6) per week, subject to the provisions hereinafter set forth.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 33—By Victoria (B. C.) Union:

To the Officers and Delegates of the International Typographical Union, in Convention Assembled:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—At the April meeting of Victoria Typographical Union No. 201 a committee was appointed to consider the communication sent to subordinate unions by our International Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays, and the following was submitted by the committee at the May meeting, and adopted by the union:

"Whereas, A circular letter from the secretary of the International Typographical Union, dated February 28, 1917, impresses on local unions the necessity of closely watching claims on the old age pension fund, owing to the constantly increasing number of applicants for pensions, and the fact that the receipts are now barely equal to the expenditures; and,

"Whereas, The said circular, in view of the foregoing, further intimated the probable necessity, at an early date, of either reducing the amount of pension or increasing the assessment for said fund; and,

"Whereas, Grave doubts exist in the minds of many members as to the permanent stability of the old age pension and mortuary benefit funds; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we recommend that a committee be appointed at the forthcoming convention, and that a competent actuary be engaged to go fully into the question of said funds, to ascertain whether the pension and mortuary funds are on a sound and permanent financial basis, and if found necessary, submit recommendations for such amendments as may be necessary to place the funds on a sound basis."

A further report was received from this committee at the June meeting, as follows, which also was adopted:

"We believe that the claim of every member on the old age pension fund should be a right, and not permissive, as at present. If the fund, as at present in operation, will not permit of this, either the age at which members can claim the benefit should be raised, or the contributions should be increased All members are under obligation to contribute to the fund and should have an equal right to its benefits.

"We also believe the benefits should be granted according to length of membership in the union. If the present age of 60 is retained as the age at which a member can claim the benefit of the fund, we suggest that three grades be established, as follows:

"First class—For those with membership of 35 years or over; benefit, $5 weekly.

"Second class—For those with a membership of 25 years or over, but less than 35 years; benefit, $4 weekly.

Digitized by Google

"Third class—For those with a membership of 15 years or over, but under 25 years; benefit, $3 weekly.

"Special class—For those who through failing health are compelled to apply for the pension before reaching the age of 60 years, and whose cases are to be subject to decision by the executive council. These cases, we believe, should be placed on the same footing as class three.

"Or, in case of the consolidation of the funds, as an alternative to this, that a member should surrender a fixed portion of the mortuary benefit to be paid to his beneficiary for every year he is under 60—the age at which he would be entitled to claim on the pension fund. For instance: A person applying for the pension under this clause would receive $156 a year. It is not unreasonable that, say, the sum of $100 should be surrendered from the mortuary benefit each year, leaving a minimum of $100 to pay necessary funeral expenses.

"Another point we would strongly urge is that the contributions to the pension and mortuary funds should be a fixed amount, and not on a percentage basis.

"The argument is used that persons in receipt of wages of $1,200 a year can pay $6 per year to the two funds as easily as the person in receipt of $1,000 a year can contribute $5 per year, which, we admit, is correct. But it must be remembered that wages in general represent a certain standard of living, which does not vary largely, and $1,200 is needed to maintain the standard in some localities which is secured by $1,000 in others. The purchasing power of a fixed sum of money being so much less in some places than in others, penalizes the recipients of old age pensions or mortuary benefits to this extent and works an injustice on a portion of our members. The only thing we can do to remedy this is to make contributions static, as to adjust benefits to payments is out of the question. The unfairness and inequality of our present percentage system will be apparent when members in some districts are compelled to pay 60 or 70 cents per month as against a minimum of 35 cents per month paid by others, and both receive the same fixed amount of benefit.

"The two funds have now been in operation long enough for the executive council, assisted by an expert actuary, to be able to fix the amount of contributions which each member should pay to keep the funds in a sound financial position.

"The criticism has been made from time to time that the pension and mortuary funds are not on a sound financial basis, and while we do not question the integrity, or the desire to be fair, of either officers of the union, or committees who have dealt with these matters, we are strongly of opinion that an expert actuary should be engaged to thoroughly examine into this matter, and make such recommendations as are necessary to place the two funds on a thoroughly sound financial basis. Should this recommendation be given effect to, this union will be ready to submit the name of a person who, from experience in such matters, is, in our opinion, thoroughly qualified to render such service.

"We are also of opinion that the two funds should be consolidated. Taking the present scale of benefits and average amount of contributions, it will be seen that so far as the mortuary fund is concerned, some readjustment is probably necessary. The lapses in the International Typographical Union can not be calculated on anything like the same basis as the lapses in an ordinary insurance company, and our financing must be adjusted to meet this situation. Our fund should be placed on a sound footing disregarding lapses entirely. The small percentage of lapses we have will then have the effect of making the fund financially strong. By consolidating the funds, in the case of the beneficiaries of a member receiving payment from the mortuary fund, the amount paid to the pension fund will be available to meet such claims. Taking the present average contribution as a basis, it will be seen that the beneficiaries of a member dying before completing one year's membership receive fifteen times the amount of his contributions to that fund. The beneficiaries of a member dying between —

"1 and 2 years, receive 10 to 15 times;
2 and 3 years, receive 8 to 10 times;
3 and 4 years, receive 9 to 10 times;
4 and 32 years, receive 1 to 9 times.

"These figures are calculated on the present average contributions and calculating earnings of the fund at 5 per cent per annum. It takes nearly thirty-two years at this rate for a member's contributions to the mortuary fund to amount to the sum his beneficiaries receive at his death. It would take nearly sixteen years for his contributions to the two funds to total that amount, and, as mortuary claims of the full amount are now being paid at the decease of members who have only been contributing to the present fund for seven years, the disparity between their contributions and the amount drawn is such that disaster is probable.

"When an organization is growing, as the International Typographical Union has grown for several years, the number of young members coming in and paying their contributions regularly places any fund of this kind on a seemingly sound footing, but a constantly increasing growth is necessary to maintain this condition. When the time arrives—as we all expect it will arrive some day—that the membership becomes practically stationary, and an old member claims on the pension fund, or dies and his beneficiaries claim on the mortuary fund, for every young member admitted, the breaking point will be reached unless the funds are financially sound, and it is this condition of affairs that should be considered and guarded against. It is manifestly unfair that our members should contribute during their working life to a fund or funds which, when the time came for them to receive benefits from it, would be bankrupt, not because of any crooked work or bad management, but because its foundation was financially unsound. It is for this reason, and not in any spirit of hostility to the officers, or carping criticism of their administration that we urge the appointment of a committee at the convention and the engagement of an actuary to make a thorough investigation and recommend such changes as may be necessary.

"We also urge that no opportunity should be missed to advocate the state provision of old age pensions, with a view of reducing the age at which our members might become eligible for pensions from the union, such pensions to cease at the age a member becomes eligible for the state old age pension.

The reports of this committee were ordered printed in sufficient quantity to supply all delegates to the convention with a copy, in the hope that the recommendations therein might be favorably considered.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 82—By the Baltimore convention.

[The following from the proceedings of the Baltimore convention has been given consideration by the executive council and propositions submitted to the laws committee covering this and other points in the pension laws:]

Proposition No. 166—By Delegate Jentner (Baltimore):

Amend section 6, article v, by-laws, by striking out "or any member who has reached the age of 70 years, and who has been in continuous good standing for a period of ten years, and who finds it impossible to secure sustaining employment."

Committee recommends that this proposition be referred to the executive council, to report same to the next convention.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Committee reports the recommendation has been covered in the substitute offered by the committee on laws for Proposition No. 34.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 34—By President Scott:

Amend section 6, article v, by-laws, by striking out the words "or any member who has reached the age of 70 years, and who has been in continuous good standing for a period of ten years," the section as amended to read:

Section 6. Any member of the International Typographical Union who has reached the age of 60 years, and who has been in good standing for a period of twenty years, including and antedating the enactment of the pension law, and who finds it impossible to secure sustaining employment, or any member having a continuous membership of twenty years who, by reason of his affliction, is totally incapacitated for work, and whose application for admission to the Union Printers Home has been rejected by the trustees thereof, may receive the sum of $5 per week, subject to the provisions hereinafter set forth.

In lieu of the foregoing, the committee offers the following substitute:

Section 6. Any member of the International Typographical Union who has reached the age of 60 years, and who has been in continuous good standing for a period of twenty years, and who finds it impossible to secure sustaining employment, or any member having a continuous membership of twenty years who, by reason of his affliction, is totally incapacitated for work, and whose application for admission to the Union Printers Home has been rejected by the trustees thereof, may receive the sum of $5 per week, subject to the provisions hereinafter set forth.

Delegate Armstrong (Memphis) commended the committee for its report, but stated he believed the assessment must be increased or the pension decreased in order to insure the stability of the fund.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays said the original law provided for only one class of pensioners, that the law had subsequently been extended and that at every convention efforts were made to further extend it. He said the original law was sound and the assessment adequate for its administration. Mr. Hays reviewed the pension law at length and said the recommendation of the committee would reduce the number of applicants and perhaps enable the payment of the pension for some years with the present assessment.

The substitute of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 10—By Delegate Gookin (Roanoke):

Amend section 5, article ix, constitution, beginning with the fifth line, to read:

For a continuous membership of one year or less, $75.

More than one year and less than two years, $100.

More than two years and less than three years, $125.

More than three years and less than four years, $150.

More than four years and less than five years $175.

More than five years and less than six years, $200.

More than six years and less than seven years, $225.

More than seven years and less than eight years, $250.

More than eight years and less than nine years, $275.

More than nine years and less than ten years, $300.

More than ten years and less than eleven years, $325.

More than eleven years and less than twelve years, $350.

More than twelve years and less than thirteen years, $375.

More than thirteen years, $400.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Gookin (Roanoke) said the intent of the proposition was clear.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 11—By Delegate Strange (Winnipeg):

Amend section 1, article iv, constitution, by adding:

District organizations of the International Typographical Union are entitled to elect one delegate, the certificate of a delegate so chosen to be signed by the president and secretary of said district organization.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 12—By Delegate Strange (Winnipeg):

Amend section 87, general laws, by adding:

The face (or reverse) of the said card shall contain "immediately upon taking up the work of a journeyman printer in any office, this card must be deposited with the nearest local union, or if said situation is not taken within the jurisdiction of any local union, said card must be deposited with the International secretary." Local unions shall refuse to recognize said withdrawal card when deposited, if there is any doubt as to said provision being adhered to, and failure to deposit said card shall debar said journeyman from exercising privileges granted by said card.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 13—By Delegate Marshall (Chicago):

Amend and renumber section 116, general laws, to read:

Change section 116 to section 132 and place first under the heading "Charges and Trials;" and make section read:

Section 132. Any member of a subordinate union having wronged his own or a sister union by the misappropriation of funds shall have his card revoked by the union of which he is a member, upon such union being notified of the misappropriation by its officers or under seal of the sister union, unless the delinquency is paid and forwarded to the union in which he is a defaulter. In case the defalcation is paid, the defaulting member shall be subject to the penalties hereinafter provided by section 133, excepting only the penalty of expulsion, and in lieu thereof may be debarred from holding any office or position of trust in the jurisdiction of the wronged union for such time as may be determined by three-fourths of the members of the local union in good standing voting at the trial.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Marshall (Chicago) stated that he desired to make the revocation of the card of a defaulter mandatory. He said the present law as found in section 116 of the general laws was inadequate to meet conditions that sometimes arose.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws explained the report of the committee and said the amendment placed the power to revoke the card of a member in the hands of the officers and not the union. He said the present law fully protected local unions.

Delegate Mitchell (Chicago) said he believed the present law was sufficient to cover all cases and favored the report of the committee.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegate Murphy (Providence) moved that Propositions Nos. 14 and 45 be read together.

Proposition No. 14—By Delegate Hetherington (Boston):

Substitute the following for article iii, constitution:

ARTICLE III—CONVENTIONS.

Section 1. The conventions of the International Typographical Union shall be held biennially on the second Monday in August at Indianapolis, Ind. All the arrangements for the same to be made by and at the expense of the International Typographical Union.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Stokes (Baltimore) favored the proposition and said the plan provided therein must eventually be adopted.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 45—By Delegates Higgins and Connolly (Syracuse):

Amend section 1, article iii, constitution, by inserting after the word "August" the following: "At the headquarters city," striking out "at such place as the delegates in convention assembled designate," the section to read as follows:

Section 1. The conventions of the International Typographical Union shall be held annually on the second Monday in August at the headquarters city, all the arrangements for the same to be made by and at the expense of the International Typographical Union. Provided, that once in ten-year periods, beginning with 1917, the convention may be held in Colorado Springs. This section shall become effective on September 1, 1920.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Higgins (Syracuse) stated the proposition was based on business principles and urged its adoption. He said the organization must come to it eventually and the step should be taken now.

Delegate Tullis (Dallas) opposed the report of the committee.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws pointed out that the benefits derived by local unions from conventions could not be estimated; conventions brought the organization to the attention of various cities. He urged the adoption of the report of the committee.

Delegates Gookin (Roanoke) and Johnson (San Francisco) favored the report of the committee.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegates Babb (Dayton) and Carter (Chattanooga) asked to be recorded as voting in the negative.

Delegates Rutherford (Baltimore), Loman (San Diego), Hughes (Albuquerque), Jones (Greenville) and Stephenson (Billings), who were not present at the first day's session, were then obligated.

The following was read:

CINCINNATI, OHIO, August 10, 1917.

John W. Hays, Secretary-Treasurer International Typographical Union, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

DEAR SIR—The Woman's International Auxiliary to the Typographical Union extend greetings and best wishes to all in convention assembled, and hope that success may crown all undertakings for the honor and glory of the International Typographical Union.

Respectfully and fraternally,
MRS. FRANK M. LONG,
Secretary-Treasurer, W. I. A.

President Scott said he regretted to announce the passing away of Delegate P. R. Pampusch, of St. Paul, Minn., representing Minneapolis Union No. 42, who died suddenly this morning. He said the officers of the convention would assist Delegate Cody (Minneapolis) in the return of the remains of Mr. Pampusch to St. Paul and aid him in this sad hour in every possible way, and that the convention could later take suitable action in the premises.

Delegate Lougheed (Detroit) moved that the report of the committee on appeals be made a special order of business for 11 o'clock Friday morning.

The motion was adopted.

Delegate Jones (Greenville, Texas) asked to be excused from attendance on account of an urgent message to come to Denver.

The request was granted.

The convention then adjourned to meet at 9:30 A. M., Thursday.

HOME DAY.

REPORT OF SECRETARY-TREASURER HAYS ON THE SILVER JUBILEE CELEBRATION HELD ON THE GROUNDS OF THE UNION PRINTERS HOME ON WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 15, 1917.

On the afternoon of August 15, 1917, about 2,500 people assembled on the grounds of the Union Printers Home in response to an invitation issued by the board of trustees in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the dedication of the Union Printers Home.

The board of trustees sent invitations to a large number of people representing international unions, local typographical unions and prominent business men to attend this celebration. Many responses were received, most of which expressed regret at being unable to attend. A few of these declinations are appended.

Lord Northcliffe, the special representative of the British government, who has been in this country for some time, sent the following:

NEW YORK, N. Y., August 3, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union of North America, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Much regret being unable to accept your kind invitation to come to Colorado Springs.

NORTHCLIFFE.

The following from Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, gives expression to his sentiments:

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 25, 1917.

The Board of Trustees, Union Printers Home, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

DEAR SIRS—Your invitation to attend the silver jubilee celebration of the Union Printers Home on Wednesday, August 15, at Colorado Springs is received.

I assure you that I appreciate your courtesy exceedingly, and I would indeed take pleasure in accepting, were it not for the fact that my engagements and duties are of such a character as will make it impossible for me to be away from the city for any length of time.

Thanking you for your kindness and thoughtfulness, and expressing the hope that the silver jubilee celebration may prove an enjoyable occasion, I am

Fraternally yours,
(Signed) SAMUEL GOMPERS,
President American Federation of Labor.

A few other letters are attached hereto as giving an idea of the general expression contained in the large number of declinations received:

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 10, 1917.

Board of Trustees, Union Printers Home, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

GENTLEMEN—I accept with pleasure the invitation to be present at your barbecue on the 15th inst. As one of the committee who received Mr. Childs when this institution was opened, it would be a pleasure to me to be at the silver anniversary.

Yours very truly,
J. A. HAYES.

DENVER, COLO., August 9, 1917.

The Board of Trustees, Union Printers Home, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

GENTLEMEN—I have your kind invitation to be present at your silver jubilee celebration, for which I send my sincerest thanks. I am starting with my family on a cross-country auto journey to spend my vacation, and therefore will not be able to be present.

I wish to express to you my sincerest wishes and congratulations. You have set an example with your institution which I sincerely hope will be copied by many other lodges.

There is nothing that I appreciate more than the care of the aged, which, since it is not taken care of by national legislation, should be the duty of the lodges to which a member has devoted his activities during life. Yours respectfully,

PAUL WEISS,
Consul for Switzerland.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., July 31, 1917.

J. W. Hays, Secretary-Treasurer International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

MY DEAR MR. HAYS—I was more than pleased to receive that evidence of remembrance in the form of an invitation to attend the silver jubilee of the Union Printers Home for union printers at Colorado Springs, August 15, 1917.

The memory of days which were fraught with hope and almost despair when the Home idea was first crystallized, and the active part which I took during those days as a member of the first board of trustees, elected at the annual meeting of the International Typographical Union in Atlanta, June, 1890, is very dear to me.

I have visited the Home on more than one occasion during these years, and in various places and at sundry times I have endeavored to open the minds of men of other walks of life to the great philanthropy of Messrs. Childs and Drexel to the boys and girls who "follow copy even though it should go out the window."

If possible to arrange affairs I shall be present in person and accept this invitation. Should I be unable to be present on this great occasion and to renew some very pleasant acquaintances of years' standing, I wish you would express my appreciation for this courtesy.

As far as I know, there are now but three of the original board of thirteen members living, and at the time of election I was the youngest member of the board by several years.

With every best wish for the success of each member of the International Typographical Union and of the continued benefits under this great institution, I remain,

Fraternally,
GEORGE A. MORGAN.

EL PASO, TEXAS, July 27, 1917.

J. W. Hays, Indianapolis:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Your very kind remembrance in sending me an invitation to the silver jubilee of the Union Printers Home at Colorado Springs was gratefully appreciated. I have been trying to plan on being present, but liberty bonds and the Red Cross have had the first call on vacation money, and I can not make it. I am still proud that my name is on the hospital building there and that the Home is expanding its usefulness.

Were I a millionaire and "just rarin' " to give away millions, one of the first millions would be to the Union Printers Home on Pikes Peak avenue.

The years have dealt very kindly with me physically, and I still feel as young (and younger) as I did when I visited the Home in 1894, when I was a trustee. Sometimes as I read the increasing roll call for "thirty" I wonder if I am not nearing the end of the hook. Till then to set each "take" right, in good time, giving square measure for square reward, is worthy any printer's ambition, and the highest type of unionism.

I hope you will have a great convention and that our great union will ever increase its stalwart service. Yours fraternally,

ALEX. DUGUID.

OTTAWA, ONT., July 31, 1917.

John W. Hays, Secretary of Board of Trustees, Union Printers Home, Indianapolis, Ind.:

MY DEAR HAYS—Your kind invitation to attend the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the Union Printers Home at hand. Unfortunately it will be impossible for me to get to Colorado Springs this year, but I assure you and the members of the board of trustees that it affords me great pleasure to testify to the noble work being done by the members of the International Typographical Union in looking after the aged and sick members. The work being done by the board is one that will redound to the credit of organized labor throughout the United States and Canada, and will have the blessing upon it of many sick and infirm members who have had their closing days made easier by the generosity and good will of all the members of the International Typographical Union by providing such a Home.

Hoping the celebration will be a great success, and with best wishes for the continued prosperity of the Union Printers Home and the members of the International Typographical Union, I am,

Fraternally,
MICHAEL POWELL.

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 23, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, President International Typographical Union, Indianapolis, Ind.:

DEAR SIR—I wish to thank you and the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home for the very kind invitation I received for Wednesday, August 15, and I regret very much that the necessity of my being in Chicago at that time prevents my accepting it.

I congratulate you on the success of this great work, and I am sure you have the best wishes of all the publishers of the country for its continuance. Very sincerely yours,

John W. Hays, Secretary Union Printers Home:

DEAR SIR—Your invitation inviting me to be present at the silver jubilee of the Home was awaiting me on my return to the city after enjoying four weeks' holidays. I regret that I can not be with the board in person to participate in the twenty-fifth anniversary.

It is a great pleasure to me to know that I am the only Canadian, dead or alive, whose name is engraved on the cornerstone of one of the best institutions in America. Fraternally yours,

W. H. PARR.

Philip Pfalzgraf, foreman of the composing room of the Cincinnati Times-Star, was present to represent C. H. Rembold, general manager of that newspaper, who had been invited to attend the ceremonies.

The committee representing the trustees had prepared the following program, which was presented in its entirety:

The following is the program of speaking arranged by the committee, and which was carried out on the veranda on the front of the Home building, the audience being mostly seated in chairs on the lawn and beneath the trees:

Chairman Hays—

About twenty-seven years ago the city of Colorado Springs offered to the International Typographical Union a site of ground on this hill on which to erect a home for the aged and infirm brothers of the organization. The union at that time was discussing the question of the organization of such a home, and later accepted the offer of this city, and on this ground was erected the portion of the building extending from here to the end of this main building.

Twenty-five years ago the dedication ceremonies of this building took place. At that time there was no such verdure as there is at the present time. In those days there really was no rain in Colorado, and the grass was brown. Twenty-one years ago the International Typographical Union held a convention in Colorado Springs. Eleven years ago again the convention of the International Typographical Union met in this city, and the number of delegates and visitors in attendance at that time was infinitesimal as compared to the number in attendance at this convention. The ceremonies on Home day eleven years ago were held on the steps at the main entrance, and the audience was taken care of in almost the space that is now occupied by the flower bed now in front of the main entrance.

Upon the twenty-fifth anniversary of the dedication of this Home the International Typographical Union again holds a convention in this city. The size of the convention and the number of people who are in attendance as visitors and ex-delegates is somewhat commensurate and in proportion to the improvements in the grounds and buildings of the institution since that time.

At this time I am going to introduce to you as the first speaker the governor of the state of Colorado. A good many of the people from the east have come to believe that the governor of the state of Colorado is always an opponent of trade unionism, and that his principal duties are calling out the state militia to keep the people from working in the mines, and to keep other people from preventing people working in the mines. At this time, however, I am enabled to introduce to you a governor who is not that kind of an executive—a man whose heart goes out to humanity and who is a friend of organized labor. I take pleasure in introducing to you Governor Julius C. Gunter.

Governor Gunter—

Mr. Chairman, Members of the Union, Ladies and Gentlemen—Nothing but a reason of substance would justify the chief executive of this state leaving the capital city at this hour and being without ear-reach of the many questions which are agitated there, but this gathering is a sufficient reason to claim his presence here.

Representing the people of the state of Colorado and manifesting the approval that those people feel for the personnel of this organization and for the superb humanitarian work that is being wrought out by its officers and membership, it is a matter of public policy, a matter of the purest humanitarianism to encourage and approve a work like this that means a concrete material manifestation of the love of man for man.

Here is an organization carrying in its ancestry a parentage which has performed its service upon every page of the history of our country. Over one hundred years ago American citizens gathered in congress and declared themselves free and independent people. One of the signers of that declaration of independence, one of the potential factors in the struggle consequent, was a printer. From that day to this, whether it has been upon the battlefields of our country, whether it has been in the cabinets of our presidents, whether it has been in the legislative halls at Washington city, you have found the printer representing the American people, and away from these spectacular scenes of the cabinet, the senate and the lower house of congress, you have found the printer waging a warfare to uphold principles which have meant so much to the history of our country. The American people have never had any great question presented to them for solution, commencing with the time of our declaring ourselves free and independent people, passing on to the acquisition of the various colonies, but what the American people have decided the questions right.

The chief executive of this state would be wanting in duty were he to permit a gathering of people representing the printers to gather under the shadows of our Peak and not be here to voice a welcome and to encourage this splendid work for humanity that you are carrying on.

Now, fellow citizens, is a time peculiarly appropriate for all of our citizenship to be gathered close together. If the time ever can be, if the time ever was when we ought to be helpful to each other, when we ought to think of our allies over the seas and our great Canadian neighbor, now is that time. We are entering upon a great contest—the duration of the conflict no man can predict. The success of that conflict, the triumph of the principles for which it stands, can only be achieved by an unselfish and patriotic union of all our people together.

A word as to your unions. Unions bring men together, make men think of each other, make men and women help each other; they are the instrumentality which elevates the lives of the present generation, which elevates the lives of the families of the people whom we love better than ourselves, and they are the instrumentality whereby the welfare of each country will be elevated. Look over the recruits that are now swelling your Colorado ranks. Examine the roster of your Colorado volunteers. They come in part—a large part—from the ranks of the worker, and likewise they come in large substance from the men affiliated with your unions.

It seems to me, notwithstanding the dark cloud that temporarily hovers over our country, that this world is growing better, and when the clouds lift from the scene of the terrible conflict in which we are sacrificing so much, the world will be fairer and the world will be better.

I am not here to make any extended speech. I am simply representing the people of the state of Colorado. We are proud as a people of this magnificent institution. We are prouder still of the heart throbs which in generosity have given it to your people—rather your people have given it to themselves. When the shadows begin to lengthen, when ill health comes upon the members of this union, they can gather here under Colorado skies, gather at their own home and enjoy the comfort and the peace that should attend the climbing years and should attend infirmities of life. I thank you.

Chairman Hays—

Those of you who attended the opening session of the convention on Monday morning will realize that the next speaker you will hear is well worth listening to. Although on Monday morning he tried to apologize to the convention because of the condition of his voice, I am told that since that time his voice has entirely recovered, and I am sure you will be well entertained today by the mayor. I take great pleasure in introducing to you the mayor of Colorado Springs, Charles E. Thomas.

Mayor Thomas—

The chairman has proved one thing that I have been endeavoring for a long time to prove—that is that there is little truth in printers. It has been my misfortune in life to make many mistakes, and I suppose I shall continue making them until the end. My good wife suggests that half of my time is spent in making mistakes and the other half in trying to correct them.

I am here again to apologize because of the sequence in the program which calls me at this time. I am more or less sentimental, although perhaps there are a lot of little ladies who would not think that, but I am easily led astray with music. Since early childhood music has been one of the things which has appealed to me most strongly. Early in life I thought the path of glory to fame lay along the line of vocal music; at any rate, my mother thought so—you know mothers are apt to feel that their sons can do almost anything—and I was put in the choir. I stayed in the choir for about three months, until our good minister who had baptized me came to me and said, "Charles, it is a case of you or the church. Which shall it be?" Well, you know what followed; but still my good mother thought perhaps there was a little injustice done, and she encouraged me to sing around the house, and there was some hope for me; but as I developed, married and settled down I felt that there was not that appreciation of my efforts to which I was entitled, and gradually I confined my efforts to the office in the back yard, where I knew I would disturb no one, still hopeful that the day might come when I should surmount the difficulty.

The only thing that ever convinced me that I could not and probably never would sing was one time when a young friend and I, after spending a week of dismal weather, went up to Port Rush from Belfast, and as we got there the sun came out for the first time in a week, the birds were chirping, and as I felt so happy I selected a piece I knew we both could sing—or, at least, I thought we could sing it. We sang the old song, "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground." As we wound up with the words, "All the darkies am a weeping," we came to an abrupt turn in the road and we bumped into three Irishmen, and one of them said, "Can you blame them?"

Now, ladies and gentlemen, during all my life I have endeavored to comply and follow the instructions given to me by those in authority. When I came here I was instructed to divide ten minutes with the picture man. The rest of you who sat in the picture will realize just how much time is allotted to me. You know they say that repartee is the bright and brilliant answer you think of when you have gone home. I was introduced to the convention in a rather peculiar manner, intimating that my speech on that occasion was a pre-election promise. I want to tell you from a short experience, they say a man can not sidestep taxes and death; to those you want to add these pre-election promises. Not long ago it was my pleasure to be called in to a meeting that had been arranged by a committee from the federal government and some of our leading citizens. The chairman on that occasion introduced me by saying, "This is the intellectual representative of the voters of this city," and some one said, "He is the representative of the intellectual voters of the city." The other day, when I was introduced to the convention as one who had been elected by the printers' efforts, was the first proof that I had that that statement was correct. I am here representing the intellectual voters, but we will go a little bit further than that and include all the good citizens of Colorado Springs. I want to say for those citizens that we are indeed grateful and complimented by the governor of the state being here upon this occasion. I want to say that the mistake made in introducing the governor as the governor of Colorado Springs was not a mistake in fact, only in word, because Colorado Springs is looked upon as the best part of the whole state.

It is indeed a pleasure for me to join with you in this celebration, to partake of your hospitality and to enjoy again the beauty of your home. We of Colorado Springs look upon it as our Home, feeling very much the same proprietary interest as you who have actually paid for it. That is but natural, for it is a place of beauty and attractive to all visitors in this community. Having experienced many times the cordial hospitality that is extended to all visitors who come within your gates, I can say that we have more reason than mere locality for feeling that it is our Home. The beauty is obvious to all; the magnificence of the structure is not passed by any, but only those who come in close association with it appreciate the real beauty of this institution, as one great step in the progress of industrial labor and of the advancement of the conditions of those who labor. It is a recognition of man's duty toward man. I know of nothing more appropriate than the little pictures which you have sent out from this institution as a souvenir, "Am I My Brother's Keeper?" You have recognized the fact that you are your brother's keeper, and this institution is the whole argument, all the evidence, and when that spirit has spread further and further until it animates every citizen of this great nation, until that time we still have the labor to perform in cultivating the seed which you have sown here. It is only within the last few years that in public life you dared to advance it, but eventually all good citizens will recognize the fact that every man must be his brother's keeper.

I feel in talking upon this subject a great deal like the senator in congress who had made a speech lasting some six hours. One of his admirers said to him, "Senator, did you talk as long as you could?" He said "No," His friend said, "Well, if you had talked as long as you could, how long could you talk?" "Well," he said, "that depends upon the subject. If it is a subject that I know from A to Z, and have analyzed it from every angle, I probably would cover all that I want to say, and more than I ought to say, in about twenty minutes; but on any subject with which I am not familiar I can talk indefinitely."

I feel it is my duty to let you listen to others far better qualified to talk to you than I am under the existing circumstances. I want to say that the city of Colorado Springs has been delighted with your presence here. We hope that you have enjoyed it; we apologize for the weather, and, incidentally, I will say that we do that occasionally, and we hope that the balance of your stay will indeed be pleasant. Thank you.

Chairman Hays—

Twenty-five years ago, when this building was dedicated, the chamber of commerce of the city of Colorado Springs was represented at that dedication by Horace G. Lunt, who made an address during the dedication ceremony. Today, after the lapse of a quarter of a century, the same gentleman is with us again, and I now take great pleasure in introducing to you the Hon. Horace G. Lunt, representative of the chamber of commerce of the city of Colorado Springs.

Hon. Horace G. Lunt—

You will remember that the poet Vergil in commemorating the noble deeds of the Romans made the old man Æneas relate the history of his country, because, as he said, "I took part in the glories of that time." So it is no more than just that upon the commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of your Home the present speaker should claim the distinction of having taken an humble part in the original celebration which marked the inauguration of this brotherly benevolent Home for the members of your union.

As upon that day I had the honor of welcoming those who came to the opening of the Home on behalf of the chamber of commerce of the city of Colorado Springs, so today as then, as representing the same body, I welcome his excellency the governor, the state officials, the officers of the International Typographical Union, the trustees of the Home and the printers of the country over, whose philanthropic sacrifices are evidenced by every brick and stone of this, their Home.

I think today that we can all count it fortunate that the meeting was held in Denver at the time when it became necessary to choose a site for your Home. The members were out in the west, then a comparatively far country from the fringe of the Atlantic, and I doubt not that some of the members agreed that the Home should be located here with some misgivings, but they were wise in their generation, and in locating the Home here were guided by the broad spirit of the west—

Out where the skies are a trifle bluer,
Out where friendship's a little truer,
That's where the west begins.

Out where the world is in the making,
Where fewer hearts in despair are aching,
That's where the west begins;
Where there's more of singing and less of sighing,
Where there's more of giving and less of buying,
And a man makes friends without half trying,
That's where the west begins.

You have before you today a realization of what the hand of man can do in reclaiming the desert. Will you let your memory revert twenty-five years? Will you imagine this beautiful spot as bare and bleak as those plains out to the east of us—not a tree, no shrubbery, no verdure, no flowers but the wild ones nature had strewn upon the bleak hillside? Out to the west of us lay the then small city of Colorado Springs, and if you could have stood here and looked to the west you would have seen a little procession winding its way from the city out over the unbroken ground and over the street that existed only upon the map which included this land.

Governor Routt was the honored guest of the day and came to lend the dignity of the state to the occasion, as today Governor Gunter has honored you with his presence and brings you the congratulation of the whole state. From the little stand, unprotected from the strong wind which played over us, we felicitated each other upon the happy occasion—the printers who had so generously and bravely given of their wages sufficient to complete the project, the city that had also aided, and the community, and, in fact, we congratulated the world that this Home expressed a brotherhood of mankind never before realized. The band played, the speeches were made, the sun shone as brightly then as today, and we separated hoping, yet hardly realizing, for the great success which has come to your Home. The then future has become the past and the present, and now you look upon this splendid realization of the benevolent purposes of those pioneer printers who conceived and carried to success this Union Printers Home.

So it is easy for you to now say how fine this all is, but on that day twenty-five years ago can you not believe that there was some misgivings as to the ultimate outcome of the scheme so broad and generous and far-reaching in its object? Maybe there were, but it was not expressed, and boldly and bravely those who then had charge of this Home went to work, and with those who have succeeded in the official possession, through energy, patience, perseverance, hard work, and through the assistance of the generous hearts of your whole craft, the union has reaped a reward rich and most justly deserved.

We do indeed welcome you again to our city, and with that welcome goes our hearts' profound desire and hope for a long-continued and preeminent success.

Twenty-five years have passed since that day, twenty-five years filled with great actions, catastrophes, hopes, joys and pleasures. Peace and prosperity prevailed throughout the country twenty-five years ago, but today while the sky is just as blue, the sun shines just as bright and the mountains are as grand as then, nevertheless a mantle of despair has spread itself over the world and men have fallen to the destruction of each other in a most appalling degree. It was then our birthday, but we can not hope that today is the birthday of a new freedom and of a democracy to prevail the world over, the birthday of a broad brotherhood of mankind, founded on justice, humanity and liberty and which shall prevail forever.

Without belittling in any degree any other organization that exists in our country, we can truthfully say that there does not exist within the bounds of our nation any other organization more loyal, more patriotic, more devoted to the principles of freedom and justice than the International Typographical Union, and this union standing for that freedom, that justice, that law and order, that brotherhood of mankind, will be as lasting as our own democracy.

Chairman Hays—

When the committee on arrangements of the board of trustees was considering this celebration, it, of course, took into consideration the fact that there might be a small shower, but I can assure you that in my opinion it will not last long, and you will be perfectly safe in keeping your seats.

The next speaker whom I will introduce in fact needs no introduction. He is the president of the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home, the president of the International Typographical Union, and is a man whose heart lies in work of this kind, a man whose heart goes out to humanity in such a way that the work he does for this institution is a joy to him first, last and all the time.

I take great pleasure in introducing to you President Marsden G. Scott, of the International Typographical Union and of the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home.

President Marsden G. Scott—

Ladies and Gentlemen—In bidding you welcome to this modest celebration of the twenty-fifth birthday anniversary of the Union Printers Home, I shall not attempt to rehearse the history of this institution. The printed page with its dry statistics, even when illuminated with the reproduced photograph, can not describe the Union Printers Home. Here a noble thought has developed into a flower which puts at naught the eloquence of the orator. Guided by the Master's hand, the members of our organization have builded a living monument to the fraternal spirit which has been the bulwark of the International Typographical Union.

The printer man of a quarter of a century ago was less prosperous than he is today. Walt Mason described one of his peculiar traits when he wrote:

The man whose eyes are wide apart,
Whose hands are reaching in his jeans,
Who listens rather to his heart
Than to the teaching of his brains,
Is apt to join the pauper crowd,
And perish after many knocks,
And wear a cheap, old-fashioned shroud,
And slumber in a misfit box.
Whereas, if he is shrewd and wise,
With lips that close up like a hasp,
With little space between the eyes,
And hands that freeze to what they grasp,
His death will fill the town with gloom,
And mourners will bewail the day,
And he will have a corking tomb
In which to loaf the years away.

What these lines may lack in literary polish is more than compensated for in their homely sentiment. The hands of the union printer have been reaching in his jeans for more than a hundred years. Many of us will not have a corking tomb in which to loaf the years away, but I am sure that

I express the sentiments of every member of the International Typographical Union when I say that if we were to have the choice between our partnership in this institution and a corking tomb, every one of us would choose the Union Printers Home.

If peace hath her victories no less renowned than those of war, then this institution is an emblem of one of the victories of peace. This Home represents a victory for the trades union movement. But for the fact that we printers are organized, this Home would not have been established, nor could it be maintained.

There are many printers in America who are not members of the International Typographical Union, but where in this broad land have they founded a home for their comrades, stricken in illness or rendered unfit by advanced years for further service in the industry?

This anniversary celebration is not an occasion for boastfulness, but rather it is a day on which the members of the International Union should congratulate themselves on the growth and development of the modest institution which our union created a quarter of a century ago. No greater benefit to the International Union could be suggested than to escort every member of our union through these beautiful grounds and buildings, if such a plan were feasible. Here are the rewards of co-operation, which words can but feebly describe. There is no other institution of this character and completeness, owned and maintained by a trade union, in all America. Therefore, our pride is pardonable. It may be that in the coming years we shall be able to do more for those of our members in need of assistance. Certainly no member of the union here this afternoon would wish to do less. I am sure of that.

There are many of us who believe that in this institution there lies the partial solution of one of the great problems of the industrial world. Where rests the responsibility for the care and maintenance of the men and women whose energy has been burned up in any industry? Has the state or the nation, or labor or capital, answered this question? Is humanity responsible to humanity? Shall industrial America go on indefinitely building corking tombs in which industrial barons are to loaf the years away, or shall the workers, tired and weary, be guaranteed a comfortable place in which to sit down and rest when the army of youth overtakes and passes them?

This afternoon there are assembled on the battle fronts of Europe countless thousands of men, fighting to preserve the institutions which an enlightened civilization has established. There in the front line trenches several hundred members of this union are wearing the uniform of the Canadian expeditionary forces. More than two score of our comrades have given up their lives in this war.

Here in the United States thousands of union printers are enlisting under the Stars and Stripes, or will be selected under the universal service act. The members of this International Union stand solidly and unreservedly back of the governments under which we live, ready to make the sacrifices which must be made if government by the people is not to perish.

It is not for us to question the mysterious ways of our Creator. We know that there has been a great awakening. We are confident that when peace shall have been established there will follow a better understanding between Capital and Labor, and that we shall find the solution of some of the problems which confront us on the industrial battlefields of America.

In behalf of the trustees of this institution, I desire to express to the governor of the glorious state of Colorado, to the mayor of this beautiful and most hospitable city, and to the representatives of its business institutions, our sincere appreciation of the honors conferred upon the International Typographical Union on this occasion. We thank you more than words can tell.

To all who have assembled here this afternoon, we extend a hearty welcome to our Home. We realize that this institution as it stands today in no sense completes our duty. We must preserve this institution, enlarge its capacity and bequeath it to the next generation of union printers.

Chairman Hays—

"The Union Printers Home." When the board of trustees was considering the program for today and decided that it wanted some one to respond to the title of "The Union Printers Home," it gave considerable consideration to the type of man who could best perform that service. They happily hit upon the man whom I am about to introduce to you, a man who has been a member of the International Typographical Union continuously for thirty-five or more years, a man who has known this institution from its inception, a man who is capable of representing the board of trustees in speaking to you upon this subject. I take exceptional pleasure in introducing to you Theodore W. McCullough, of Omaha Typographical Union, who will speak to you upon the subject, "The Union Printers Home."

Theodore W. McCullough—

Mr. Chairman, Governor, and the Mayor, Board and Officers, Ladies and Gentlemen—It seems almost a profanation for any man, no matter how eloquent, to attempt to speak to an assemblage of printers for the Union Printers Home in the presence of the Union Printers Home. It speaks for itself with voice more commanding, with eloquence more impressive than any to which man in all his pride and glory could possibly give utterance. It is more than that; even the humblest in thought or the most halting in speech could here find inspiration for an outburst of eloquence and overflow of soul and sentiment. I feel, despite the very generous words of the chairman, absolutely incapable of correctly or incompetently phrasing the sentiments that I know animate the heart of all the members of the International Typographical Union who have any cognizance whatever of the Union Printers Home, what it means and what it stands for. Where is there one within the jurisdiction who does not know that better far than I can tell them?

Throughout the universe we find exemplified the doctrine of interdependence. It is the first and the greatest law of creation, that all things created depend on one another. The same law permeates society. It would have been easy for the Creator to have made man independent, equipped with the powers to satisfy himself as to his wants and aspirations. He was wisely and generously deprived of that in order that he would be compelled to come together with his fellow men in social intercourse, in order that he might satisfy his needs and help to satisfy the needs of others, because out of his very necessity grew his most generous impulses.

The man who has the "corking tomb" the previous speaker referred to acquires that by paying little attention to the wants and necessities of those he meets along the way, while the man who sleeps in the "misfit box" is laid so because he did. But which of you would not much rather go and take your place with the man in the misfit box than lie alongside of him in the corking tomb, and have to take the onus that goes with the one and forego the gratification that must be the share of the other, because he must rest in his misfit box realizing in some way he has helped the man who marched along beside him?

In the development of society the various occupations and callings in which men found themselves had the effect of breaking society up into groups. You became a group of that society to which you belong because of the conditions surrounding the printing industry. The common thought and common aims of the printer brought about common aspirations and dreams. One of these was the establishment of a Home for the old and worn-out printers. It was discussed many times, by groups of printers, but to no definite end, until 1887, when the convention at Pittsburgh gave it definite favor.

When a ten-thousand-dollar check came into the convention at Pittsburgh with no strings on it, the delegates did not know what to do with it. They gave it to a committee to decide, and the committee came back and spoke to the convention and the convention to the organization of constructing a Union Printers Home, and just as it was said so many years ago on the shores of Galilee, "If ye have faith even as a grain of mustard seed ye shall say unto yonder mountains, be ye removed and cast into the sea, and it shall be done." Those printers at that time had that faith, even as a grain of mustard seed, and today you see the Union Printers Home, that almost represents one thousand ten-thousand-dollar checks in actual value, and who will undertake to estimate its worth to those who have shared its benefits—its comforts to the afflicted, its service to those who have been restored to health and usefulness, or whose last hours have been soothed by kindness beyond price?

As the mayor said about the congressman, the subject that he is best qualified to speak on he can handle definitely and fully in a few minutes. I could talk for hours, not because I am like the congressman, unfamiliar with the subject, because I do know. I have lived closer to this Home than many of you have. I would that every member of the International Typographical Union had lived as close to this Home as I have lived. He would be a better man for it. There are some things, although, that can not be passed briefly. The governor of the state, the representative of the chamber of commerce, the mayor of the city and the president of the International Typographical Union have all referred in passing to the philanthropic and altruistic aspect of this institution and the spirit that made it possible. It is very difficult today to think how very new that spirit is. In the great war that has been blazing throughout the civilized world for the last three years, the only humanitarian aspect has been the activity of the Red Cross, and people have come to look upon the Red Cross as an agency of mercy, and almost to think that we have had it forever, and yet the Red Cross is younger by many years than the International Typographical Union. I refer to that to show you how lately mankind has come to think of the human wreckage that strews the way. Even as late as 1859 the Red Cross had not come into existence. During our civil war we had no such thing as the Red Cross. It is only within a short time, a very short time, that society as such has paid any attention whatever to the industrial wreckage that has strewn the path of our material development. The typographical union was a pioneer in that movement; it began its efforts in an humble way; its attempts were sporadic, not always successful, and yet they were always leading up to the end; men spent their strength, gave their vigor, dissipated their energy in the industrial strife in order that they might have a place somewhere that would be of help and assistance to them at a time when they had reached the point when they could no longer do for themselves. This had required sacrifice, but sacrifice is our part; sacrifice is our duty. To quote from one of our great poets, "Not enjoyment and sorrow is our destined end and way; but to act that each tomorrow find us farther than today." This generation does not live for itself. It lives for its successors, just as the generation preceding this one lived for this. We are enjoying the fruits and efforts of those who went before us, just as the fruits that come from our sowing will be reaped and enjoyed by those who follow us. The president has said that he does not know what the future may be of this institution; no more do I. Nor can any one foretell with accuracy what may come. As Judge Lunt has asked you to revert back to the picture that greeted them here twenty-five years ago, so I ask you in your imagination to try to project the picture that will be presented here when the golden jubilee of the Union Printers Home is celebrated. If we can do in twenty-five years what we have done with the small membership that we had at the start, if we can do all of this, what can we do with the membership that is to be ours and with the future that is before us?

They have referred to the war, its possible outcome and its effect. None of us can tell what it will be. Most of us have our eyes only on the trenches. We hear the bursting shell, the screaming shrapnel, the roar of the battle; we see the dead and the pain and the suffering, but I ask you to look a little beyond the trenches; don't think of the millions who are struggling in the desperate conflict, but look beyond that and see a free Russia coming up where an autocracy has been forever overthrown. Look at the caste lines that have been destroyed forever in democratic England and democratic France. Look at the rising tide of democracy in Germany. In our own country we are publicly discussing today things we scarcely dared whisper in privacy a few years ago. We have paid a terrible price for it, but a terrible price has always been exacted for every great benefit that man has enjoyed, and I am optimistic enough to believe that those who follow will reap a benefit worthy this price that we have paid.

The doctrine of interdependence is being better understood every day. Man can not live for himself alone; man can not die for himself; man can not withdraw so far from association with his fellow men that his life has no influence on his fellow men. There are times when the clouded canopy is opened and you can look above and see the heavens at night dotted with the stars, and you feel as the Psalmist did when he said, "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth His handiwork," and I am minded always when I look on that to feel as did the old patriarch Job when he said, "What is man that Thou was mindful of him, or the son of man that Thou visiteth him?" This great world, the world of which we are so proud, is a speck so small that an astronomer on the nearest fixed star with instruments no more powerful than those with which ours are equipped could not detect our presence in space. Yet all the wonderful worlds swing on in their orbits in stupendous procession in obedience to that the primal law of interdependence. It is a physical fact that you can not disturb a particle anywhere in the created universe without affecting in some way every other particle in the created universe. And this physical law has its counterpart in the moral life of man. Each has some influence on all the others, and when that influence is properly co-ordinated with other lives and is directed along right channels, who is it can say what the end or what the effect will be.

Eleven years ago when the International Typographical Union convention assembled here there were 32,000 members in good standing. Today we have more than 62,000 members in good standing; we are growing, and as the world goes ahead we are going ahead.

This institution is a concrete evidence of the possibility of co-operative effort. We are making headway; the world is getting better; the world is a better world today than it was a year ago. It is a better world than it was ten or twenty-five years ago, simply because the mind of man is being opened up every day; his aspirations are being set higher, and his efforts are being made stronger because of these aspirations. There is no end to it, my friends; there is no limit that can be set. We will do what we can cheerfully and willingly, and in as good a spirit as we have done all that we have done so far.

Just as the Union Printers Home carried today a message of cheer to the aged and the invalid, just so it will continue to carry that message of cheer to the aged and the afflicted through the years to come; and as our organization grows in strength and rises in achievement, so the Union Printers Home will develop and grow and rise, always keeping just a little bit ahead of requirements, and trying to realize and fulfill as it does now the hopes, the aspirations, the ambitions and the dreams of the men and the women of the United States and Canada, who have made it possible. I thank you.

Chairman Hays—

As chairman of the gathering, I desire to join with President Scott in thanking the speakers who have appeared here today and for the welcome extended to the delegates, ex-delegates and visitors.

The barbecue that had been provided by the board of trustees and arranged for by Superintendent Daley and the matron, Mrs. Daley, was served as per program in tents on the Home grounds just outside the location of the pavilion. The repast was sumptuous and enjoyed by every one who was in attendance.

It can be said without any exaggeration that the Home day celebration and the silver anniversary of the dedication of the Union Printers Home was a complete success. The audience listened attentively to the various addresses and were obviously in full sympathy with the remarks and appreciative of the wonderful institution the anniversary of which was being celebrated. The International Typographical Union has reason to be proud both of the institution and of the number of people who attended its twenty-fifth anniversary celebration. There is no doubt but that the reports carried in various directions and to numerous localities by the people who were in attendance will be of great benefit to the organization as a whole and especially to many of its subordinate unions.

Credentials in regular form were presented by the following:

179. Leadville, Colo.—Ray Wilson.

Delegate Wilson was obligated and seated.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays reported he had conferred with the coroner regarding the death of Delegate P. R. Pampusch and that the coroner was of the opinion the demise of Mr. Pampusch was due to heart failure. He stated Representative Brady, under instruction from the executive council, would accompany the remains to Minneapolis.

Consideration of the report of the committee on laws was resumed.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON LAWS.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 16, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Your committee on laws respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Proposition No. 15—By Delegate Wiley (Denver):

Amend the general laws by adding the following new section, to follow section 145:

Section —. Accusations or charges against a member for violation of any of the provisions of section 109 must be made in writing by a member of the union, and may be made and presented to the president at any time after knowledge of the offense alleged comes to the member making the charges. Such charges must be signed by the member presenting them, and shall be accompanied by the affidavit of the party that he has been reliably informed and in good faith believes that the accused is guilty of the offense charged. Within five days after the presentation of such charges to the president he shall cause a copy thereof to be served upon the member accused, and shall together with such copy serve upon such accused member three copies of the following affidavit:

State of ——, County of ——, ss:

I, ——, do not belong to, nor have I ever at any time belonged to, or been a member of, or in any manner been connected with any secret organization or combination, oath-bound or otherwise, which organization or combination has as one of its objects the influencing or controlling or in any manner affecting the legislation or business or proceedings or elections of the International Typographical Union or of any local union. I do not now belong to, nor have I ever at any time belonged to or been a member of or in any manner been connected with any organization or combination existing contrary to the spirit or letter of section 109 of the general laws of the International Typographical Union.

Signature.....

(Verification).

The president shall present such charges to the union at its next stated meeting, when the member accused may, before further proceedings are had, file with the secretary of the union the three copies of said affidavit each duly subscribed and sworn to before a notary public residing within the jurisdiction of the local union. The secretary shall dispose of said affidavits in the following manner: One copy shall be forthwith delivered to the member preferring such charges; one copy shall be filed with the secretary-treasurer of the International Typographical Union, and one copy shall be retained by the local secretary and become a part of the files and records of the local union. Upon the delivery of said affidavits to the secretary of the union all further proceedings in such matter shall be postponed until the next stated meeting of the union, at which time the member preferring such charges may withdraw the same. Should the charges not be so withdrawn the president shall appoint a committee of five members to investigate the charges, and such investigating committee shall report its findings at the next regular meeting of the union. If the charges are found worthy of trial by the union, a trial committee shall be appointed or selected and such further proceedings had as are hereinafter provided.

Should the accused member fail or refuse to file with the secretary of the union the affidavits at the time and place hereinbefore provided it shall be conclusively deemed that the charges are worthy of trial and the president shall appoint a committee of five to try the case, or such committee may be selected by lot, if required by either party to the controversy. Before the trial committee shall organize each of its members shall duly sign and acknowledge before a notary public the affidavit hereinbefore set out and deposit the same with the secretary of the union.

The trial committee shall, after its organization, notify the parties of the time and place of sitting, and shall require the presence of such witnesses as shall be requested by the parties. Witnesses, residing within the jurisdiction of the local union, who shall after notification fail or refuse to attend before the trial committee, or who when present shall refuse to be sworn or to testify in full, shall be deemed guilty of conduct unbecoming of a union man and shall be fined the sum of $10 for the first offense, $25 for the second offense, and shall be expelled for the third offense, provided, however, any witness may refuse to answer any specific question upon the ground that his answer would tend to incriminate him, the question asked and the fact of refusal to answer shall be set forth in the report of the committee to the union.

Should any witness fail or refuse, after notification, to attend the sitting of the trial committee, or to be sworn, or to testify in full, said facts shall be reported by the committee to the next regular meeting of the union, and the trial of the original charges before the trial committee shall not be concluded until the said witness shall have complied with the requirements of the trial committee; provided, however, that the union may by majority vote instruct the trial committee to proceed without enforcement of such requirement. When the trial committee shall have arrived at its decision upon the charges presented, it shall at the next following regular meeting of the union report the evidence and its judgment on the case. Any member guilty of a violation of section 109 shall, upon conviction of a first offense, be deprived of the right to hold office in the local or International Union, and upon conviction of a second offense, shall be expelled.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Wiley (Denver) favored the proposition.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws explained that the proposed law paved the way for injuring a member by charges and then withdrawing them. He urged the adoption of the report of the committee.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 16—By Montreal (Canada) Union No. 176:

Montreal Union No. 176 begs to submit the following resolution to the convention at Colorado Springs for its consideration and approval:

That a Canadian vice-president shall be nominated and elected from the Canadian membership, to whom shall be addressed all matters pertaining to Canadian affairs. He shall be elected for two years by the Canadian electorate only and shall be subject to all rules and regulations governing executive officers of the International Typographical Union, and may be recalled from office by a three-fourths majority referendum vote of the Canadian electorate. He shall receive the salary of $2,000 per annum, and shall give his entire time to the duties of his office. Further, that the secretary-treasurer is hereby authorized to make all necessary changes in the laws, or sections thereof, to read in accordance with this resolution.

The following amendments are designed to carry out the intent of this resolution:

Amend section 2, article ii, by-laws, to read:

Section 2. Subordinate unions may nominate at the regular meeting in February one candidate for each elective office. Nominations shall be made by ballot and the names of all members who have announced their candidacy as is provided in the preceding section shall appear thereon. Candidates for president, first vice-president and secretary-treasurer who receive a majority of the votes cast shall be recorded as having received the endorsement of the union. Candidates for other offices who receive the highest number of votes shall be recorded as having received the endorsement of the union. It shall be the duty of one of the secretaries of each subordinate union taking action to immediately notify the secretary-treasurer, who is directed to close nominations at 12 M. (noon) on March 8, those received after that time to be disregarded; the secretary-treasurer shall publish in the April issue of THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL a list of the nominees and nominators, declaring the five candidates for each office who have been supported by the largest number of unions as nominees for the offices for which they were respectively named: Provided, That candidates for the offices of president and secretary-treasurer shall have at least fifty endorsers, and all other candidates, except those for offices allotted to the allied crafts, shall have at least twenty endorsers. Candidates for offices allotted to the allied crafts and typographical union in Canada shall have at least five endorsers.

Amend section 10, article ii, by-laws, to read:

Section 10. The selection of second vice-president shall be conducted in accordance with the spirit of the agreement between this organization and the German-American Typographia, which was adopted by popular vote in 1893. The selection of vice-presidents allotted to branches of the craft organized into trade district unions shall be conducted in accordance with the laws of the respective trade district unions with which they are connected. Unions competent to nominate candidates for vice-presidents allotted to branches of the trade not organized into trade district unions shall be restricted to those composed of members engaged at the respective trades. The selection of fourth vice-president shall be allotted to International Typographical Unions in Canada.

Amend section 1, article v, constitution, to read:

Section 1. The elective officers of the International Typographical Union shall be a president, a vice-president, a second vice-president, a vice-president for each of the allied crafts, a fourth vice-president nominated from the International Typographical Unions in Canada, a secretary-treasurer, such number of delegates to the American Federation of Labor as this body is entitled to by law, one delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress of Canada (who must be a member of one of the Canadian unions), such number of nominees as may be necessary to fill vacancies in the membership of the Union Printers Home Corporation, and an agent of the Union Printers Home.

Amend section 6, article vi, constitution, to read:

Section 6. There shall be an executive council, consisting of the president, the first vice-president, the second vice-president, the third vice-president, the fourth vice-president and secretary-treasurer, which body shall have general supervision of the business of the International Union and of subordinate unions.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Delegate Murphy (Providence) moved that propositions Nos. 17, 27, 31 and 18 be read.

The motion was adopted.

Proposition No. 17—By Delegate Jackson (Sacramento):

Amend section 105, general laws, to read:

Section 105. Not more than forty-eight hours shall constitute a week's work. No member of a subordinate union shall work more than six days in a week, nor more than the number of hours constituting a day's work in any jurisdiction multiplied by six, where a substitute can be obtained. Should any member work, through inability to secure a substitute, a greater number than six days in any one week, or whenever his overtime aggregates a day in hours, he shall give to the first available substitute such accumulated day or days: Provided, That subordinate unions shall specify the period (not less than thirty days) extra time shall be accumulative. All violations or evasions of this law shall be punished by a fine of not less than one day's minimum pay for each violation. And it shall be obligatory upon the part of the local unions in whose jurisdiction said violation occurs to impose and collect such fine. Members employed on seven-day papers shall employ competent substitutes to fill their positions when laying off. Six-day papers publishing Sunday editions shall be classed in the category of seven-day morning papers.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Jackson (Sacramento) stated he introduced the proposition at the request of an ex-delegate and inquired the reason the committee on laws reported it unfavorably.

Delegate Burt (Mobile) favored the proposition.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegates Boyd (Des Moines), Lougheed (Detroit), Cavanagh (New York), Beilman (Buffalo), Newton (Nashville), Alley (Nashville), Riser (Ogden), Woodward (Mason City), Winn (Birmingham), German (Springfield, Ill.), Reeves (Duluth), Jackson (Sacramento), Taylor (Kansas City), Bancroft (Kansas City), Neely (San Francisco), Coyell (Buffalo) and Lawrence (Hillsboro) asked to be recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 27—By Delegate Gilbert (Austin):

Strike out section 106, general laws, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

Section 106. It shall be optional with local unions whether situations on seven-day papers shall be seven-day situations or six-day situations. Provided, That no local union shall permit members to work more than six days in one week, when a substitute can be obtained.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegates Gilbert (Austin), Merritt (Houston), Armstrong (Memphis), Tullis (Dallas), Reeves (Duluth), Smith (Butte) and Park (Boise City) favored the proposition and stated they favored local autonomy in this and other similar matters.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws, Delegates Campbell (Norfolk), Cole (Toledo), Hoban (Cleveland), Smith (Pueblo), Murphy (Providence), Johnson (San Francisco), Steffen (Cleveland) and Keener (Tucson) favored the report of the committee and said the present law worked satisfactorily where properly applied and had resulted in creating more work.

Delegate Keller (New York) moved the previous question.

The motion was adopted.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegate Newton (Nashville) asked to be recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 31—By Delegate Colvin (Topeka):

Strike out section 106, general laws, and renumber the following sections. Section 106 reads as follows:

Section 106. No member of a subordinate union shall be required or permitted to hold a situation of more than six days or six nights or a combination of days and nights equivalent to six in one financial week, unless the local union is unable to furnish the required number of men demanded by the employer or his representative.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 18—By Delegate Anderson (Omaha):

Strike out sections 106 and 107, general laws, which read:

Section 106. No member of a subordinate union shall be required or permitted to hold a situation of more than six days or six nights or a combination of days and nights equivalent to six in one financial week, unless the local union is unable to furnish the required number of men demanded by the employer or his representative.

Sec. 107. No member of a subordinate union in whose jurisdiction machines are operated under a piece or bonus scale shall work on such machines more than six days in a week, nor more than the minimum number of hours constituting a day's work in any such jurisdiction multiplied by six, where a substitute can be obtained. Violation of this section shall be punishable by a fine of $10.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Anderson (Omaha) favored his proposition and explained that he presented it at the request of his union.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegates Anderson and Lemley (Omaha) were recorded as voting in the negative on proposition No. 18.

Delegates Winn and Carder (Birmingham) asked to be recorded as voting against the unfavorable report of the committee on laws on propositions Nos. 18, 27 and 31.

Delegate German (Springfield, Ill.) asked to be recorded as voting against the unfavorable report of the committee on laws on proposition No. 27.

Delegate Carter (Chattanooga) asked to be recorded as voting in the negative on the unfavorable report of the committee on laws on propositions No. 17 and 27.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays read the following:

Services in honor of Peter R. Pampusch, delegate from Minneapolis to this convention, will be held at 3 o'clock sharp at the undertaking parlors of Hallett & Baker, corner North Cascade avenue and East Bijou street.

These services will be conducted by the Rev. Carl Reed Taylor, delegate to this convention from Kansas City.

It is the desire of his colleague from Minneapolis and the delegates from the sister city of St. Paul, in which Mr. Pampusch's family resides, that as many as can of the visitors to this convention attend.

It is also the desire of those directly interested that the convention rise and stand for one minute at 3 o'clock sharp out of respect for our deceased brother.

Delegate Cody (Minneapolis) moved the adoption of the foregoing suggestion.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Delegates Taylor (Kansas City), Donovan and Thompson (St. Paul) were excused to attend the funeral of Delegate Pampusch.

Proposition No. 20—By Jackson (Tenn.) Union No. 24:

Amend section 156, general laws, to read:

Section 156. When a strike has been inaugurated under the provisions of sections 147, 148 and 150, the executive council shall pay to the order of the president and secretary of the union involved, for such time as the executive council may deem wise, an amount equal to twelve and one-half dollars ($12.50) per week for each married man and ten dollars ($10) per week for each single man entitled thereto.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Delegate Murphy (Providence) moved that propositions Nos. 21 and 102 be read.

The motion was adopted.

Proposition No. 21—By Delegate Wilson (Houston):

Strike out section 9, article v, by-laws, and renumber the balance of the sections, ending at article vi. Section 9 reads as follows:

Section 9. Any resident member at the Union Printers Home at Colorado Springs who is expelled from said Home shall not be eligible to the old age pension until one year after such expulsion.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 102—By Delegates Cox and Rifenberick (Albany):

Amend section 9, article v, by-laws, to read:

Section 9. Any resident member of the Union Printers Home at Colorado Springs who is expelled from said Home shall not be eligible to the pension until three months after such expulsion. Said expelled member shall not be eligible to reentry to the Union Printers Home until after one year after such expulsion.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Rifenberick (Albany) said the present law was too severe and urged the adoption of the proposition.

Digitized by Google

Delegate Cox (Albany) also expressed the opinion that the law now in effect was too severe. He said the proposition provided sufficient punishment for a violation of the Home rules.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws said the present law was in the interest of discipline and favored the report of the committee.

Delegate Keener (Tucson) said residents at the Home were familiar with the law and should obey it; that any change in the law would be against discipline.

Delegates Gookin (Roanoke), Cole (Toledo), Marshall (Chicago) and Gustafson (Boulder) favored the report of the committee.

Delegate Merritt (Houston) favored the proposition.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays said:

I want to say just a word as to the reasons for the adoption of this law as it is at present on the books.

Before its adoption a number of men in the Home who were of a sufficient age and had sufficient membership to be entitled to the pension, or who became of sufficient age while in the Home, would apply for the pension.

Of course, under the rules governing members in the Home, when the pension is granted to them they must vacate the Home.

After an application for a pension is made it generally takes sixty days before it can be acted upon. The law requires that the application for pension shall be published in THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL, which takes thirty or more days after receipt, so you can figure that at least sixty days' time will elapse.

From the time that their applications were made to the time that their applications were acted upon, members would defy the superintendent; they would dare him to expel them, believing they were going to get the pension within sixty days they did not care anything about the rules or the superintendent or anybody else, and it became necessary for the board of trustees to recommend that this law be adopted for the protection of the institution and the superintendent of the Home. The difference between the sixty days and the ninety days provided in this proposition does not seem to me to be time enough to make any difference in the action those people can take and will take if they are given their liberty. From the time this law was adopted there has been no trouble along these lines. Those who have made application for the pension have obeyed the laws and rules the same as they did before, and so have relieved the superintendent of a great deal of worry. I do not believe the proposition is sufficiently strong to protect the superintendent and the institution.

President Scott said:

There are many men in the Home who will never leave it alive. They are the men that you should consider. This proposition is not an action on the part of the convention to deprive any member of the union of anything. He deprives himself of it by his failure to observe the rules, and if he wants to retain his residence in the Home, if he does not care to observe the rules of the Home as far as he himself is concerned, then we should compel him to so conduct himself that he will not make his presence a burden upon those who are there to spend their remaining days at least in peace, and those who are there to get well and go out in the world again.

The report of the committee was adopted.

President Scott announced the hour for voting for the meeting place in 1918 had arrived.

Delegate Powell (Oklahoma City) moved that Secretary-Treasurer Hays be instructed to cast the entire ballot of the convention for Scranton, Pa., for the meeting place in 1918.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays cast the unanimous vote of the convention for Scranton as the 1918 convention city.

The following telegrams were read:

HOUSTON, TEXAS, August 15, 1917.

W. E. Merritt, Care Convention International Typographical Union, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

Houston anxious to entertain your convention. Please place this city in nomination for next convention, assuring delegates that all usual courtesies will be extended by the chamber of commerce. HOUSTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, August 15, 1917.

George A. Wilson, Convention Hall, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

Chamber of commerce asks that Houston be nominated 1918 convention. Notify Lawrence, Hillsboro. KEATING.

Delegate Rifenberick (Albany) invited the convention to meet in Albany in 1919. He said the president had agreed to give him two minutes, and that he could not present all of the message of his union on the subject in that time. It had been printed and would be placed on the desks of the delegates.

Delegate Mayer (Evansville) stated it is the intention of Evansville to ask for the convention in 1920.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON LAWS.

Delegate Murphy (Providence) moved that propositions Nos. 22, 25, 44, 101 and 125 be read.

The motion was adopted.

Proposition No. 22—By Delegate Bowen (Washington, D. C.):

Amend section 14, article v, by-laws, in the fourth line, after the word "war," by adding "or the war of 1917, known as the war with Germany."

As amended the section will read:

Section 14. Any member of the International Typographical Union in good standing at the time of enlisting in the regular or volunteer army or navy of the United States during the Spanish-American war, or the war of 1917 (known as the war with Germany) shall be considered as having been a continuous contributing member during such enlistment, providing he re-establish membership as soon as possible after the discharge from said war.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 25—By Delegate Dickinson (Cleveland):

Amend section 14, article v, by-laws, to read:

Section 14. Any member of the International Typographical Union in good standing at time of enlisting in the regular or volunteer army or navy of the United States during the Spanish-American war, and the war of 1917, shall be considered as having been a continuous contributing member during such enlistment, providing he re-establish membership as soon as possible after his discharge from said war.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Digitized by Google

Proposition No. 44—By Minneapolis Union:

Amend section 62, general laws, by adding the following:

It further shall be provided, that the International Union shall pay all International dues and assessments of those members who join the service during the war (except single men who have no dependents. The International Union shall be reimbursed from said single member's mortuary in case of death).

Amend section 1, article ix, constitution, by adding the following:

An increase of 5 cents shall be added to the International Typographical Union per capita tax during the war, said increase to be placed in the mortuary fund.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegate Cody (Minneapolis), acting under instructions, was recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 101—By the Chicago delegation:

Resolved, That the International Typographical Union assumes the task of keeping in good standing on its roster all members who are in the military service of the countries fighting for world freedom.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Mitchell (Chicago) stated the object of the proposition.

The report of the committee was adopted.

The Chicago delegation was recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 125—By the committee on laws:

Strike out section 14, article v, by-laws, which reads as follows:

Section 14. Any member of the International Typographical Union in good standing at time of enlisting in the regular or volunteer army or navy of the United States during the Spanish-American war shall be considered as having been a continuous contributing member during such enlistment, providing he re-established membership as soon as possible after his discharge from said war.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Your committee recommends that the following proposition be submitted to a referendum vote:

Proposition No. 134—By the committee on laws:

Proposition No. 1—

Shall the question of paying the International per capita tax of 50 cents per month and the old age pension and mortuary assessments of 30 cents each per month for members in war service be referred to subordinate unions with power to act?

Proposition No. 2—

Shall an assessment of 10 cents per member per month be levied to provide a fund from which subordinate unions shall be reimbursed for International per capita tax and old age pension and mortuary assessments paid by subordinate unions for members in war service? This assessment to be effective January 1, 1918, and to continue in effect during the war and until peace is declared by the governments under which this union has jurisdiction. Any surplus remaining undisbursed in such fund to be deposited to the credit of the old age pension fund.

The recommendation of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 23—By Delegate Bowen (Washington, D. C.):

Amend section 62, general laws, second line, after the words "Union Printers Home" before the comma, by adding:

"And those drawing the International Typographical Union pension," and in the fourth line, same section, after the word "Home," before the comma, add "or upon having a pension granted them," so the section as amended will read:

Section 62. Every member, except those residing at the Union Printers Home and those drawing the International Typographical Union pension, who shall be considered members in good standing, and who, upon admission to the Home or upon having a pension granted them, may take the option of accepting the minimum of $75 burial benefit * * *

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Delegate Murphy (Providence) moved that propositions No. 24 and No. 94 be read.

The motion was adopted.

Proposition No. 94—By Delegate Keller (New York):

Amend section 3 of article xvii, constitution, to read:

Section 3. Whenever more than 30 per cent of the membership of each of one hundred or more subordinate unions, representing at least 20 per cent of the membership of the International Typographical Union, voting in the affirmative in meeting assembled (such vote being certified to by local officers to the executive council), petition the executive council for the submission of any proposition or amendment, the endorsements of such petition having been secured within three months, the proposition or amendment shall be submitted to the membership within six months of the receipt of the required number of petitions, and the vote taken and canvassed in the same manner as amendments and propositions referred to the membership by the convention of the International Typographical Union. Provided, the executive council may submit to the referendum vote propositions which require immediate action without petition of one hundred local unions. All such propositions and amendments shall be published to the craft a reasonable time before the vote thereon.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Keller (New York) said he is strongly in favor of the referendum and said its adoption by the International Union had been of much benefit to the organization. Mr. Keller analyzed the two propositions before the convention and urged the adoption of the one he offered as calculated to get the best results and the true sentiment of the membership.

Delegates Gookin (Roanoke), Reeves (Duluth), Winn (Birmingham), Marshall (Chicago) and Smith (Butte) opposed any curtailment of the referendum and favored allowing the present law to stand.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws explained the report of the committee.

Delegate Powell (Oklahoma City) favored the adoption of proposition No. 94 and explained the initiative and referendum as in operation in his state.

Delegates Johnson (San Francisco), Coyell (Buffalo), Murphy (Providence), Hoban (Cleveland), Tullis (Dallas) and Keener (Tucson) favored the report of the committee on proposition No. 94.

The previous question was ordered.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 24—By Delegate Reeves (Duluth):

Amend section 3, article xvii, constitution, by striking out sentence referring to executive council, after the word "provided" and substituting the following:

The executive council may submit propositions to referendum vote upon publishing same in THE JOURNAL and receiving the endorsement of twenty-five (25) local unions thereon within sixty (60) days after such publication.

Committee offers the following substitute:

Section 3. Whenever 150 subordinate unions shall petition the executive council for the submission of any proposition or amendment, the endorsements of such petition having been secured within three months, the proposition or amendment shall be submitted to the membership within three months of the receipt of the required number of petitions, and the vote taken and canvassed in the same manner as amendments and propositions referred to the membership by the convention of the International Typographical Union. Propositions submitted to subordinate unions for endorsement or to the membership for adoption as herein provided, must be drafted in proper form and shall include all sections or articles amended or repealed by such proposition. Laws or parts of laws to be repealed shall be placed in brackets, and amendments to existing laws and new laws shall be printed in bold-face type: Provided, the executive council may submit to referendum vote propositions which require immediate action without petition of local unions. All such propositions and amendments shall be published to the craft a reasonable time before the vote thereon.

Delegate Dunkle (Baltimore) moved that the substitute of the committee for proposition No. 24 be laid on the table.

The motion was lost by a vote of 82 for to 106 against.

The report of the committee was adopted by a vote of 108 for to 88 against and by the following roll call:

the attainment of twenty-fifth birthday of Union Printers Home. The establishment and its successful management in those years attest its reputation as the greatest institution of its kind in the world. We feel honored to be able to extend on this auspicious occasion best wishes for continued success and for greater development and achievement.

JOHN J. HURLEY, Mayor;
ROBERT S. MALONEY,
President City Council.

SEATTLE, WASH., August 15, 1917.

J. W. Hays, Secretary International Typographical Union, Convention Hall, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

Seattle Union endorses Victoria Union's resolution concerning pension and mortuary funds, providing that committee be appointed at convention and actuary engaged to investigate and make recommendations for amendments necessary to place these benefit features on a sound basis.

R. M. MCCULLOUGH.

CHICAGO, ILL., August 16, 1917.

Marsden G. Scott, Convention International Typographical Union, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

Very sorry I can not attend your convention because our convention meets in Rochester, N. Y., next Monday. I extend hearty greetings and best wishes for a successful convention and I urge your convention to immediately telegraph to Washington your emphatic opposition to any increases whatever on second-class postage; this is the greatest menace now confronting the printing trades.

MATTHEW WOLL.

The following was read by order of the convention:

Proposition No. 135—

LOUISVILLE, KY., August 11, 1917.

J. W. Hays, Secretary International Typographical Union, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I regret exceedingly my inability of attending and addressing your convention in behalf of our organization, and therefore extend to the officers and delegates the fraternal greetings of the Tobacco Workers' International Union, with the hope that the convention will be harmonious, as well as beneficial to the rank and file of your International Union, and in deliberating for the interest of your membership trust you will not overlook the other men and women who, through their associated efforts, are endeavoring to uplift the cause of the toiler to shorter hours, higher wages, and sanitary conditions in their industries. Also enclosing resolution of the Tobacco Workers' International Union, of which we kindly ask your favorable consideration and adoption.

Fraternally yours,
A. MCANDREW,
International President.

Whereas, It is an assured fact that the union label is one of the most potent factors for the advancement of the most vital interests of the membership of our trade-union movement, and by which we are enabled to help each other in discriminating between union and non-union made products when purchasing commodities for our daily needs; and,

Whereas, The Tobacco Workers' International Union having a union label, is seeking a wider demand for tobacco, cigarettes and snuff bearing the union label; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the International Typographical Union, in convention, assembled in Colorado Springs, Colo., August 13, 1917, that inasmuch as union-labeled tobacco, cigarettes and snuff of the best qualities are marketed in parcels that come within the reach of all consumers, and easily accessible to all purchasers, they should receive a larger share of the purchasing power of union men and their friends; and, be it further

Resolved, That it is the consensus of opinion of the delegates attending this convention that the practice of demanding the union label on our purchases has heretofore not given the results we have a right to expect. In view of this condition we give a renewed expression of our fealty to our cause, and pledge our effort to creating a more extended demand for union-label tobacco, cigarettes and snuff, thereby employing union men and women working in the tobacco industry.

Referred to committee on label.

The convention adjourned until 2:30 P. M.

Delegate Brown (Salina), having received a telegram calling him home, was excused from further attendance on the sessions of the convention.

With unanimous consent, Delegate Smith (Butte) read two telegrams regarding the metal mine workers' union and briefly explained the situation in Butte as regards the mine workers.

Consideration of the report of committee on laws was resumed.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON LAWS.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 16, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on laws respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Proposition No. 26—By Delegate Gilbert (Austin):

Strike out section 107, general laws, which reads as follows:

Section 107. No member of a subordinate union in whose jurisdiction machines are operated under a piece or bonus scale shall work on such machines more than six days in a week, nor more than the minimum number of hours constituting a day's work in any such jurisdiction multiplied by six, where a substitute can be obtained. Violation of this section shall be punishable by a fine of $10.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegate Gilbert (Austin) was recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 28—By Delegate Owens (Cincinnati):

Add the following new section to the general laws under heading, "Typesetting Machines":

Section 96. All matrices shall be so plainly marked on the face as to be easily read by operators. This marking shall be done by deeply sinking the letter on the face of the matrice and using a white enamel to outline said letter.

Committee offers as a substitute the following:

Resolved, That every effort should be made by line-casting machine manufacturers to make the face of matrices readable to the operator without requiring undue effort to read same.

The substitute of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 29—By Delegate Owens (Cincinnati):

Amend section 121, general laws, as follows:

Section 121. Foremen of printing offices have the right to employ help, and may discharge (1) for incompetency, (2) for neglect of duty, (3) for violation of office rules (which shall be conspicuously posted), or of laws of the chapel or union, and (4) to decrease the force, such decrease to be accomplished by discharging first the person or persons last employed, either as regular employes or as extra employes, as the exigencies of the matter may require. Should there be an increase in the force the persons displaced through such cause shall be reinstated in the reverse order in which they were discharged before other help may be employed. Upon demand, the foreman shall give the reason for discharge in writing. Persons considered capable as substitutes by foremen shall be deemed competent to fill regular situations, and shall be given preference in the filling of vacancies in the regular force. Extra work to be given to qualified subs in the order of their priority. This section shall apply to incoming as well as outgoing foremen.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegates Maher (New York), Owens (Cincinnati) and Tullis (Dallas) favored the proposition.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws, Delegates Murphy (Providence), Coplan (Toledo), Marshall (Chicago), Keller (New York) and Cavanagh (New York) supported the report of the committee.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegates Shields (Chicago), Maher (New York), Burt (Mobile) and Park (Boise City) asked to be recorded as voting in the negative.

President Scott then called attention to the fact that the proposition, had it been adopted, would have abolished the priority law in the filling of situations.

Proposition No. 32—By Delegate Colvin (Topeka):

Amend section 1, article ix, constitution, beginning at line four, by changing that clause to read as follows:

An additional seventy one-hundredths (.70) of one per cent assessment on the earnings of members for old age pension fund * * *

Amend section 6 of the by-laws, beginning at the middle of the thirteenth line, by changing that clause to read as follows: "may receive the sum of seven dollars ($7) per week."

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 46—By Delegates Higgins and Connolly (Syracuse):

Add new section to the general laws, to read:

Section —. In local unions under the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union entitled to one delegate to International conventions, the financial secretary shall, by virtue of his office, be the delegate to the convention; that in unions of more than one hundred members and less than five hundred members the president and financial secretary or secretary-treasurer by virtue of their offices shall be the delegates to the convention; and that in unions entitled to more than two delegates, the president and financial secretary or secretary-treasurer by virtue of their offices shall be the delegates to the convention, and the local union shall proceed by election to select the additional delegate or delegates, or it may designate the vice-president, chairman of the executive committee, or any other local officers who, by reason of their duties, are peculiarly fitted for the position of delegate to act in that capacity.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Higgins (Syracuse) said the proposition was offered at the request of Syracuse Union.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 47—By Kansas City (Mo.) Union:

Add new section to general laws, to read:

Section —. Subordinate unions shall require reports to be made, by chapel chairmen and members, of all accidents occurring in the composing rooms under their control. Such reports shall clearly indicate the nature of the accident, the particular part of the machine where, and the circumstances under which, the accident occurred, and suggestions, if any, as to how such accident might have been avoided. Blanks shall be provided by the office of the secretary-treasurer, to whom such reports shall be forwarded, and the statistical and other information thus collected shall by the secretary-treasurer be reported to the annual convention, together with recommendations looking to the safeguarding of machinery and other necessary steps against accidents to our members.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 48—By Delegate Johns (New York):

Amend section 128, general laws, to read:

Section 128. Any member of the International Typographical Union employed in an official capacity by his local union or by the International Typographical Union, or any member incapacitated by illness shall not lose his priority in the office in which he is employed. Provided, that at the end of three months the situation may be filled by the foreman, but upon again reporting for duty the situations formerly held by these members shall be restored to them.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 49—By New York Hebrew-American Union:

Amend section 36, general laws, to read:

Section 36. No person shall be admitted to membership in a subordinate union who has not served an apprenticeship of at least five years, and who has not satisfactorily proved his competency through a practical examination by such union, except with the consent of, * * *

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 55—By Delegate Digges (Phœnix):

Amend section 18, article v, by-laws, under the heading "Mortuary Benefits," by striking out the words "for funeral expenses" in the third line, the section to read:

Section 18. * * * after the payment of bills guaranteed by the local union and International per capita tax, old age pension and mortuary assessments and local dues paid by the local union.

Amend section 19, article v, by-laws, by striking out the words "for burial expenses" in the seventh and eighth line, the section to read:

Section 19. * * * accompanying such notice with the last working card or traveling card of the deceased member, and such bills of the deceased member, and for such International per capita tax and old age pension and mortuary assessments and local dues as have been guaranteed or paid by the subordinate union. * * *

Amend section 19, article v, by-laws, by striking out the word "funeral" in paragraph 1, and add after the word "expenses" in the same line the words "guaranteed by the subordinate union with which the deceased was affiliated at the time of his death," the section to read:

1. To the payment of the expenses guaranteed by the subordinate union with which the deceased was affiliated at the time of death.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Digges (Phœnix) said his proposition was desired for the protection of local unions. He recited at length the difficulties of Phœnix and other locals in the southwest in caring for sick members and looking after their burial. He urged the adoption of the proposition.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws explained the intent of the present law and said the proposed law would open the way to unlimited expenses and would leave nothing for the widows and orphans.

In conformity with the action of the morning session the delegates stood in silence for one minute in honor and in memory of Delegate Pampusch, whose demise occurred yesterday.

Delegate Keener (Tucson) said he was from the southwest and conversant with conditions there. The situation was a difficult one and could not be met by law. He favored the report of the committee.

Delegate Rutherford (Baltimore) favored the report of the committee.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegate Digges (Phœnix) was recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 57—By the Kansas City delegation:

Amend section 129, general laws, to read:

Section 129. Members legally discharged according to the provisions of section 121, except to reduce the force, can not be reinstated within six months without the consent of the foreman.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Bancroft (Kansas City) favored the proposition.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 58 -By Delegate Oliver (Denver):

Add to section 53, general laws, the following:

Upon application to every local secretary by an apprentice for registration, the secretary shall require a medical examination certificate from the applicant's family physician (or other reputable practitioner) that he is of sound bodily health and his continuance in such vocation would not be hazardous to his health.

Committee reports unfavorably, as the proposition is covered by recommendations on page 93 of the general laws, under the heading "Apprentice Regulations."

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 59—By Delegates McArdle and Fullam (New York Mailers):

Add new section to general laws, to read:

Section —. All classes of mailing, regardless of whether done by hand or power, is part of the mailing trade, and is under the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union.

Committee reports favorably and recommends that resolution 17 on page 109 be stricken out of the book of laws.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 67—By Delegate Connolly (Syracuse):

Amend section 5, article vi, constitution, by adding after the word "corporation" in the twenty-second line the words, "and one of the delegates to the American Federation of Labor."

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 68—By Delegate Connolly (Syracuse):

Amend section 1, article viii, constitution, by striking out the figures "$3,500" in the seventh and fifteenth lines and substituting "$7,000" therefor.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Connolly (Syracuse) said he was satisfied with the previous action of the convention on this subject.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 76—By the committee on laws:

Amend section 66, general laws, to read:

Section 66. Members of subordinate unions shall stand suspended when four months in arrears for local or International dues or assessments. Suspended members shall have no standing in the organization and shall be entitled to no benefits. For reinstating suspended members the local union shall collect such local and International Typographical Union dues and assessments as were due at the time of suspension, together with such International per capita tax and assessments as would have accrued to the time of reinstatement. In addition to this there shall be collected a reinstatement fee of not less than $5. Two dollars of each reinstatement fee, together with all other dues and assessments due the International collected by subordinate unions, shall be transferred to the secretary-treasurer of the International Union and accrue to the International funds. Provided, that where a suspended member works at the printing business or is guilty of conduct unbecoming a union man during the period of his suspension, he must make application for new membership. It shall be the duty of subordinate unions, on request of a member who is sick or disabled, and who shows that he is in destitute circumstances, to protect his membership in the organization during such sickness or disability, the local union to be reimbursed for this expenditure by the member benefited after recovery.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 77—By the committee on laws:

Amend section 1, article ix, constitution, "Revenue and Funds," to read as follows:

Section 1. The revenue of the International Typographical Union shall be derived as follows: From dues, which shall be 45 cents per month per member; an additional one-half on 1 per cent assessment on earnings of members for old age pension fund, and an additional one-half of 1 per cent assessment on earnings of members for the mortuary benefit fund: Provided, that not less than 30 cents each per month shall be collected for the old age pension and mortuary funds; from charters for subordinate unions; from necessary supplies at prices to be fixed by law. International dues and assessments for each month shall be collected by subordinate unions, and shall be transmitted to the secretary-treasurer of the International Typographical Union before the twentieth of the succeeding month. Unions failing to comply with this provision shall be considered delinquent and debarred from benefits: Provided, that unions located so far from headquarters as to make it impossible for their dues to reach there within the prescribed time shall not be considered delinquent if their remittances bear postmark date prior to the fifteenth of the succeeding month.

Committee reports favorably.

Delegate Gookin (Roanoke) asked the intent of the amendment.

President Scott stated the proposition established a minimum amount that each member must pay monthly.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 78—By the committee on laws:

Amend section 52, general laws, to read:

Section 52. Subordinate unions shall collect, in addition to the local initiation fee, a registration fee from each initiate as follows:

Less than 25 years at next birthday	$ 3 00
Less than 35 years at next birthday	5 00
Less than 45 years at next birthday	10 00
45 years and over	20 00

Which shall be transmitted to the International Union with the name of the initiate. The secretary-treasurer shall apportion the receipts from registration fees as follows: One-third to the old age pension fund, one-third to the mortuary fund, and one-third to the general fund.

Committee reports favorably.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws explained the proposition and said it was intended to make an applicant joining late in life pay a larger fee than the one who comes in as soon as he completes his apprenticeship.

Digitized by Google

Delegate Gookin (Roanoke) objected to the wording of the law.

Delegate Smith (Butte) moved that the proposition be referred back to the committee on laws for revision.

The motion was adopted.

Committee offers in lieu of Proposition No. 78 as first introduced the following:

Proposition No. 78—By the committee on laws:

Amend section 52 of the general laws to read:

Section 52. Subordinate unions shall collect, in addition to the local initiation fee, a registration fee from each initiate as follows:

Less than 25 years at next birthday	$ 3 00
More than 25 years and less than 35 years at next birthday	5 00
More than 35 years and less than 45 years at next birthday	10 00
45 years and over	20 00

Which shall be transmitted to the International Union with the name of the initiate. The secretary-treasurer shall apportion the receipts from registration fees as follows: One-third to the old age pension fund, one-third to the mortuary fund, and one-third to the general fund.

Proposition No. 78 as revised was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 79—By the committee on laws:

Add new section to general laws under heading of "Powers of Subordinate Unions," to read:

Section —. On and after August 1, 1918, individuals or subordinate unions are forbidden to use the name of the International Typographical Union in any manner in soliciting advertising for convention souvenirs.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 88—By Delegate Hassett (Memphis):

Amend section 36, general laws, by adding:

No person shall be admitted to membership in a subordinate union who has reached the age of 50 years, unless he has formerly been a member.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Hassett (Memphis) urged the adoption of the proposition.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the laws committee favored the report of the committee.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays spoke in favor of the report of the committee.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 90—By Delegate Merritt (Houston):

Whereas, The enacting clauses of section 7, article vi, constitution, known as the Duluth amendment, adopted by referendum, contained the following title:

"A proposal creating a board of auditors for the International Typographical Union of North America and the Union Printers Home Corporation and amending the constitution and laws to provide therefor" and, together with others, a paragraph reading:

"For the purposes above set forth, the constitution shall be amended as follows -necessary consequent changes in the laws being hereby authorized and directed—"

following which changes to be made in the constitution were specifically set forth; and,

Whereas, Only amendments to the constitution require action by referendum; it is

Resolved, That adoption of the above-quoted title and paragraph repealed sections 23 and 24, article v, by-laws.

Resolved further, That the secretary-treasurer be directed to strike from the book of laws said sections 23 and 24, in accordance with article xviii, constitution.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Merritt (Houston) said the object of the proposition was to take the selection of the expert accountants from the president and place the same with the board of auditors, as was the intent of the Duluth proposition. He urged the adoption of the proposition.

President Scott said:

The object of the proposition is to take from the officers of this union the authority to have the books and accounts of the International Typographical Union audited.

Now, gentlemen, remember that this last year you did a business of more than one million dollars, at the headquarters office in Indianapolis. There are more than one million dollars in absolutely gilt-edge securities and cash on deposit to the credit of this International Union in the banks and safe-deposit vaults in Indianapolis.

The men who handle the funds of this union are under heavy bonds. One of the men who audits the books of the union under the provisions of the law referred to is cashier of the Fletcher-American National Bank, in the city of Indianapolis.

Do you think it is wise to take out of the hands of the men you elect to the highest offices in this union the responsibility of having an accurate audit of these books?

So far as the board of auditors is concerned, when they first came to Indianapolis I told them I had no recommendation whatever to make; they had been elected by the membership and it was up to them to decide what they should do as to experts.

I am sure that each member of the board of auditors will agree with me when I say that they could not audit those books without the assistance of experts—that they selected the experts who had previously examined the books was their right. It was not on my recommendation, because I had made no recommendation to them.

If the executive officers of this organization, which is doing a business of one million dollars a year, are to be deprived of the authority to engage expert auditors, then I say when you take that step you are taking a step which is not a business proposition.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws read from the report of the International board of auditors, dated February 3, 1917, in which it recommended the present dual system of auditing the books of the International Typographical Union be continued.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays said:

I desire to say a few words at this time, not particularly on the proposition before the convention, except to say that I do not believe that it is in order.

Article xviii of the constitution under the head of "Conflicts and Changes" provides: "Section 1. All laws and parts of laws in conflict with this constitution are hereby repealed or changed in accordance therewith, and the secretary-treasurer is hereby authorized to make necessary changes." Sections 23 and 24 mentioned in the proposition, and which the secretary is directed to take from the book, provide that "The president shall cause the books and accounts of the secretary-treasurer and the officers of the Home Corporation to be audited twice a year," and provide that the president is authorized to appoint the auditor.

The Duluth proposition, under the head of "Revenue and Funds," provides that the auditing board elected by the membership may appoint expert auditors. There is no conflict between sections 23 and 24 and the Duluth proposition contained in section 10. It is simply in one case a direction to the president that he shall appoint auditors, and in the other an authorization to an auditing board that it may employ expert auditors. From the time that this Duluth proposition was adopted to the present time there has appeared in certain publications that are opposed to what is called the "administration" of the International Typographical Union attack after attack on the secretary-treasurer for the reason that he has not taken from the general laws sections 23 and 24 because of the adoption of the Duluth proposition. I say here that he had no right to take from the general laws the sections mentioned, and if he had no right to take from the general laws the sections mentioned, I do not believe this convention has the right—at least it should not direct him to take them from the general laws. If this convention wants them taken from the general laws, then the convention should take them; they should take the action and not saddle it onto the secretary-treasurer. It is very well to give a referendum to the proposition, and then after it has gone through the regular channels, been adopted and become a law, and you find out that you have not got it complete, and you have not put in everything you want, to turn around and say that the executive officers of the organization should take the responsibility and fix it up for you. I want to say that it is not the way that business is done in Indianapolis in the headquarters of the International Typographical Union.

I agree with President Scott that the head of the organization, the man who is located at headquarters where the books are kept and the business of the organization is transacted, should be held responsible for having the accounts of the secretary-treasurer thoroughly audited, and the secretary-treasurer is more anxious than is the president or any member of this organization to know that his accounts are audited by people who know the business of auditing, and when the auditors make their reports that he knows whether the books are correct or not.

I do not believe that three members that you can pick out of the 60,000 that would run for the office and be elected as auditors of the International Typographical Union can be found who are competent to audit those books. I do not believe that three men coming from various sections of the country and taking those books to audit are competent to pick out an efficient set of expert auditors to assist them, unless they bring them from their own locality.

It costs the International Typographical Union about $600 per year for these expert audits. The expense of the audits that will be made by the auditing committee, without getting additional expert auditors, will be about $3,000 per year, and if they hire expert auditors, that cost may be doubled —at least it will be greatly increased. Now, the audit can be no better, even though they get the best experts that can be had and pay them the highest prices that may be demanded by expert accountants or firms who are in the business of auditing accounts, and hire men whom they consider experts and send out to do this kind of work. I will say to you that these firms are not moderate in their charges. I will say to you if we were to employ people from institutions that do regular auditing work, our audit would cost us much more than it does now, and be no better.

I want to reiterate in closing, I do not believe that this convention should adopt this proposition instructing the secretary-treasurer to strike something from the books that the convention should strike from the books if it wants those sections eliminated.

Delegate Marshall (Chicago), speaking as one of the original supporters of the Duluth proposition, said he had examined the system of accounting at headquarters and believed it could not be improved upon. He thought the present system all right and favored the report of the committee.

Delegate Rutherford (Baltimore) favored the report of the committee.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegate Merritt (Houston) was recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 91—By Delegate Merritt (Houston):

Insert after the word "typesetting" in third line of section 91, general laws (last line of page 69, book of laws), the words "and typecasting," making section read as amended:

Section 91. The International Typographical Union demands that in all offices within its jurisdiction, where typesetting and typecasting machines are used, practical union printers shall be employed to run them; and also that subordinate unions regulate the scale of wages and the hours of work on such machines.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Merritt (Houston) said the Houston contract allowed the employment of a non-member on a typecasting machine, and his proposition was intended to remedy this situation.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee), of the committee on laws, favored the report of the committee.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegate Merritt (Houston) was recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 93—By the executive council:

Amend section 139, general laws, to read:

Section 139. Upon first trial, should the accused be convicted, the maximum fine, if one is imposed, shall not exceed $25, and this penalty shall not be increased by adding thereto any part of the expense incurred by the union in the trial of the accused.

Committee reports favorably.

President Scott explained the object of the proposed law.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 96—By Delegate Strange (Winnipeg):

Amend section 127, general laws, fourth line, after the words "national guard," by adding "or Canadian militia," the section to read:

Section 127. In cases where members are admitted as residents of the Union Printers Home, or who enlist for active service in the regular army or navy in time of war, or members of the national guard or Canadian militia who may be ordered to war, their situations may be filled by the foreman: Provided, that upon again reporting for duty the situations formerly held by these members shall be restored to them.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 97—By Delegate Gookin (Roanoke):

Amend section 2, article iii, by-laws, to read:

Section 2. The election of delegates and alternates to the International Typographical Union convention shall be held on the fourth Wednesday in May preceding the meeting of the convention, and no election however or wherever otherwise held shall be recognized, and no delegate or alternate elected at such other illegally held election shall be seated in the convention. In case where a tie vote for delegates or alternates is declared another election shall be immediately ordered and held by the local officers on the said fourth Wednesday in May.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Gookin (Roanoke) said he had made a mistake in drafting the amendment and asked that it be referred back to the committee on laws.

Delegate Marshall (Chicago) moved that the proposition be referred back to the committee on laws.

The motion was lost.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 100—By Delegate Gookin (Roanoke):

Strike out section 7, article iii, by-laws, which reads as follows:

Section 7. The expenses of said delegates to the convention of this union shall be defrayed by the subordinate unions they respectively represent.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Gookin (Roanoke) explained his proposition.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 103—By Delegate Tullis (Dallas):

Amend section 101, general laws, to read:

Section 101. The right to use the International Typographical Union label shall not be granted a union the scale of which in any provision falls below $16.50 for a week of not more than forty-eight hours.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Tullis (Dallas) explained his proposition and urged its adoption.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee), of the committee on laws, Delegates Campbell (Norfolk) and Keener (Tucson) favored the report of the committee.

Delegate Haines (Tacoma) favored the proposition.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 106—By Delegate Armstrong (Memphis):

Amend paragraph (e) of section 11, page 100, convention laws, to read as follows:

(e) A Committee on Appeals—The president shall appoint a committee on appeals to be composed of seven delegates-elect, which committee, after being named by the president, shall be subject to confirmation by the convention. To this committee shall be referred all appeals from decisions of the executive council that are properly submitted, as is provided in the laws of this organization. The committee shall carefully examine the evidence brought before it, and report a resolution sustaining or dismissing the appeal.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Armstrong (Memphis) favored the proposition.

Delegate Owens (Cincinnati) said he still favored the election of the committee on appeals.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegate Maher (New York) was recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 107—By Delegate Rutherford (Baltimore):

Amend section 3, article v, constitution, to read:

Section 3. The first election of all members of the executive council of the International Typographical Union shall be for the term of two years. When members of executive council are re-elected their terms shall be four years. In all cases the incumbent shall serve till his successor qualifies.

The election of representatives and other officers of the International Typographical Union shall be for a term of two years.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 108—By the Chicago delegation:

CICERO, ILL., August 13, 1917.

Messrs. Wallace C. Shields, Mark M. J. Mitchell, Ernie J. Zander, Robert H. Marshall, representing Chicago Typographical Union No. 16, sixty-third annual convention International Typographical Union, Colorado Springs, 1917:

DEAR BROTHER MEMBERS—I intended to see you before your departure for Colorado, but duties to the souvenir in Chicago were such that it was impossible to do so without neglecting that important trust. It took assiduous work, but we won the thanks of Manager W. J. Snider and his committee representing Colorado Springs Union No. 82 in the material help we gave them by our labors for the Chicago end of the souvenir. Snider is a grand scout, and I hope you will have the pleasure of meeting him personally.

But to the object of this communication:

After talking the matter over with many of our members, it was the consensus of opinion that a section should be engrafted into our International constitution, under the heading, "Old Age Pensions," whereby the long-neglected, faithful and meritorious old wife of a pensioner, after his death or residence in the Home, shall continue to receive the same amount he did, until her death. Provided, of course, she had no source of revenue, and would otherwise have to go to the poorhouse.

In instances innumerable she has fought and suffered by the side of her husband for the principles which have finally evolved the glorious body of thinking men of which today you, my brothers, are honored members in convention assembled. And the consolation of having beloved old No. 16, through you, fathering the motion that this cruel oversight shall have been atoned and tardy justice be given the mother of unionism, will be sweet indeed. We owe it to her to see to it that the patient, long-suffering, silver-crowned wives of the old boys who have heroically fought our battles in the past, shall not die in want and squalor, nor yet in the almshouse, and be ignominiously laid away in potter's field.

For the sake of our glorious International, for the honor of beloved No. 16, and for the heartfelt thanks of the noble women who will pour forth to you their souls in praise for your action in their behalf, I respectfully ask that you initiate a movement looking to this honorably commendable act on our part. And the praise and glory shall all be yours. I ask no thanks for the suggestion, and plead only my declining years, and the fading face of her I daily admire more for her superlative constancy to me and trade unionism—my pal, my chum, my dear old wife. Fraternally,

OSCAR J. HAZEL.

Committee does not deem it wise to make the changes in the law as suggested by the above communication.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS.

COLORADO SPRINGS, August 16, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on miscellaneous business respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Proposition No. 121—By Delegates Lougheed and Sass (Detroit):

John McVicar, a former president of the International Typographical Union, died on December 11, 1916, at his home in Detroit. He was seventy-two years of age. The highest honor of the International Typographical Union, that of being called upon to act as its president, came to Mr. McVicar in 1876, during a time when the International Typographical Union was undergoing its severest trial. Mr. McVicar brought to the office ripe judgment as well as ardent devotion, and his term of office was marked by such wisdom as to maintain the organization against the great opposition of circumstances and conditions that threatened the destruction of the union, and by his efforts and example contributed to the subsequent growth and solidity that has since brought the International Typographical Union to its great success. Mr. McVicar was active in the affairs of the organization for many years, and his counsel was of great assistance to the members fortunate enough to have his advice. That his interest did not flag is shown by his presence at recent conventions of the International Typographical Union, where he was an interested spectator. Mr. McVicar's fidelity to the union, his devotion to its principles, and his activity in promoting its welfare have been acknowledged by those who knew him best, and are commended as an inspiring example to all.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 120—By the St. Louis delegation:

God's finger touched him; he sleeps the sleep from which there is no earthly awakening.

Martin R. H. Witter, ex-president and for fifty years continuous active member of the International Typographical Union, on August 2, 1917, responded to the summons of his Maker after a short illness, at the age of 71 years. There is no language that expresses what is deepest in our hearts. What tribute can we then pay to him? What need we say of one whose life speaks for itself, whose career is eloquent, who has written his own eulogy deep in the hearts of his fellow men? A soldier in the cause of his country for the preservation of the union, a tireless toiler for half a century in the great battle for human rights so that those who toil might receive a just return for the fruits of their labor, our departed brother has erected his own monument that will endure for all time. So that our appreciation of his splendid character may be recorded by this convention, be it

Resolved, That the proceedings of the convention be suspended for a period of one minute, during which time the delegates stand in silence; and, be it further

Resolved, That a page of the minutes be set aside in memory of our departed brother, and an engrossed copy of these resolutions be forwarded to his widow.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

The delegates stood in silence for one minute as a tribute to the memory of former President Witter.

Proposition No. 54—By the Cleveland delegation:

Whereas, In the death of A. W. ("Booth") Thomson the International Typographical Union lost one of its most noble and conscientious members; one who through an unselfish career devoted his efforts to the upbuilding and elevation of our grand organization; and who, in the closing years of a busy and active life, dedicated his labors to the education and proper training of the boys apprenticed to the printing trade; and,

Whereas, The fruits of his work in the interest of the apprentice will serve as an everlasting monument to the memory of "Booth" Thomson, and will also bring its full measure of benefit to every local union affiliated with the International Typographical Union; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the International Typographical Union at its sixty-third session in convention assembled at the city of Colorado Springs, Colo., hereby expresses its heartfelt sympathy at the death of our esteemed and beloved fellow member by assuming a standing position for a period of one minute; and, be it further

Resolved, That an engrossed copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the widow of the deceased, and the same spread upon the minutes and printed in the proceedings of this the sixty-third convention of the International Typographical Union.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

The delegates stood for one minute in silence as a tribute to the memory of A. W. Thomson.

Delegate Lougheed (Detroit) moved that a page each be set aside in the minutes of the convention in memory of Messrs. McVicar, Witter and Thomson.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 42—By Medicine Hat (Canada) Union:

Resolved, That the name of Robert Collier, who represented Medicine Hat Typographical Union No. 451 at the Nashville convention, be placed on the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 56—By Delegate Henderson (Council Bluffs):

Resolved, That the name of Harry W. Ingalls, who represented Bluff City Union No. 203 at the Minneapolis convention in 1910, be placed on the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 60—By Delegate Gottlob (Newark):

Resolved, That the name of Thomas S. Millin, sr., a former delegate to the International Typographical Union from Newark, N. J., be placed upon the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 118—By Delegate Jackson (Sacramento):

Resolved, That the names of William Miner, representing Sacramento Union No. 46 at Minneapolis, Minn., 1910; George L. Suydam, at Providence, R. I., 1914, and Otto M. Fancher, at Baltimore, Md., 1916, be placed on the deceased ex-delegate list.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 119—By Delegate Coyell (Buffalo):

Resolved, That the name of Charles V. Reese, of Buffalo, who represented San Antonio at the Hot Springs convention, be placed on the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 122—By Delegates McArdle and Fullam (New York Mailers):

Resolved, That the names of James Gordon and Richard Binninger, former delegates to the International Typographical Union from New York Mailers' Union, be placed upon the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 126—By the New York delegation:

Resolved, That the name of John J. Bergin, who represented New York Typographical Union No. 6 at the Boston convention in 1875, be placed on the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 127—By Delegate Adler (Boston):

Resolved, That the name of Percy B. S. Thayer, who represented Boston Typographical Union No. 13 at the Hot Springs convention, be placed on the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 128—By Delegate Rossie (St. Joseph):

Resolved, That the name of Ulysses Grant Pierce, who represented St. Joseph (Mo.) Union No. 40 at the Cleveland convention in 1912, be placed on the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 129—By the Cleveland delegation:

Resolved, That the name of Frank H. Seffing, who represented Cleveland Typographical Union No. 53 at three conventions of the International Typographical Union, namely, Toronto, Hot Springs and Nashville, be placed on the deceased ex-delegates' list.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 130—By Delegate Park (Boise City):

Resolved, That the name of Frank J. McKenna, delegate to the Hot Springs convention from Boise City Union No. 271, be placed on the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 131—By Delegate Thacker (Milwaukee):

Resolved, That the name of Charles C. Williams, who represented Grand Rapids Union No. 39 at the Buffalo convention in 1887, be placed on the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 132—By the St. Louis delegation:

Resolved, That the name of Henry Braunhold, who represented St. Louis Union No. 8 at the St. Joseph convention in 1909, be placed on the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 133—By Delegate Noonan (Boston Mailers):

Resolved, That the names of Henry E. Kiley and Chester H. Snowden, delegates to the International Typographical Union from Boston Mailers' Union, be placed upon the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted:

Proposition No. 139—By the Denver delegation:

Resolved, That the name of John W. Lambert, delegate from Denver Union No. 49 to the Syracuse convention in 1898, be placed on the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 140—By the Boston delegation:

Resolved, That the name of Maxine L. Bouret, who represented Boston Union No. 13 at the Syracuse convention in 1898, be placed on the roll of deceased ex-delegates.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 141—By Delegate Colvin (Topeka):

Resolved, That the name of K. U. Whitted, who represented Topeka Union No. 121 at the Milwau-

President Scott introduced B. F. Scribner, of Pueblo, Colo., representing the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America, who addressed the convention, as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION—It is indeed a pleasure to appear before you to express on the part of an employer of union labor the delight in gazing into the faces of such a fine-looking lot of men as you appear to be from this distance.

The first thought that came to me as I entered the hall was that if it were possible and I had the capacity and the ability to head an institution that had a bunch—in fact this particular bunch—on the pay roll, we would have some job. The next thought was that if it was my particular job as treasurer of that institution, that it would be some job to meet the pay roll. Still it would be a pleasure. For I believe that about the most pleasure we have outside of hustling for the money is spending it.

I want to apologize for not being here on schedule, but I was not to blame. I had planned, before I had word from Mr. Green that I was to substitute for him, for a little outing with my family in the woods. I was detained at Wolf Creek Pass by the rains and could not get over for two days, and I didn't get here until today.

It is a great pleasure to be here. I had my first days of the printing business in this town. I answered an advertisement in the paper for a cub; I thought I was a good cub and answered it, and proved to be it. I was present at the opening of the Union Printers Home on the hill at the east, and had part in the festivities in a small way that day. So it is a pleasure to be here to address you on this subject of the arbitration agreement in this place to these people.

What I don't know about arbitration agreements would fill books, but with the principle I am in hearty accord. It seems to me that it is absolutely recognized, not only in commercial and business strikes, but among nations, that the principle of arbitration is the correct principle. You see it in the corner lot baseball game—it is team work. It is generally a safe proposition to trust to the selected judgment of a bunch of people interested in the proposition. As I look into your faces I do not believe that it would be an unwise proposition in a personal way, if it ever came up, to trust to your judgment looking to a business proposition regarding the printing fraternity, and I doubt not that the decision would be safe.

I find that in a conglomerate sense people are much alike, whether you find them in the mountain region or in the effete east or the far west; they have a different accent; probably they are a little more "toned" in the east, or at least they think they are, while the people in the west pat themselves on the back and say that they are broader and more liberal. It is hard to look into the faces, especially at the time of hand-me-down clothing, and pick them out. You can occasionally tell from the cut of a man's clothing what he may be, but you can't tell much from the looks of a man how good a printer he is. I used to think I could do it, but I have been fooled. Some of the worst-looking specimens have come into the office and proved to be the best workers, and some of the classiest-looking individuals have turned out to be a frost. I should think their conscience would have hurt them when they signed the pay roll. On the other hand, I know men who are employing printers that I would not work for on a bet—no, sir. We are pretty much alike, aren't we? It is a pretty safe conclusion that if we can get the concerted attention of a bunch of fellows, whether employers or employes, united upon a proposition, that their decision will be safe, especially when you can get both sides, so I am in favor of the arbitration agreement. I was present at Atlantic City last year and took part in the deliberations and helped to form the union or Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ. I have been a member for a number of years and the sole representative in this section for a long time—just on general principles, I guess. We were interested in their investigations and believe it has been of great benefit to us. There are a few things that occurred to me. Whether it is an individual union or an individual in the union, the perspective is too close to make a calm decision; I do not care whether it is an employer or an employe, the man whose nose is too close to the grindstone has a wrong perspective of the stone. In my opinion, it is wise that we get a proper perspective before any decision is made. If this arbitration agreement is ratified and adopted, it is undoubtedly true that any decisions rendered under this decision will be fair to both sides. The agreement will assist in the standardization of the printing business. I would like to know if any of you have ever discovered any business anywhere near the magnitude of the printing business, which now ranks fifth, which approaches it from the standpoint of the wages paid. Where is there any business where so much skill is required and wherein so much personnel is put as in the printing business? I know of none. Furthermore, in my opinion there is no business that is of so much importance to the general business of the country as the printing business; you would not go far in an educational way without the printing trade. You would not go far in the way of exploiting anything international without type and ink and magazines. You would not go far in records and the accounting system without the printing business.

If it is possible to assist matters by an arbitration agreement we will cover differences that arise which will assist in the standardization of things so it will be fair and just in the adjustment between the employer and the employe in the different sections of the country. There are many problems that confront the employers.

Another thing that has not been considered as carefully as it might be is the matter of trade territory. If you stop a moment you will notice at least the trade territory of any particular locality is in the form of an ellipse to the west. Most of the business is west. As you come through Nebraska and Kansas it goes to the west; when you are in Colorado it is still to the west. When you go to the Atlantic coast there is a problem there; and there is a problem at the Pacific coast, but, generally speaking, the trade territory of any locality lies to the west. You can not judge by geographical lines. Just now, in this section of the country the wage scale is high; the altitude is high; everything is high; you folks have probably noticed that prices are high. This calls to my attention a member of a union who came in to work for us a while, a man who had been east and then came west—possibly because the scale was higher. After leaving us and going east in only one night's travel he dropped from $25 to $18—some drop over night. We never have had any difficulty in this section between the employers and the employes; most of the manufacturers of labor in our trade here were formerly employes; many were members of your particular union or trade. Unfortunately, I have not had that pleasure. I can not even box a compass or read the case; I can find the "e" box because it is the biggest one there, or it used to be—maybe it is changed now. I have learned, I believe, that the principle of arbitration is the proper principle, whether applied between the employer and the employe in the printing craft or between unions. I want to read a brief extract from a letter received from a friend of mine to whom I wrote asking if he had any views he would like to have expressed, because he is a large employer of labor.

"I am sure that the agreement will be of great benefit in many ways. In the first place, from the employers' point of view, it eliminates that dreaded bug-a-boo—arbitrary action by the union. Those of us that have run union composing rooms for years know that the policy of the International Typographical Union is and has been conciliation and arbitration and that a local too drastic and domineering, one unwilling to arbitrate disputed questions, will receive no support from the International; but that there has always been the possibility of tangles leading hotheaded officers, perhaps newly-elected and inexperienced, to declare strikes, or, what is almost as demoralizing, to threaten strikes. This possibility now, happily by this agreement, is a thing of the past. Again, many employers have resisted the unionization of their composing rooms for fear of union domination, the fear of the springing of new rules and regulations, of arbitrary hirings and dischargings, of the use of the composing room employes for political reasons to the detriment of the employes, of the curtailment of product, and a dozen other bug-a-boos and bogies that this agreement banishes into outer darkness.

"On the other hand, from the union point of view, this agreement establishes uniformity of treatment throughout the country, a proper, dignified and sure means of adjusting scales, shop practices and any other matters of possible disagreement that may arise, and in making those adjustments consistent throughout the length and breadth of the country. The agreement takes away the greatest argument that employers have in the past used in opposing unionizing of their establishments, namely, the claim of injustice and arbitrary treatment.

"I consider this the most businesslike agreement ever drawn between seller and buyer of labor. The union has labor to sell, that is its chief object and reason for existence—to sell labor and to sell it to the best advantage. We earnestly wish to buy what they have to sell; this agreement makes it easy and safe for both of us. Mind that word 'safe,' there is a lot in it.

"Great credit is due to your executive officers, particularly to President Scott, for the consummation of the agreement, and I feel that we all are to be congratulated that the union has been represented by a business diplomat of such large, clear and foresighted vision. The making of this agreement was not a matter of a few moments. To my knowledge President Scott has been working on this matter for a number of years. There have been various meetings of conference committees at which many disputed points were brought up and hammered into shape, and more than once President Scott's patience and diplomacy must have been severely tried. But at all times he was so tactful, courteous and resourceful that as both parties really wanted to make an agreement there was never for a moment an excuse for a disagreement.

"There has been a great deal said about the unreasonable rules imposed upon the employer by the union. Frankly, I think some of them are unreasonable, but in going over all these rules and regulations we found there were but few to which we really objected and on digging into history we found that those few amounted to mighty little. Most of them are time-honored veterans that to our thinking ought not to be in the book and which some day we hope will not be there, but in this world we must take the fat with the lean, the bitter with the sweet, and there they are and I suppose there they will stay for a while at least."

It will take a little time for both parties to fully digest the terms of this agreement. Speaking of time, there is a point from the employers' standpoint that is worth considering. I clipped this from a little typographical bulletin received in the mail yesterday morning:

"Ten thousand dollars working twenty-four hours a day is worth $500 a year at 5 per cent—less than $10 a week—less than $1.43 a day.

"A man who earns $20 a week is therefore better off than a man who is idle but who has $20,000 working for him in the bank.

"The man who earns $5,000 a year has an earning capacity equal to an investment of $100,000.

"The only difference between the $10-a-week man and the $100-a-week man is what he gets for his time.

"And time is of real value only when it is properly spent."

It is the time we buy from you that we are selling to the public. I congratulate the International Typographical Union. I congratulate the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America on the arbitration agreement. I believe it spells for the printing industry prosperity and its proper development. I believe it means for the printing and publishing interests of the country, for the employer and the employe, more than any other steps that have been taken for some time.

In closing I want to read a message taken from a paper this morning:

"It is well, however, that the printers should have adopted such resolutions at the present time, both because of their effect upon the general public and because of their contrast with the acts and words of some other individuals and groups of wage earners.

"The resolutions indicate very plainly the difference between the labor unionist who works for the advantage of the nation of which he is a part, and the less intelligent individual or group that holds every person outside of his own class to be an enemy. The former sees that co-operation between labor and capital is necessary for the conduct of industry, and in striving to forward his own interests he also seeks to promote the general welfare of the business of which he is a part. As an American citizen he also understands that the welfare of the individual and of the group is dependent upon the welfare of the nation.

"The anarchist sees none of these things, and the troublemaker admits none of them. To them every man whose interests are not identical with their own is an enemy, and they hold that anything they can do to injure their employers must be a benefit to themselves. On the political side they are enemies of government because the government exists for the protection of life and property, the enforcement of law and the maintenance of order."

This is not true of the International Typographical Union. I thank you.

Consideration of the report of the committee on laws was resumed.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON LAWS.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on laws respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Proposition No. 98—By Delegate Haines (Tacoma):

Add new section after section 165, general laws, following sections to be renumbered accordingly, to read:

Section —. The International president is instructed to act in conjunction with other international presidents in aiding local unions to secure the signing by employers of local joint wage agreements or contracts. And when local printing trades wage agreements or contracts, covering all the local unions of the printing trades chartered in the locality in question, have been entered into between local employers and local printing trades unions, such wage contracts being for simultaneous periods of time, the president of the International Typographical Union shall stand instructed to approve such local joint wage agreements or contracts. Provided, conciliation shall be the method of adjustment of all disputes thereunder; and provided that international presidents of other international printing trades unions give like approval to such local wage contracts.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Haines (Tacoma) stated the proposition was intended to bring about closer co-operation of the various printing trades unions.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws said that the proposition was the so-called closer affiliation proposition and as drawn placed the making of scales in the hands of a committee on which the typographical union would have the minority of representation. He said the report of the committee should prevail.

Digitized by Google

President Scott spoke on the question, saying:

Here is an example and illustration of the hypocrisy which is involved in some of the propositions presented to this convention. We had a long discussion yesterday about the initiative and the referendum and the working of laws. We hold conventions and make laws and, as I stated before, some subordinate unions reserve to themselves the right to obey those laws, whether adopted by the convention or the referendum, or to set them aside according to their own whims. What is the law on this subject? Section 165, which this proposition attempts to set aside, reads as follows:

"Section 165. No local union shall sign a contract guaranteeing its members to work for any proprietor, firm or corporation, unless such contract is in accordance with International law and approved by the International president. No member holding active membership in any local union shall sign an individual or private contract with any employer, agreeing to work for any stated length of time, wages or conditions. The union alone has the power to contract for conditions, wages and hours."

That is the law. This contract was not submitted to the International president until after it had been signed, and according to the statements received at headquarters that action was taken deliberately. It is about time that the members of the International Typographical Union and the delegates to the conventions realized the fact that when the name of the International Union is signed to a contract that it carries with it certain financial obligations, and that we can be held responsible the same as the individual can be held responsible if he signs his name to a note and does not make good, and has any property that can be seized upon. This is a resolution the intent and the purpose of which is to violate the law which has prevailed in this union for many years, and is contained in the printed book, section 165.

Delegate Marshall (Chicago) said, though opposed to the administration on many things, he thought it high time that local unions followed the law and took the advice of the International officers. He favored the report of the committee.

Delegates Anderson (Omaha) and Cole (Toledo) favored the report of the committee.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegate Haines (Tacoma) asked to be recorded as voting in the negative.

Delegate Keller (New York), with unanimous consent, introduced the following:

Proposition No. 136—By Delegate Keller (New York):

Resolved, That the executive council of the International Typographical Union take such steps as may be deemed advisable to secure an increase in the salaries of printers engaged in government service in postoffice printing departments.

Referred to committee on resolutions.

Consideration of the report of the committee on laws was resumed.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON LAWS.

Proposition No. 99—By Delegate Haines (Tacoma):

Add new section under the heading "Recommendations," general laws, to read:

Section —. That local unions in the signing up of contracts with proprietors co-operate with the other printing trades unions.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Haines (Tacoma) explained his proposition.

Chairman Keating (Milwaukee) of the committee on laws and Delegate Anderson (Omaha) favored the report of the committee.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 104—By Delegate Lougheed (Detroit):

Add new section to general laws under heading "Arbitration and Contracts," to read:

Section —. Where a subordinate union has an arbitration agreement expiring at the same time as the wage scale, and the subordinate union declines to enter into a new arbitration agreement, negotiations for a new scale shall not be subject to arbitration under the terms of the expired agreement, except by mutual consent.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Lougheed (Detroit) stated the proposition was intended to cover cases like the one that arose in Detroit and urged its adoption.

President Scott said:

If the president of the International Typographical Union were disposed, he might be very severe in his criticism of the action taken by Detroit Union, but he wants to be helpful to that union; he wants to show them the way they should proceed in the future.

In the first place, every delegate to this convention must know that no subordinate union is compelled to enter into an International arbitration agreement. When they sign that agreement they do so voluntarily. There has not been a single instance where the officers of the International Typographical Union have compelled any union to sign that agreement; they have advised them to sign it, but never told them they must sign it. The facts are that Detroit Typographical Union did voluntarily sign the International arbitration agreement of 1912; there is no question about that. Now, then, section 6 of the International agreement voluntarily entered into by Detroit Typographical Union No. 18 provides:

"Section 6. All differences other than those specified in section 5 of this agreement, including disagreements arising in negotiations for a new scale of wages, or for hours of labor, or in renewing or extending an existing scale, or in respect to a contract, which can not be settled by conciliation, shall be referred to a local board of arbitration in the manner stipulated in the Code of Procedure as set forth in Exhibit 'B'."

Typographical Union No. 18, through its executive officers, signed that contract, to be effective until May 1, 1917. There is no question about that; it is a matter of record. That is what they agreed to do.

Replying to Delegate Lougheed's statement made to the convention—on March 12, 1917, the union presented this proposition for a change in scale. They did not have to do that; they did not have to present the proposition before the contract expired, but they did it. The contract required them to live up to the terms of the contract they signed. There is not any competent legal authority in the United States but that will sustain the position taken by the president of the International Typographical Union. Having agreed to do a certain thing voluntarily, and having inaugurated their proceedings voluntarily, they could not be legally released from completing the negotiations which they had begun.

The president of Detroit Typographical Union takes the position that that union—simply because it is agreeable to them and the publishers—should be permitted to negotiate its scale in the city of Detroit based on what? The laws of 1917-16-15-14-13? No, not any of those laws. They want the laws of 1912. That is precisely what the argument is about. If any subordinate union having an International agreement which recognized the laws of 1916 desires to incorporate in its contract laws enacted subsequent to that time, the officers of the International Typographical Union would not object. There have been many instances in which the laws prevailing the date the contract is entered into are effective.

I have not a doubt but that if the delegate from Detroit will sit with me and the executive council we can find a way to adjust the differences existing there; but I have no authority to authorize Typographical Union No. 18 to continue to operate under the laws of 1912. That is ridiculous, it is absurd. I think the delegate from Detroit will see it if he gives it careful consideration.

Delegate Hoban (Cleveland) explained the success of his union in making a new scale after signing the new arbitration agreement.

Delegate Smith (Butte) discussed the subject of arbitration and recited at length the conditions in Butte.

President Scott, in discussing the proposition, said:

I want to say to you, Delegate Smith, and to those delegates present, that the position of the executive council of the International Typographical Union is not a position which they have assumed arbitrarily. The Baltimore convention of this union, by unanimous vote, endorsed the arbitration agreement. Every convention for the last sixteen years has gone on record as favoring arbitration, and on the referendum vote taken last May, the members again, by a majority of something like 12,475, endorsed the principle of arbitration.

That is not the position arbitrarily taken by Secretary Hays, Vice-President Barrett, Vice-President Miller, Vice-President Smith and myself. It is the position of the majority of the members of the International Typographical Union, and the position of the International Typographical Union as enunciated by the executive council is this: When arbitration is offered on a fair basis, with the recognition of the laws of the International Typographical Union, arbitration will not be rejected by the executive council, and if Butte Typographical Union No. 126 sets aside the laws of the International Typographical Union governing strikes, and calls an illegal strike, then the responsibility will be upon the members of that union.

Delegate Trump (Boston) moved the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegates Lougheed and Sass (Detroit) asked to be recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 105—By Delegate Lougheed (Detroit):

Add new section to general laws to be known as section 170, under "Arbitration and Contracts," page 87, to read as follows:

Section 170. It is imperatively ordered that the president of the International Typographical Union shall not enter into any arrangement or understanding with the chairman of the special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, affecting the wage contracts or arbitration agreements of any subordinate union unless he is authorized so to do by the written law of the International Typographical Union or the terms of the International or local arbitration agreements or the code of procedure of either.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN P. KEATING, Chairman;
JOHN F. MURPHY, Secretary;
PHILIP JOHNSON,
THOMAS W. JOHNS,
ROBERT ELLIOT,
HOWARD KEENER,
R. L. WOODY.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegates Lougheed and Sass (Detroit), Tullis (Dallas), Smith (Butte), Mitchell (Chicago), Shields (Chicago) and Marshall (Chicago) asked to be recorded as voting in the negative.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON APPEALS.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on appeals has carefully gone over the cases presented for its consideration, and after reviewing the evidence and briefs submitted in each case, respectfully presents the following report for your consideration:

Proposition No. 70—By T. C. Hurt (Rock Island, Ill.):

An appeal from the decision of the executive council in the case of George P. Garrison vs. Tri-City Typographical Union No. 107.

(Copies of the printed appeal will be found on the desks of the delegates.)

We unanimously recommend that the decision of the executive council in this case be sustained and the appeal dismissed.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 71—By W. O. Schmidt (Vancouver, B. C., Union):

An appeal from the decision of the executive council in the case of W. O. Schmidt vs. Vancouver Typographical Union No. 226.

(Copies of the printed appeal will be found on the desks of the delegates.)

It is the unanimous opinion of your committee that the decision of the executive council be sustained and the appeal dismissed.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 72—By Green Bay Printing Company (Green Bay, Wis.):

An appeal from the decision of the executive council in the case of the Green Bay Printing Company vs. Green Bay Typographical Union No. 344.

(Copies of the printed appeal will be found on the desks of the delegates. This appeal does not bear the label.)

We recommend that the appeal in this case be dismissed and the decision of the executive council be sustained.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 73—By R. L. O'Neill (Chicago, Ill., Union):

An appeal from the decision of the executive council in the case of R. L. O'Neill vs. Chicago Typographical Union No. 16.

(Copies of the printed appeal will be found on the desks of the delegates.)

We unanimously recommend that the decision of the executive council in this case be sustained and the appeal dismissed.

Delegate Marshall (Chicago) said, while in sympathy with the law, he had no desire to question the merits of the decision in this case, in which the executive council sustained the action of the officers of the local union. He said the six-day law was enforced in Chicago on newspapers but not in job offices because of this decision, and urged that some action be taken to correct this evil.

Delegate Mitchell (Chicago) explained the condition prevailing in the book and job plants in Chicago and said there was no way to enforce the overtime law in such offices.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays said:

This case somewhat illustrates the tendency of appellants from decisions of the executive council to bring to the convention matters relating to the appeal that were not presented to the executive council in the evidence submitted to it, and on which decision was rendered.

You have heard from the Chicago delegates and it is acknowledged in the papers in the appeal that the overtime laws were not enforced in Chicago. In this case the appellant complained as to the Butler Brothers chapel, asking that certain people be compelled to observe the overtime law and penalized for not having done so. Chicago Union took up the complaint of Mr. O'Neill. On February 20, 1916, the matter first came up and Mr. Klinger, in the meeting of Chicago Union, moved that the case from Butler Brothers chapel be referred back to the executive committee to report thereon at the next meeting. This motion was adopted.

We then have the following from the report of the executive committee:

"Executive Committee, March 19, 1916: The case of R. L. O'Neill against the Butler Brothers chapel, referred by the union back to the executive committee for further investigation, was taken up. Mr. O'Neill and the chairman and several members of the Butler Brothers chapel appeared before the committee. The following is the recommendation in this case:

"That inasmuch as the overtime law has not been enforced in job offices, no proceedings be entered against the members named in Mr. O'Neill's communication; that the question of enforcing the overtime law in job offices be referred to a sub-committee of the executive committee to endeavor to work out some plan to carry out the provisions of said law."

The following is the action of the union upon the report of the executive committee:

"Union Meeting, March 26, 1916—On the recommendation of the committee regarding the complaint of R. L. O'Neill against members of the Butler Brothers chapel, Mr. O'Neill called for the reading of his brief in the case. All the papers in the case were read.

"Mr. Elmer Scott moved to concur in the first recommendation of the committee. Carried by a vote of 71 for to 28 against.

"Moved that the second recommendation of the committee be concurred in. Carried."

That motion was adopted.

Now, then, what is the position of the executive council? After making the statements that I have just covered the executive council in its decision says:

"This action on the part of respondent union shows that the provisions of the six-day law have not been enforced in the book and job offices under its jurisdiction, but that steps are being taken to bring about their enforcement.

"It would seem that inasmuch as the respondent union has never enforced this law in job offices, and inasmuch as an attempt is now being made to agree upon some plan whereby it will be enforced, that the best interests of the members of respondent union will be conserved by allowing it to work out a plan to take care of the accumulated overtime and thereby comply with the law.

"To sustain the appeal under the conditions existing in the jurisdiction of respondent union would undoubtedly create a great deal of turmoil, and for reasons which must be obvious to even the appellant, would be the cause of considerable dissension among the members.

"The appeal is dismissed."

And what else could the executive council do and what else can this convention do except sustain the decision of the executive council?

Delegate Zander (Chicago) said to sustain the appeal would discriminate against one office in Chicago, and favored the report of the committee.

Delegates Rutherford (Baltimore), Anderson (Omaha), Carter (Chattanooga), Armstrong (Memphis) and Wilson (Leadville) urged the adoption of the report of the committee.

Delegate Tullis (Dallas) called attention to the law and said the remedy was with the local union. It should enforce the law.

Vice-President Barrett discussed the proposition and favored the report of the committee.

The previous question was ordered.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Delegates Digges (Phœnix), Wright (Waco) and Walden (Jefferson City) asked to be recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 74—By Joseph Phillis (Los Angeles, Cal., Union):

An appeal from the decision of the executive council in the case of Joseph Phillis vs. Los Angeles Typographical Union No. 174.

(Copies of the printed appeal will be found on the desks of the delegates.)

We unanimously recommend that the decision of the executive council be sustained and the appeal dismissed.

Chairman Hoban (Cleveland) of the committee on appeals said:

I wish to make a statement in regard to the charges preferred against this member. I will read the charges, so that every delegate can understand what complaint was made against this delegate.

"Los Angeles, Cal., July 25, 1916.

"William Lucas, Vice-President Los Angeles Typographical Union:

"Dear Mr. Lucas—I herewith prefer charges against Joseph Phillis, a member of Los Angeles Typographical Union No. 174, for conduct unbecoming a member of the International Typographical Union, in circulating in the Typographical Review an article tending to cast discredit and dishonor upon my actions as a member of Los Angeles Typographical Union No. 174. Particular objection is taken to the following paragraph:

" 'In concluding this lengthy letter it might be asked, What has a newspaper fight and a labor temple to do with a typographical union? Absolutely nothing, of course. It might be a coincidence, however, that the militant president of the Labor Temple Association is a leading member of the local typographical union and a foreman; that the manager of the labor temple is an ex-official of the International Typographical Union, who until a short time ago held a very lucrative position; that the now editor of the Citizen, and the editor of the Labor Press before it was merged, was a member of San Francisco Union No. 21, who conveniently happened to be in Los Angeles a few days before the new paper was started; and that the present and newly-elected president of the central labor council is a prominent member of No. 174, and that they are all part of the combination —and not a small part, either—whose permission is necessary before about 75 per cent of the members can obtain employment in newspaper offices under the jurisdiction of the local typographical union.'

"Accompanying these charges is an affidavit in accordance with International law.

"Fraternally,
"SETH R. BROWN."

Those are the charges that were preferred against this man, and like everything else, when a charge is preferred against a man he generally brings in a little outside stuff in order to free himself from the charge. This is no different from many others, and the delegates are perhaps hearing a great deal of stuff about the Wahnetas and the Progressives. I suppose if we voted now on the brief—if you have read the brief—we would conclude the gentleman in question failed to make good on his charge appeal absolutely, but the local union in which he made the charge and by a vote of that union that was almost unanimous they endorsed the conclusions reached by the trial committee. Everything in connection with the case as tried by Los Angeles Typographical Union was according to law, and when the case was appealed to the executive council the executive council passed on the evidence and documents that were presented at the trial in this union, and consequently they had to confine their findings on the case as presented. Since the case has been decided by the executive council, the gentleman in question has seen fit to circularize the entire jurisdiction with stuff that has no bearing at all upon the charge. He is looking for the sympathy of the delegates making up these conventions, and like every other thing of a like nature, he lacks the courage to base his appeal on the case in question, and instead of appealing to the pure-minded men and women in our organization he appeals to the vicious and to the low, and to those who can give no utterance to any but mean, detestable charges against the officials of the local union and the officials of the International Typographical Union. I have never in my experience with the typographical union witnessed a more flagrant case. We have gone over this brief, and have reached our conclusions. We have given full weight to everything that entered into the case, and, gentlemen, I now ask you to base your decision, not upon the stuff the gentleman has introduced in the case, because it has no bearing on the case, and your appeals committee were not prejudiced in the matter, and were determined to bring in a fair and just decision. We believe we have done so.

Delegate Ellis (San Francisco) said:

The gentleman brought these charges against Mr. Brown after a trial in which there was not a witness put on the stand to prove any of the charges. He did not produce a witness. When the vote came on the proposition the result was 87 to 5. Mr. Phillis before that had insisted on a ballot; he finally decided to draw the names from the hat. This committee was appointed, and Mr. Phillis made the statement that he was satisfied with the committee and was certain he would get justice.

Mr. Brown, president of Los Angeles Typographical Union, has done more good in the city of Los Angeles than any president they have ever had there. He is a man who was appointed by the governor of the state on the defense board and appointed by the president of the United States on the exemption board. We are very proud of Mr. Brown.

Delegate Smith (Butte) said:

It is true that copies of the case were sent out. I received one and the officers of my union received it. It is possible my union might have taken it up for consideration if I had not stated that it would not be proper to do so in view of the fact that only one side of the case had been furnished us.

I am opposed to cases of this nature taking up the time of this convention. They are more or less of a personal nature, and I am always opposed to the taking up of the time of the local union. I believe all such matters as contained in this case should be settled personally in their locals—decided by the members in the town they live in. They are not worth any discussion here or in the local union. They are personal matters and should be settled as such.

Delegate Baldauf (Los Angeles) favored the adoption of the report of the committee.

The previous question was ordered.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

President Scott congratulated the delegates upon unanimously sustaining the report of the committee. In so doing he declared the convention had placed the stamp of its disapproval upon scurrilous literature such as was issued in this case. He hoped the action of the convention would be a lesson to members who persist in circulating literature of that kind.

Proposition No. 75—By the Democrat chapel (Tulsa, Okla.):

An appeal from the decision of the executive council in the case of the Tulsa Democrat Chapel vs. Tulsa Typographical Union No. 403.

(Copies of the printed appeal will be found on the desks of the delegates.)

We unanimously recommend that the decision of the executive council be sustained and the appeal dismissed.

Respectfully submitted,
JAMES HOBAN, Chairman;
W. H. ELLIS, Secretary;
W. K. CODY,
WILLIAM M. CONWAY,
A. L. DAWSON,
WILLIAM W. NORMAN,
JOHN A. REMMERT.

Delegate Ellis (San Francisco) favored the report of the committee.

Delegate Freeman (Tulsa) asked to be recorded as voting in favor of the committee's report.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

The report of the committee as a whole was unanimously adopted.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON LABEL.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on label respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Proposition No. 135—

LOUISVILLE, KY., August 11, 1917.

J. W. Hays, Secretary International Typographical Union, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I regret exceedingly my inability of attending and addressing your convention in behalf of our organization, and therefore extend to the officers and delegates the fraternal greetings of the Tobacco Workers' International Union, with the hope that the convention will be harmonious, as well as beneficial to the rank and file of your International Union, and in deliberating for the interest of your membership trust you will not overlook the other men and women who through their associated efforts are endeavoring to uplift the cause of the toiler to shorter hours, higher wages, and sanitary conditions in their industries. Also enclosing resolution of the Tobacco Workers' International Union, which we kindly ask your favorable consideration and adoption. Fraternally yours,

A. McAndrew,
International President.

Whereas, It is an assured fact that the union label is one of the most potent factors for the advancement of the most vital interests of the membership of our trade-union movement, and by which we are enabled to help each other in discriminating between union and non-union made products when purchasing commodities for our daily needs; and,

Whereas, The Tobacco Workers' International Union having a union label, is seeking a wider demand for tobacco, cigarettes and snuff bearing the union label; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the International Typographical Union, in convention assembled in Colorado Springs, Colo., August 13, 1917, that inasmuch as union-labeled tobacco, cigarettes and snuff of the best qualities are marketed in parcels that come within the reach of all consumers, and easily accessible to all purchasers, they should receive a larger share of the purchasing power of union men and their friends; and, be it further

Resolved, That it is the consensus of opinion of the delegates attending this convention that the practice of demanding the union label on our purchases has heretofore not given the results we have a right to expect. In view of this condition we give a renewed expression of our fealty to our cause, and pledge our effort to creating a more extended demand for union-labeled tobacco, cigarettes and snuff, thereby employing union men and women working in the tobacco industry.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

The exploitation of the insignia of shorter hours, living wages and sanitary conditions in printing offices is one of the most important engaging the attention of the officers and members of subordinate unions. The typographical union that is in the forefront of the local labor movement is the organization that advertises the union label and creates occasions on which the label is prominently and forcibly brought to the attention of the business public. The active label campaigns that have been conducted for the past ten years have been productive of much good. These campaigns have diverted orders amounting to thousands of dollars into union offices. Had there been no agitation of the label these orders for printed matter would have gone into offices operating under non-union conditions. Every dollar expended in label campaigns has been returned an hundred fold. The time and money expended in advertising the label have resulted in increased business for the union offices and have made for steady employment for members of the International Typographical Union.

The value of the label campaign was evidenced a few years ago when but a small amount of the printed matter used by the theatrical attractions carried the label. Today practically all of this class of printed matter either bears the union label or the imprint of an office operating under union conditions. This state of affairs has been brought about by the untiring efforts of the various label committees. The past history of the label campaign is conclusive proof that every local union of the International Typographical Union should have a wide-awake, aggressive label committee, and this committee should have the co-operation and assistance of each member of the local organization. We want to urge the delegates to this convention to see to it that their unions have label committees, and then to insist that this committee shall be a working committee. Not only should we boost our own label but we should also remember that other trades unions have labels, which should be supported and boosted by the members of the International Typographical Union.

In this connection we want to call attention to the booklet issued by Secretary-Treasurer Hays, "Lore for Label Lovers." This booklet is filled to the covers with splendid ideas and suggestions for the carrying on of a label campaign. If a committee feels that it can not conduct a campaign without guidance then we suggest that a request be made for this booklet. It will be of inestimable value to all the label committees.

We also want to commend President Scott for the issuance of the "List of Union Poster and Specialty Offices." This list contains the names and addresses of many offices that are equipped to produce poster and specialty work, and these offices are entitled to the use of the label. In diverting work to union offices this list is a great help to label committees and officers of local unions. When received it should not be thrown away, but retained for reference purposes.

President Scott also issues a booklet of magazines and periodicals of general circulation published under union and non-union conditions. This booklet contains the names and status of many magazines, the majority of which employ thousands of our members. This booklet should be in the hands of every trade unionist and friend, so that when magazines and periodicals are purchased only those which are printed under union conditions will find their way into the homes of the organized wage earners. REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON PROVINCIAL, STATE AND DISTRICT UNIONS.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Your committee on provincial, state and district unions respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Each succeeding year proves the great value of provincial, state and district conferences and unions when these bodies co-operate fully with the executive council in furthering the various activities of the International Typographical Union. The reports of the various conferences, as published from time to time in The Typographical Journal, show that the country printer is being looked after closer than ever before; that weak and struggling unions are being strengthened and that employment is being found for our members through this agency. The bringing together of the printers of a certain area for the purpose of exchanging ideas as to how best to further the interests of our organization has resulted in establishing unions where none existed before; it has resulted in a more intelligent and uniform handling of the apprentice question, one of the most important now before our membership, and has resulted in very substantial increases in wages for the small-town printer.

Digitized by Google

Your committee believes that these organizations can be of great value by co-operating with the International officers in campaigns initiated by the executive council in certain important matters which vitally affect the interests of our members, such, for example, as those relating to postal rates, school-book campaigns and the like, where public officials are to be addressed. In times past, in some instances, there has not been the prompt co-operation in these matters that there should have been on the part of subordinate as well as state and district unions.

If we are to succeed in an undertaking we must all co-operate promptly. The small expense attached to a little typewriting should not be allowed to stand in the way of prompt compliance with requests to send communications to certain officials.

Your committee heartily endorses the formation of these provincial, state and district unions because of their value in educating our members; because wherever established they have resulted in bettering the conditions of many of our members, and because they have greatly promoted the fraternal feeling that should exist throughout the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union. Delegate Walden (Jefferson City), with unanimous consent, offered the following:

Proposition No. 137—By Delegate Walden (Jefferson City):

Resolved, That the name of George Robertson, delegate to the Cleveland convention in 1912 from Jefferson City (Mo.) Union No. 119, be expunged from the record of ex-delegates for ratting.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

Delegate Hetherington (Boston), with unanimous consent, read the following:

To the Trustees of the Union Printers Home:

The Monitor chapel being desirous of taking part in the patriotic movement which made the liberty loan of 1917 a success, and at the same time helping the good work of the Home, we have the pleasure of presenting to the endowment fund of the Union Printers Home a fifty-dollar bond.

The bond will be forwarded when issued.

Fraternally yours,

Delegate Cahill (Lynn) announced that Lynn Typographical Union No. 120 has subscribed for a liberty bond, to be presented to the Union Printers Home as soon as the bond is issued.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON HEALTH.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on health respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Proposition No. 61—By Delegate Martin (Cleveland Mailers):

Whereas, One of the fundamental principles of our joining together in the bonds of unionism is the conservation of the health of our members by taking steps for the elimination of any cause for the spread of disease in our working places, and also, whenever practicable, introducing measures to safeguard ourselves from succumbing to attacks induced by insanitary conditions prevalent in our occupations; and,

Whereas, The members of Cleveland Mailers' Union No. 12 have grave reason to fear that their health is being undermined by the foul state of the mail bags supplied to the newspaper and job offices by our government; be it therefore

Resolved, That the International Typographical Union, in convention assembled, August 13, 1917, recommends that the attention of the postal authorities be called to the insanitary condition of the mail bags furnished newspaper and job offices, with the request that same be fumigated or treated in some other approved manner at necessary intervals.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

In addition your committee believes that the sanitary committees of local unions working in cooperation with the health departments in your jurisdiction can accomplish beneficial results, and that employes in composing rooms where typesetting devices are operated should insist that proprietors equip these rooms in such a way that the fumes will not be detrimental to the health of our members.

We also wish to commend the work done by the International Typographical Union in its work toward stamping out the great white plague, especially at the Home, and the great good accomplished at such small expenditure and that this work be continued.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ORGANIZATION.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on organization respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Considering territory covered and time required for same, the representatives have accomplished great good for the organization the past year. They have made good in organizing new unions, bringing the owner and workman closer together by a clearer understanding of the rights of each, and inculcating new and helpful ideas to the proprietors of our aims and ambitions. Their visits in the vast territory covered have had a wholesome effect upon unionism. The committee recommends that the policy of past years be continued in the future.

Much good has been accomplished by the representatives in organization work among the small-town printers. Your committee believes that this work should receive all the attention that can possibly be given to it, consistent with the other duties of the representatives.

We commend the work of the interstate, state and district conferences, and urge them to continue to meet to further organization efforts.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON PUBLICITY.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on publicity respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

First. We heartily endorse the methods of publicity heretofore employed by our International officers and recommend a continuance and enlargement of same as conditions will permit.

Second. Belonging to a craft whose almost sole livelihood is obtained through the publicity used by others, we of all people should recognize the value of such publicity; we therefore recommend that all local unions be instructed to appoint local committees on publicity, the name of whose chairman shall be furnished to the International secretary-treasurer and whose duty shall be to use from time to time matter furnished by headquarters by having same published in their local papers, trade journals, magazines and periodicals as much as may be possible.

While we believe the International officers are more familiar than this committee with the most important features of our organization to be put forward in the campaign, yet we do suggest that the principal features of the Home, the old age pension, the mortuary benefit, our tuberculosis treatment and provisions for our patriotic members in the American and Canadian armies, and the arbitration agreement furnish the groundwork for matter of great interest to the public as well as of infinite promise of good results to the craft.

We further recommend that local committees be furnished from time to time feature stories, with cuts and illustrations when compatible, concerning these and other features of our organization which may be deemed of sufficient importance, believing that in most instances local publications will give favorable consideration to such matter.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Your committee on THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL has carefully surveyed the reports of the secretary-treasurer upon the issuing of THE JOURNAL and has considered the seemingly large deficit in THE JOURNAL fund, which had to be met from the general fund for the past year. By a careful study of THE JOURNAL account (page 84, officers' reports) one can readily see why this deficit: The cost of production has increased about 25 per cent, and considering that 61,350 members should be paying this increase, and that the increase in cost of paper and inks has been from $6 to $9 per hundred, and even this at a premium, the reason for the deficit is seen. This increased cost would in itself, were it charged to the membership, amount to more than $2,454. THE JOURNAL requires from 175 to 200 reams of 39 x 53 inch stock and can be had of only one union mill. The additional cost of inks and handling has added to this, and even now we must look to a still greater increase because of the advancing scales of wages of all the allied crafts. When you consider this, the price to each member for THE JOURNAL is only half of what should be the cost per member. The actual cost of production is just double what it was five years ago, yet no provision has been made by the membership to increase THE JOURNAL fund, hence the yearly deficits. We must also consider that the local unions are not charged for their ads in the roster unless they have more than a prescribed space. THE JOURNAL is a valuable magazine, and one of which the membership is justly proud. Your committee would like to be able to report that every local has kept the membership at large well informed as to its jurisdiction, but this is not so, as is also the case with many representatives. These reports should be full, clear, concise and monthly, as they would lend much color. January, 1917, saw a decrease in the size of THE JOURNAL because of this, and many of the cuts have also been eliminated, so as to keep down the cost for the year 1918.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON ALLIED TRADES RELATIONS.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on allied trades relations respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Proposition No. 66—By Seattle Union:

SEATTLE, WASH., August 5, 1917.

To the Officers and Delegates of the International Convention, Colorado Springs, Colo.:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—The following resolutions were adopted today by Seattle Typographical Union No. 202:

Whereas, The president of the International Typographical Union has refused to underwrite the scale of wages adopted recently by Tacoma Typographical Union No. 170, for the reason cited that it was drawn in the form of a blanket document covering all the allied crafts of the printing industry; and,

Whereas, Typographical unions throughout the country have been for many years advocating closer affiliation between the allied crafts in this industry, and have been bending every effort to that end; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Seattle Typographical Union No. 202, in regular session assembled, declares it sees no good or valid reason for the action of the president of the International Typographical Union in refusing to underwrite the scale adopted by Tacoma Typographical Union No. 170; that, even granting that he is not authorized under present laws to underwrite a scale for other crafts (although this admission is made by Seattle Typographical Union No. 202 only for the sake of argument), even in that event this union believes he certainly could and should have underwritten that part of the scale which referred to Tacoma Typographical Union No. 170; and, be it further

Resolved, That Seattle Typographical Union No. 202 is in favor and urges such changes in the laws of the International Typographical Union as are necessary to permit of closer affiliation, as is suggested in the Tacoma document, covering as it does all rules and regulations for the different crafts, and sanctioning concurrent and co-termination of scales of the allied crafts.

Respectfully submitted,
George W. Ficks,
H. C. Ross,
F. C. Cattle,
(Seal) Committee.

Attest:
H. C. Ross, President;
R. M. McCullough, Secretary;
Seattle Typographical Union No. 202.

Your committee recommends that the action of President Scott in declining to underwrite the blanket contract presented by Tacoma Typographical Union No. 170 covering scales for all the printing trades unions in that city be endorsed.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

At a meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association held on July 10, 1916, the following relating to the subject of contracts and scales was adopted:

Neither the Board of Governors nor any local allied printing trades council has any jurisdiction or supervision over scale contracts made by subordinate unions. Wage scale contracts and agreements are governed by the laws and regulations of local and international unions having jurisdiction over the department or departments covered by such contracts.

Agreements which include the use of the label of any subordinate union are subject to the laws and decisions of the International Allied Printing Trades Association.

In determining the periods to be covered by wage scales and contracts it is advisable that there should be co-operation between subordinate unions represented in allied printing trades councils to the end that the full benefits of joint action may be obtained where local conditions may make such action desirable.

It is a fact that is well known that a signature to any contract covers all the provisions of the contract. Had President Scott attached his signature to the contract mentioned in the resolutions adopted by Seattle Typographical Union he would have placed the International Typographical Union in the position of guaranteeing that all the unions interested in said contract would carry out all the provisions of that contract, and should the contract be not lived up to in its entirety by any of the unions concerned therein, whether affiliated with the International Typographical Union or not, this organization might be taken into court and made responsible for the violation of a contract by an organization over which it had no jurisdiction or control.

The question of the closer affiliation of the printing trades organizations is not in any way involved in the action of President Scott in refusing to underwrite the contract mentioned, closer affiliation being a question involving an agreement between the five international unions of the printing trades. This subject was given extended consideration in the message of President Berry, of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, delivered before this convention by Vice-President Brophy, of the same organization. In the address of Mr. Berry, closer affiliation is referred to as the "federation" of the printing trades unions, and on the failure of the attempt to reach an agreement on federation he says:

Several propositions have been presented for federation. The writer had the honor and the privilege of submitting to the five international unions a full and complete program for the establishment of an international federation of the five printing trades unions. The details of it have been accepted by the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, by the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers, by the International Photo-Engravers and by the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union. The principle, in so far as federation is concerned, has been accepted by your officials, but the International Typographical Union has declined to accept the entire program, objecting to one feature of it, that being the financial feature.

While the above statement contained in the address of Mr. Berry is essentially true, it is made in such a manner as to be likely to mislead many of the delegates to this convention who are not familiar with the attempts that have been made to secure an agreement for closer affiliation or federation.

Year after year the conventions of the International Typographical Union have declared emphatically in favor of closer affiliation, and the officers have at various times been instructed to co-operate with the other organizations in an attempt to bring about such an agreement. Some five years ago, a meeting was called of the representatives of all of the five international unions connected with the printing trades for the purpose of trying to reach an agreement upon closer affiliation. This meeting was called by the representatives of the International Typographical Union through direction of a typographical union convention. A number of meetings were held and several propositions submitted for an agreement to provide for closer affiliation. It was agreed by the representatives of all the organizations that if closer affiliation were attained and it was decided that a large strike or defense fund were to be established, it would require at least 10 cents per capita per month from each of the members of the affiliated unions. The representatives of the International Typographical Union, however, never agreed that it was necessary to establish a large strike or defense fund and upon this point did the differences hinge which prevented the consummation of the agreement.

The executive council of the International Typographical Union submitted to the Providence convention the tentative agreement that had been reached by the representatives of the various organizations and asked that convention to direct as to whether a proposition should be submitted to a referendum vote raising the per capita tax 10 cents per month per member for the purpose of creating a strike or defense fund for the International Allied Printing Trades Association through closer affiliation of the five international unions. That convention decided that it would not submit the question to a referendum and the matter was so reported back to the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association, the statement being made that the International Typographical Union through its convention had declined to assess its members 10 cents per month each for the purposes named.

The members of the executive council have maintained and contended all the way through this discussion that closer affiliation could be brought about without the increase of the per capita tax or the establishing of a large strike or defense fund. While President Berry says that the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union is composed of 40,000 members, at the time that this controversy was on it did not claim more than 19,000 or 20,000 members. It will thus be seen that while the 10-cent raise in the per capita tax would cost the International Typographical Union the sum of $72,000 per year, it would at that time have cost the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union only a little over $20,000 per year and would have produced less than $40,000 per year from all of the other four organizations affiliated with the International Allied Printing Trades Association, in addition to the $72,000 which would be contributed by the members of the International Typographical Union.

If the claim of Mr. Berry that the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union would pay into the fund at the present time on 40,000 members and the other unions would agree to and did pay upon their full membership, the International Typographical Union would still be paying more than one-half of the money that went into the fund. When we take into consideration that our expenses for strikes during the past year were less than $5,000, it seems to your committee that it would be folly to try to raise the per capita tax 10 cents per month for the purpose of creating a strike or defense fund to be handled by representatives of all of the international printing trades unions.

Replying to the statement of President Berry that the board of directors of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union believe there should be some decisive action taken by the convention of the International Typographical Union to determine what their action is to be upon the subject of federation, your committee recommends that this convention declare that the International Typographical Union is now and always has been in favor of the closer affiliation of the five international unions in the printing trades for the protection of their members, but that it endorses the position taken by the executive council of the International Typographical Union upon the creation of a large strike or defense fund, and that it further instruct the executive council to continue its efforts looking toward closer affiliation whenever opportunity offers.

Your committee further recommends that this convention declare that the statement that the International Typographical Union is responsible for the failure to secure closer affiliation of the five international printing trades unions is incorrect, the only difference of opinion between this organization and the other organizations being as to the creation of a large fund.

While Mr. Berry states that the four international unions outside of the International Typographical Union have adopted the proposition that was submitted to our Providence convention, the International officers have never had any notification that such proposition was adopted by the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union.

Owing to the numerous complaints of unsatisfactory conditions from the smaller unions under our jurisdiction where allied printing trades councils are formed of but two allied crafts, we recommend that our executive council seriously consider the advisability of amending the laws of the International Allied Printing Trades Association so that no allied council shall be formed and the use of the allied label permitted in any jurisdiction where there are less than three of the allied crafts organized and affiliated into an allied printing trades council.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON UNION PRINTERS HOME.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Your committee on Union Printers Home respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Proposition No. 41—By Delegate Wilson (Houston):

Add new resolution relating to residents of Union Printers Home, to read:

Under no circumstances shall a resident with tuberculosis be transferred to the main building.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 53—By Delegate Hunt (Fresno):

Resolved, That when a member of the International Typographical Union who is afflicted, coming from an unorganized town or from a local union who has not the wherewith to send him to the Home and deposits his card with another local and then makes application to the Home, that the local sending him to the Home be reimbursed by the International Typographical Union for that transportation.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Hunt (Fresno) gave his reasons for introducing the proposition.

Delegate Leighly (Pittsburgh) said the adoption of such a proposition would lead to needless expenditures from the Home fund.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays said:

There is another phase of this proposition that occurs to me. We set forth the other day to some degree the extent that local officials will go in some cases to get people on the list of the old age pension; the same thing applies to sending people to the Home.

The law provides that local unions shall pay the transportation of members who come to the Home from the city where the union is located. If the man vacates the Home he is entitled to return transportation from the Home fund. If he does not want to go back to the place he came from, he is entitled to transportation to any point he desires that can be covered by the same amount of transportation. If this proposition were adopted, a man could deposit his card in a local union in the east and make application; the union could endorse his application to come to the Home; he could stay a week or two weeks, whatever he wanted to, take transportation and go on to the Pacific coast, and you would have a procession going from one ocean to the other and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, all the time at the expense of the International Typographical Union.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 62—By Delegate Bowen (Washington, D. C.):

Whereas, The subject of the establishment of a branch home in some locality with a lower altitude than that of the Union Printers Home at Colorado Springs has been agitated for many years, having been brought to the attention of the membership through THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL, and also at several of the conventions of the International Typographical Union; and,

Whereas, We believe the wishes of members advocating such branch home should be recognized by this convention, and investigated, with a view to seeing whether such a move would be advisable; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the International Typographical Union, in convention assembled, That the president is hereby authorized to appoint a committee of three members whose duty it shall be to make a careful investigation, receive propositions from localities claiming to have suitable climates for such cases as can not stand the climate of Colorado Springs, and make a detailed report to the next convention of the International Typographical Union—the chairman of said committee to be present at such convention and be prepared to answer such questions relative thereto as members may desire to ask.

Resolved, further, That whatever expense shall be attached to such investigation shall be borne by the International Typographical Union, except where the committee is invited to visit locations proposed; in such cases the expense for said visit to be paid by the parties submitting the proposition.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Bardin (Tampa) said the idea of a branch home originated with his union because there seemed to be a need for a home for the purpose of caring for members who are unable to live in the altitude of Colorado Springs.

Delegate Zander (Chicago) said the plan for a branch home was not feasible at this time because there was no fund to support it. He favored the report of the committee.

Chairman Leighley (Pittsburgh) of the committee said several similar propositions were before the convention, and it acted unfavorably upon all of them for the reason no provision was made for the support of a branch home should one be established.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays said:

At the last three or four conventions propositions have been made looking to the establishment of auxiliary homes in various sections of the country, and we have in this report three or four columns of matter that was referred from the Baltimore convention relating to homes. Tampa wants a home. North Carolina wants a home. There is agitation for a home in Arizona. Convention after convention has been handling this question of auxiliary homes in what would be termed a sentimental position toward the localities that are asking for a home.

The question that should be settled first is, do we want a branch of the Union Printers Home in any locality in this country? If the International Typographical Union decides that it does, then there would be plenty of time to take up the question and pick out the site.

I want to call your attention to this: During the past year the International Typographical Union expended $156,726.69 on the Union Printers Home at Colorado Springs. Of this amount $33,579.90 was expended for buildings, repairs and improvements and refund of transportation, leaving a balance of $123,146.76 that it cost to maintain this institution. If, twenty-seven years ago, when the question of building a home at Colorado Springs first came up, the membership had been told that in twenty-five years it would cost them $150,000 a year to run the institution, do you believe that it would ever have been built? Do you believe that the membership now wants to take the chances of starting another home that may possibly prove just as expensive a proposition as the one they now have? Do you think the membership of the International Typographical Union wants to be placed in the position of having people come to this home, and after they get here if they are the least dissatisfied with anything, say "I want to go to the other home; this doesn't suit me." And what are you going to do about it? If they are in the other home and there is something they do not like—the sheet is not right on the bed—they will say, "I do not like this; I want to go to Colorado Springs."

The statement has been made that there are a number of members afflicted who can not come to this Home. That statement has been made frequently. I want to say that it is a statement very much exaggerated. When you take the capacity of the Home into consideration, there are times, I am sorry to say, when the capacity of the Home is filled, and there are quite a large number of people on the list who have made applications and been accepted that can not come here at once because we have not room for them, but if we are to make room to place them, here is the place to do it. The number who can not come because of the climate is small. Those who come and make the complaint that they can not live here because of the high altitude, ninety-nine out of every hundred make the complaint because they are dissatisfied and want to go home, or to some other location, or want to get the old age pension. They ask the admission committee in many cases to reject their applications because they do not want to come here and want to get the pension. We have a case before the board of trustees now in which the member made application from a union to come to the Home; the member is not 60 years of age. His application was endorsed and he was sent a certificate of admission, and we have a letter from his union and from individuals in the locality asking the board of trustees to reconsider his application and reject it so as to place him in a position where he can make application for the pension, because he does not want to move from the locality he is in and come to Colorado Springs. We are up against that all of the time. You will be having more and more if you get another home.

The officers of the International Typographical Union have been to Tampa and looked over the situation. We took a ride out in an automobile some distance from the city, and the automobile stopped and a member of the typographical union said, "Right over there in that direction is the location selected for the home, but there isn't any road to it. If you accept the site and erect a home we will see that a road is built." We had not been home from Tampa more than a week or ten days until we had four or five letters from real estate men offering sites and sites with buildings on to the International Typographical Union if we wanted a home in that locality. The question, as I say, is first to decide whether you want a branch home and then there will be time enough to appoint a committee to pick out a site on which the Home shall be built.

Delegate Cavanagh (New York) favored the report of the committee.

Delegate Adams (Lincoln) asked to be recorded as voting in favor of the report of the committee.

President Scott said Propositions Nos. 83 and 84 would be considered together.

Proposition No. 83—By the Baltimore convention:

[The following propositions submitted to the Baltimore convention in 1916 refer to the establishment of a branch of the Union Printers Home in various locations, and the action of that convention is submitted herewith. These propositions (Nos. 81, 83 and 132) were ordered submitted to the 1917 convention at Colorado Springs]:

Proposition No. 81—By Delegate Weston (Jacksonville):

Whereas, During the past several years there has been a general agitation for the establishment of a branch home of the Union Printers Home at some suitable place in the south; and,

Whereas, It has been demonstrated that a high altitude is not always beneficial in tuberculosis cases, when the disease was contracted in low altitudes, and that the pine forests of the southeastern states have contributed some most wonderful cures from this dreaded malady; and,

Whereas, We believe no nobler, no grander work could possibly be performed by the International Typographical Union than to extend and enlarge on the great work that has been accomplished at Colorado Springs by this world-famed institution for the care of our brothers and sisters who have been "marked for death," so many of whom have gone back to their loved ones and their labors sound in body and mind, singing the praises of the Union Printers Home; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it be and is the sense of this convention that a suitable branch home be established in one of the pine forest states of the southeast, and that the executive council of the International Typographical Union is hereby designated a committee to investigate conditions and decide upon a suitable location for such a home, to purchase lands and to erect suitable buildings thereon, and otherwise equip and furnish and put in operation a branch home in every way suitable or similar to the already established Home at Colorado Springs; and, be it further

Resolved, That the sum of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary for the carrying out of this resolution, be set aside from the general funds for this purpose, and that upon the adoption of these resolutions by a majority referendum vote of the International Typographical Union membership a special levy of 10 cents per member per month be levied on all working members of the International Typographical Union for such length of time as may be necessary to pay back into the general fund the sum loaned; that upon the completion of said branch home an additional one-fourth of 1 per cent of the earnings of the International Typographical Union membership be levied, and that this sum be regularly transferred to the secretary-treasurer of the Union Printers Home Corporation, as provided by section 7, article ix.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Proposition No. 83—By Delegate Henry (Columbia, S. C.):

Whereas, Owing to the extreme inaccessibility of the Union Printers Home at Colorado Springs to unions located in eastern and southern parts of the United States, and to the proved unsuitability of the climate of Colorado to consumptives coming from warm climates, there is a constantly growing demand throughout the southern and south-central sections of the country for the establishment by the International Typographical Union of a branch sanatorium for the treatment of members afflicted with tuberculosis, to be located at some suitable point in the southeastern part of the United States; and,

Whereas, It is a matter of world-wide knowledge that there are numerous locations in the territory seeking this branch with climate unexcelled for this purpose, where, by availing itself of nature's bounties, the International Typographical Union may prolong and save the lives of many of its members, effecting at the same time a great saving to the treasuries of local unions; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the president of the International Typographical Union be and is hereby instructed to appoint, within thirty days after adjournment of this convention, a commission consisting of five members, three of whom shall be from locals located east of the Mississippi river, whose duty it shall be to collect data and information from cities and communities desiring said sanatorium, making thorough personal investigation into the claims of each, and to report its findings, together with such recommendations concerning the establishment of said sanatorium as their findings may warrant, to the next annual convention of this organization. For their services as such, members of this commission shall each receive the sum of $5 per day and expenses while in the active discharge of their duties; Provided, That members of said commission shall be compensated for their work for a total of not more than thirty days each, except with the consent of the executive council, which is hereby empowered to grant an extension of time with compensation as specified above for a period of fifteen days if in its judgment such extension shall appear necessary to complete their investigation.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Proposition No. 132—By Delegate Baker (Tampa):

Whereas, It is a well-known fact that there is a growing demand for a branch of the Colorado Springs Home in a climate that can treat patients unable to go to the present home on account of climatic conditions; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the convention that the matter of a branch home be submitted to the referendum at the next regular election.

Committee reports unfavorably.

President Scott ruled that Propositions Nos. 82, 83 and 132, which referred to the same subject as Proposition No. 81, would be referred to the 1917 convention.

The ruling of President Scott was concurred in by the convention.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 84—By the Baltimore convention:

[The following is a proposition and the action of the Baltimore convention thereon intended to provide for the establishment of an endowment fund for the Union Printers Home]:

Proposition No. 167—By Delegate Woolsey (Springfield, Mo.):

Amend article ix, constitution, by adding the following new section:

UNION PRINTERS HOME ENDOWMENT FUND.

Section —. There is hereby created the "Union Printers Home Endowment Fund," the same to consist of such moneys and other property as may be donated to or otherwise provided for such fund. All such funds shall pass through the hands of the secretary-treasurer of the International Typographical Union and then go into the hands of the secretary-treasurer of the Union Printers Home Corporation as the official custodian thereof, subject to investment as hereinafter provided. The principal of such fund shall be held perpetually by the International Typographical Union and be invested and reinvested by it, through and by the executive council, as provided by law. All interest and income derived from the investment of such fund shall go into the "Union Printers Home Fund," and shall be used toward the maintenance of said Union Printers Home. Such endowment fund shall be invested and reinvested from time to time by the secretary-treasurer in bonds of the United States, or in approved non-taxable state, county, township, city or school district within the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union, or loaned upon unencumbered improved real estate situated within said jurisdiction and reasonably worth double the amount loaned thereon.

The secretary-treasurer shall furnish a blank upon which all donations to said endowment fund shall be made, and there shall be printed annually in the reports of officers a list of the names to date, chronologically arranged, of all donors of $25 or more to the Union Printers Home Endowment Fund.

Committee recommends this proposition be referred to the executive council and the trustees of the Union Printers Home to report same to the next convention.

Chairman Hoban (Cleveland) of the committee on laws stated the committee thought the proposition a good one, but believed the Home trustees should be first consulted on the subject, hence the report of the committee.

Delegate Woolsey (Springfield, Mo.) said the report of the committee was satisfactory to him and favored the adoption thereof.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

[It will be noted by the action of the Baltimore convention that the proposition was submitted to the executive council and the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home to be reported upon at the Colorado Springs convention.

Your executive council followed out the instructions of the Baltimore convention and presented the proposition to the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home at its last session in Colorado Springs. The board of trustees and the executive council, after consultation with the attorney for the Union Printers Home Corporation, decided that the establishment of an endowment fund for the Home was a matter entirely under the jurisdiction of the board of trustees, and therefore took the matter up for final settlement at that time, with the result that favorable action was taken and the laws of the Home Corporation so amended as to provide for the establishment of an endowment fund. The law is now in effect, the fund is established and some money has already accumulated therein.]

Committee reports action unnecessary, as the endowment fund has been established by the Home trustees.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

President Scott said Propositions Nos. 115 and 116 would be considered together.

Proposition No. 115—By Delegate Appleyard (Tallahassee):

Whereas, The International Typographical Union contemplates establishing another home in some southern state; and,

Whereas, Secretary T. J. Appleyard has called the attention of the Florida Press Association to this proposed new home; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Florida Press Association, in convention assembled, does hereby authorize the secretary to immediately communicate with the proper officials and invite them to investigate the natural resources of Florida before selecting any point for such a home; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes, and that a copy be furnished each paper in the state, with a request that the matter be agitated to such an extent to secure said home for Florida.

At a meeting of Tallahassee Typographical Union No. 660, held August 6, 1917, the following resolution was adopted unanimously:

"Resolved, That this union heartily endorses the resolutions of the Florida Press Association as above, and that we believe this state is the proper one to establish such a home when the International Union shall be in position to take up the matter. But we believe it would be the part of wisdom to defer action thereon for another year, on account of the war."

Proposition No. 116—By Delegate Appleyard (Tallahassee):

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed by the president, from the southeastern unions represented, to receive proposals for the erection of a branch Union Printers Home; that this committee meet at some central point in said southeastern territory to receive such proposals as may be offered not later than June, 1918; and that full report be made to the International Typographical Union at its session in 1918. Proposition No. 117—By Delegate Hughes (Albuquerque):

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., July 12, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of Local Typographical Unions:

DEAR BROTHERS—At the regular July meeting of Albuquerque Typographical Union No. 304, the following resolution was adopted without a dissenting vote:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this union that our delegate to the International Typographical Union convention at Colorado Springs, Colo., be instructed to use his best efforts to have the convention legislate in favor of directing the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home to adopt the plaster treatment for tuberculosis now in use at the Read, Dolph & Co. Sanatorium at Albuquerque, N. M."

The members of Albuquerque Typographical Union hope the members of your local will see the wisdom of following the lead of Albuquerque Union and that you will instruct your delegate to co-operate with our delegate, Thomas Hughes, to get this legislation through. In case you are not sending a delegate, kindly write the convention a letter urging that they adopt this treatment for use in the Union Printers Home.

We have two members who are taking this treatment, both having recently left the Home without beneficial results and who are stanch supporters of this treatment.

We are inclosing booklet which will fully explain what this treatment is and what is claimed for the treatment.

Thanking you in advance for your support in this matter, we are respectfully yours,

ALBUQUERQUE TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION No. 304,
FRANK H. LOWE, President.
J. B. HARRIS, Secretary-Treasurer.

referred to in the Albuquerque resolution did not have tuberculosis when they left the Home.

On the appeal from the action of the board of trustees of the Union Printers Home by Charles E. Ayers, of Boston, Mass., who has locomotor ataxia and desires to be admitted to the Home, your committee recommends that the action of the board be endorsed.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Your committee desires to congratulate the membership of the International Typographical Union on the efficient management of the Union Printers Home under the superintendent and matron, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Daley, and on the co-operation of the board of trustees.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON POSTAL TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE SERVICE.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Your committee on postal telegraph and telephone service respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

The revenue bill now pending before the congress of the United States contains provisions calculated to lay great additional burdens on the printing and publishing industry of the United States with no corresponding benefit to the public in the matter of revenue obtained. We realize fully that under existing conditions it is imperative that unusual methods be adopted for the purpose of providing the government with the means for carrying on the tremendous undertakings of the war. The greater proportion of these burdens must necessarily be laid on the industries of the country, but the imposts should be so distributed as to cause the least possible inconvenience to the people as a whole. The postoffice of the United States is a great public convenience, and through its continuous and efficient operation the people are provided with opportunity to readily communicate with each other, to transact their business and to carry on their social intercourse. Through the postoffice is provided a ready means for the distribution of information vital to the existence of our nation, this accomplished by the circulation of newspapers, books, magazines, catalogs, pamphlets, circulars, and other forms of printed matter, whose general circulation and prompt delivery is necessary to give opportunity for knowledge and discussion of the events and issues on which depends the whole existence of our great republic. Any attempt to limit or circumscribe the free and full use of the postoffice by reason of increase in charges made for carrying and delivering any form of printed matter or the handling of letters or postal cards must be looked upon as a backward step, the effect of which very likely would be to defeat any hoped-for addition to the revenue because of its undue restriction of the use of the mails.

Your committee has fully considered the report of the committee on postal telegraph and telephone service, as published in the reports of officers submitted to this convention, and commends the same to the delegates and members at large for careful perusal. We endorse the actions of the standing committee in its efforts to secure from congress favorable consideration of this important subject, and recommend that the committee be continued with instructions to further prosecute its work.

Your committee has been furnished with information concerning efforts made to secure a reduction in the exorbitant prices put on all forms of paper supplied to the printing industry. This outrageous extortion, practiced by the profiteering combine that controls the print paper industry of America has laid such tax on the publishers and printers of the country as has forced a restriction of output and a consequent limitation of opportunity for employment to our members. We protest most earnestly against the further continuation of the conditions that have made the situation unbearable, and endorse the acts of our officers, who have assisted in all ways available to them to bring relief to the printing industry of America from the burden of unreasonable cost of paper.

Your committee recommends that the president of the International Typographical Union be authorized to lend his assistance to the defeat of all efforts to increase the rates of postage on printed matter of any kind and on letters beyond existing rates; and further, that he continue to assist in efforts that are being made to secure the reduction on the price of paper to a reasonable basis, to the end that the printing industry in general may have its just and proper share of the prosperity of the country without undue and burdensome taxation.

Respectfully submitted,
J. W. Keller, Chairman;
B. C. Stearns, Secretary;
N. J. Baum,
Walter J. Weissman,
Harry C. Haines,
Thomas Hughes,

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON SUBORDINATE UNIONS.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Your committee on subordinate unions respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

In reviewing that part of the secretary-treasurer's report relating to subordinate unions, your committee finds that subordinate unions throughout the jurisdiction are in better condition numerically and financially than ever, a condition denoting that subordinate unions are rightfully coming into their own through the judicious efforts of our executive officers.

We also note that the number of charters issued was twenty-four and the membership of those unions was 269, while the charters surrendered were only nine and the membership was but sixty.

Your committee recommends that the International officers be commended for their untiring efforts in helping subordinate unions to decide all intricate questions coming before subordinate unions. Respectfully submitted,

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON PRESS.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Your committee on press respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

We desire to express our thanks and appreciation to the newspapers of Colorado, and especially those of Colorado Springs—the Gazette, the Telegraph, the Labor News and the El Paso County Democrat—for the comprehensive and sympathetic manner in which the sixty-third annual convention of the International Typographical Union and silver jubilee or twenty-fifth anniversary of the Union Printers Home were covered. The editorial and news columns showed a keen understanding and intimate knowledge of the high ideals for which the International Typographical Union has always striven in the trades union movement. We appreciate also the very cordial reception which was accorded the delegates in their visits at the several newspaper homes.

We also desire to thank those responsible for placing in the hands of delegates copies of the several local papers, and especially for copies of the convention number of the Denver Labor Bulletin.

We recommend that this convention pledge anew its support to the labor press generally, for through its columns the cause of unionism is advocated as through no other channel.

Columbia Union No. 101, in presenting delegates with a historical sketch of that union, printed in book form, has provided a souvenir that will be treasured in the years to come.

It is with sincerest regret we record the death, during the sessions of this convention, of one of our committee members, Delegate P. R. Pampusch, of Minneapolis.

Respectfully submitted,

Frederick H. Dunham, Chairman;

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON APPRENTICES.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Your committee on apprentices respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Proposition No. 109—By Delegate Stokes (Baltimore):

Resolved, That the executive council shall devise a form, to be used by apprentice committees of subordinate unions, for reporting quarterly the progress made by them in instructing and examining registered apprentices, in their respective grades, in the theory and practice of the printers' trade and the instruction given in the practices of unionism as applied by the International Typographical Union; that it shall be issued in accordance with the International Typographical Union's fiscal regulation and the cost paid out of the general fund; that it shall be issued quarterly to subordinate unions and the inquiries contained therein answered, signed by at least two of the local apprentice committee and countersigned by the president and corresponding secretary within ten days of receipt thereof; that subordinate unions failing to make the reports herein required shall be fined $25 for each failure to so report within the specified time; and, be it further

Resolved, That the form of the report shall contain the following inquiries:

1. Name of subordinate union. Number.
2. Have you an apprentice committee?
3. Names and addresses.
4. Are all apprentices, union and non-union, registered with the local union?
5. How many union? How many non-union?
6. Has each been examined as to his educational qualifications? How many rejected?
7. State the examination questions.
8. Have the apprentices been organized in grades or classes?
9. How many attend night school?
10. How many are contributing financially to educational advantages designed for their benefit?
11. How many are students of the I. T. U. Course?
12. What are the wages agreed upon for apprentices?
13. How often has the apprentice committee met during the quarter?
14. How often have the registered apprentices met during the quarter?
15. What constructive work is being done or contemplated to develop apprentices?
16. Are the principles of unionism as applied by the International Typographical Union taught?
17. Have laws been enacted governing and defining the grade and class of work apprentices shall be taught?
18. How many have been admitted as apprentice members and have a register number?
19. How many apprentice members receive The Typographical Journal?
20. Does your union furnish a typographical button to graduated apprentices?

Committee recommends that this proposition be referred to the International Typographical Union Committee on Apprentices for its consideration and recommendation at some future time.

Delegate Stokes (Baltimore) discussed the apprentice question at length and said he appreciated the action of the committee.

Delegate Oliver (Denver) favored the report of the committee.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 110—By the New York delegation:

Whereas, The International Typographical Union apprentice committee is now composed of three members; and,

Whereas, On account of the increased interest being taken in apprentice training and industrial education, the International Typographical Union apprentice committee should consist of five members instead of three; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the International Typographical Union apprentice committee be increased from three to five members; and, be it further

Resolved, That the said committee consist of its present membership and two additional members, to be appointed by President Marsden G. Scott; and, be it further

Resolved, That as there are now over six hundred active members of the International Typographical Union teaching printing in schools and institutions, that one of the two new members selected be chosen from the membership of the International Association of Teachers of Printing; and, be it further

Resolved, That the members of the International Association of Teachers of Printing so chosen shall hold an active and paid-up working card of the International Typographical Union.

Committee reports unfavorably because same is covered in the report of the International Typographical Union committee on apprentices.

Delegate Cavanagh (New York) said the proposition was introduced by request.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

We heartily endorse the work of the International Typographical Union apprentice committee as shown by its report to this convention. We would call attention to the plan of establishing our own course in printing, copyrighted, owned and controlled by the International Typographical Union and operated from headquarters at Indianapolis. Messrs. Brady, Hertenstein and Hoban, of the International Typographical Union apprentice committee, appeared before your committee and explained that this course when inaugurated would be sold to apprentices at cost of operation, and they believed a considerable reduction could be made from the present cost. The outline of what the course is to contain appears in the report of the apprentice committee. It states:

The course will not be ready for inauguration until January 1, 1918, when it will be launched. It is proposed to furnish this instruction to students at cost price. When put into operation the course will be owned absolutely by the International Typographical Union and can be changed in any manner that may be found to be advantageous to secure the maximum results, the changes so made not conflicting with any one's copyright, since we will own the copyright. No compensation has been agreed upon for Mr. Blue's services. In fact, he assumed the extremely modest position of insisting that he serve without pay, but we believe and recommend that at the conclusion of his services Mr. Blue should be recompensed for his labor in an amount that may appear to the executive council to be fair for the work performed.

We recommend that the foregoing suggestion be concurred in by this convention.

The recommendation of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Your committee has carefully considered the correspondence betwen President Scott and A. H. McQuilkin relative to the course now in operation, and we believe that the proper steps have been taken by the president in securing our interests. We therefore endorse the position of the president, executive council and apprentice committee in this matter and recommend that further disposition thereof be left in the hands of the executive council with power to act.

The recommendation of the committee was unanimously adopted.

We recommend that the executive council notify all local unions that beginning with January 1, 1918, our endorsement of what is now known as the I. T. U. Course is withdrawn, and that after the above date the International Typographical Union will not be responsible for any liabilities incurred in connection with that course; also beginning with January 1, 1918, the International Typographical Union will begin the promotion of its own correspondence course, copyrighted, owned, controlled and operated by it from headquarters at Indianapolis, and that this instruction will be furnished at cost of operation.

We endorse and approve the plan of the committee for a course of thirty-six lessons, to begin at the entry of the apprentice in his third year at the rate of one lesson a month, so that completion of the course will be at the completion of his five years' apprenticeship.

The recommendation of the committee was unanimously adopted.

We realize that the work of the committee is an uphill task, and in order to secure results it must have the unqualified support of local unions. To that end we recommend that local unions hold monthly meetings of the apprentice committee, and that all apprentices be required to appear before such committee for examination.

We also recommend that local unions incorporate in their contracts with employers a clause requiring all apprentices to take the course in printing of the International Typographical Union.

The recommendation of the committee was unanimously adopted.

If the foregoing recommendations are carried out we believe that the problem which has confronted the committee on apprentices will be solved as to the examination of apprentices from year to year as the law provides and to which the committee calls attention in its reports, as follows:

Many inquiries have been received from local apprentice committees, soliciting suggestions for the examination of apprentices from year to year as the law provides. It is impossible to lay down any fixed rule or to formulate any set of examination questions or tests which will apply unless a uniform course of instruction is adhered to. If local unions, in negotiating wage scales, will provide that apprentices be required to take the course in printing approved by the International Typographical Union, then a test for each year's proficiency can be set. As the course is planned to provide twelve lessons for each year of the third, fourth and fifth years, the union, through its apprentice committee, should satisfy itself that the apprentice has mastered the subjects of one year thoroughly before being advanced to the succeeding year. This it can do by analyzing the record of the apprentice's lesson papers in the course for the year, and it may supplement this by a further test of his eligibility to advance.

The attention of the membership is especially called to the articles on pages 206 to 209 of the officers' reports, namely "Teaching of Printing in the Public Schools," "Co-operation Is the Touchstone," "Attitude of Employing Printers," and

"The Viewpoint of a Prominent Educator." We believe these articles touch every phase of the situation and your committee is in full accord with the views expressed therein.

We also recommend a uniform wage scale and regulations as recommended by the International Typographical Union apprentice committee on pages 210 and 211 of the officers' reports.

The recommendation of the committee was unanimously adopted.

We concur in the following recommendations of the International Typographical Union apprentice committee:

In the belief that to secure the best results in the work of apprentice training standardization of that training is essential, we recommend that all unions incorporate a clause in their contracts with the employers that all apprentices be required to take up and complete the course in printing approved by the International Typographical Union before being admitted to journeyman membership. By this plan a boy going from one jurisdiction to another has no interruption in his trade training; he takes up his studies in the new jurisdiction just where he left off.

We believe that the work of the committee on supplemental trade education and the committee on apprentices is so closely related that an amalgamation of the two is desirable, and therefore recommend that one committee be appointed by the president to take care of the work of both, this committee to be composed of five members, of which the president shall be an ex-officio member.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

We express the hope that delegates will go back home and impress on their unions the importance of this activity and ask them to make that a prominent feature of the report. In fact, it should be the feature.

Each local union should organize an apprentice association comprising not only apprentices in union offices, but also in non-union shops and good material from vocational training schools under instruction from a union printer.

The apprentice committee of each local should take a personal interest in this association and provide an inspiring entertainment at least once a month encouraging talent of said organization to manifest itself.

The apprentice committee desires in conclusion to ask each and every member of the International Typographical Union to familiarize himself with the apprentice laws on our books, and we particularly call attention to the members that each apprentice be thoroughly acquainted with the laws. The apprentice of today is the journeyman of tomorrow and the foundation of our organization rests upon the proper training of our apprentices.

Respectfully submitted,

C. P. Harwood, Chairman;
John Oliver,
G. P. Bancroft,
C. J. Anderson,
R. A. B. Edie,
Maurice H. Cole,
Maurice A. Adler,
Marvin K. Stokes,
Thomas F. Walden.

The recommendation of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Chairman Harwood (Richmond), of the committee on apprentices, thanked the convention for its favorable action upon the report of his committee and said he hoped that every delegate would go home and see that the apprentices received proper attention and consideration.

President Scott discussed the question.

The report of the committee as a whole was unanimously adopted.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays read the following, which was ordered made a part of the minutes of the session:

To the Officers and Delegates to the Sixty-third Session of the International Typographical Union:

Greetings—On behalf of Minneapolis Typographical Union No. 42 and St. Paul Typographical Union No. 30, and on behalf of his family and relatives, we wish to thank the International officers for the prompt and efficient manner in which they conducted affairs in connection with the death and funeral services of our fellow delegate, Peter Pampusch, of No. 42.

We also wish to thank our fellow delegates, members of Local Union No. 82 and visitors for their expression of sympathy and attendance at the funeral services of our departed brother.

Our thanks are also extended to Rev. Carl Reed Taylor, delegate from Kansas City, who officiated at the services, and to Proctor Deacon, who rendered several musical numbers.

It will be a source of gratification to report back to our locals the fine spirit of fraternalism shown at this time.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RETURNS AND FINANCES.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Your committee on returns and finances respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

The financial statement for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1917, as submitted by Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hays and published in the August issue of The Typographical Journal, is a complete and easily understood document, and we recommend that it be read by all members. The most prominent features of the report are:

Our membership on May 31, 1917, was 66,681, an increase of 1,119 over the year 1916.

The number of pensioners on the roll May 31, 1917, was 1,509, showing an increase of 69 over the previous year, when 1,440 participated in this fund.

The total number of deaths during the year was 825, as against 755 the year previous, an increase of 70.

The balance in the general fund was $99,344.47, as compared with $73,153.52 for the previous year, an increase of $26,190.95.

The balance in the mortuary fund was $287,312.61, as compared with $247,254.63 for the previous year, an increase of $40,057.98.

The balance in the pension fund was $615,875.73, as compared with $616,300.88, a decrease of $425.15 for the year.

The Home fund balance was $24,713.72, as compared with $35,519.47 in 1916, a decrease of $10,805.75.

The earnings of the membership the past year were $66,652,431, as compared with $62,711,805 in 1916, an increase of $3,940,626.

The average earnings per member were $1,086.43.

Total receipts were $1,188,733.32.

Digitized by Google

Pension, strike and mortuary benefits amounted to $777,983.28.

The International Typographical Union has $903,188.34 invested in government, state, county and municipal bonds.

Proposition No. 87, the supplemental report of the secretary-treasurer covering the period from June 1, 1917, to July 31, 1917, is a statement of the financial transactions of the International Typographical Union for the two months named. It is included in this report and will appear in the September issue of THE JOURNAL as part of the proceedings of this convention. The report in full follows:

CERTIFICATE OF AUDITORS.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 3, 1917.

We, the accountants appointed by President Scott to audit the books of the secretary-treasurer, have carefully checked the entries up to and including July 31, 1917, and certify that the foregoing summary presented by Secretary-Treasurer Hays is correct in every particular. Itemized bills are on file for all expenditures, and attached thereto are the canceled check vouchers that have been presented and paid by the bank on which they are drawn.

R. K. SMITH,
G. D. SMITH,
Accountants.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 3, 1917.

STATE OF INDIANA, COUNTY OF MARION, SS:

Personally appeared before me, a notary public for said county and state, R. K. Smith and G. D. Smith, whose signatures are attached to the annexed documents, and who, being duly sworn, certify that the foregoing financial statement is true and correct to the best of their knowledge and belief.

D. M. LARSEN,
(Seal) Notary Public.

My commission expires June 13, 1920.

An examination of the above statement shows the figures to be correct, and are certified to be correct by the sworn statement of the expert accountants, who audited the books of the secretary-treasurer, and the International Board of Auditors.

Proposition No. 85—By the Baltimore convention:

[The following from the proceedings of the Baltimore convention regarding the erection of a memorial to the inventor of the Mergenthaler machine was referred to this convention and the executive council submits it without recommendation]:

Proposition No. 185—By the Baltimore delegation:

Whereas, Baltimore having been the home of Ottmar Mergenthaler, the inventor of the linotype, his family residing in this city at the present time; and,

Whereas, Ottmar Mergenthaler invented and perfected the linotype in this city; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the executive council of the International Typographical Union of North America be and is hereby instructed to lend its aid to the movement looking to the erection of a suitable memorial in Baltimore city to the memory of Ottmar Mergenthaler.

Committee recommends the adoption of the resolution.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays explained the proposition and said that he did not believe the convention should adopt this resolution, after just acting favorably upon a proposition for a memorial for ex-President Prescott. He said that he spoke with due deference to the officers and members of the Baltimore Union, but he did not want the convention to act on this matter without fully understanding it.

Delegate Daniels (Dallas) said that Secretary-Treasurer Hays had expressed his ideas and suggested that the proposition be withdrawn.

Delegate Thomson (Cleveland) moved that this resolution be referred to the Colorado Springs convention.

The motion was adopted.

Committee reports unfavorably, on account of existing conditions as result of the world-war, and deems it inexpedient to start such a memorial at the present time.

Delegate Stokes (Baltimore) moved the matter be referred to the 1918 convention.

The motion was adopted.

Proposition No. 86—By the Baltimore convention:

[The following proposition referring to the erection of a building for the headquarters of the International Typographical Union to be designated as the William B. Prescott building was referred to the executive council to be reported upon to this convention]:

Proposition No. 183—By Delegate Burns (Memphis):

Whereas, The members of the International Typographical Union are of one mind regarding a fitting testimonial to the memory of the late William B. Prescott; and,

Whereas, The annual rental of the offices of the International Typographical Union amounts to about $5,000, and the need for a home office building has for some time been apparent; be it

Resolved, That the executive council be authorized to investigate the possibility of erecting a home office building in Indianapolis, to float a bond issue to cover same, and that the name of such building shall be the "William B. Prescott Building."

We recommend that the executive council inquire into the feasibility of the resolution and report to the Colorado Springs convention in 1917.

The report of the committee was adopted.

[The executive council is of the opinion that if a building is ever erected for the headquarters of the International Typographical Union it should not be named after anything except the organization itself, and that it should be emphatically known as an International Typographical Union building. However, owing to the general conditions existing because of the world-war and the very high cost of material and labor necessary for the erection of a building, your council believes it unwise to proceed further with this proposition at this time and therefore recommends that action upon the erection of a building for International headquarters be indefinitely postponed.]

Committee reports unfavorably on this matter and concurs in the recommendations of the executive council.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 64—By Delegate Spatny (Chicago Bohemian):

Bohemian Typographical Union No. 330, of Chicago, has now been fighting the Bohemian non-union dailies, the Svornost, Narod and the Denni Hlasatel, for more than ten years. The union has been obliged to make considerable sacrifices in order to carry on the fight, one of its weapons being the monthly "Typograf," which is published by the union, at its expense and is now in its ninth year.

As the only organized body of our trade among the Bohemians of Chicago, No. 330 has another important task to perform in watching over other Slavic nationalities, such as Slovaks, the Slovenes, the Croations, etc., and seeing to it that their newspapers and other printing is done in union offices.

Bohemian Typographical Union No. 330 has been doing its duty thus far with but little assistance from the International body. At present, however, its financial means are exhausted, but as we have an opportunity of unionizing two of the daily papers above mentioned (owing to the competitive strife existing between them lately) it would be unpardonable to give up the struggle now.

Digitized by Google

In view of the foregoing the Bohemian Typographical Union No. 330 of Chicago submits to the convention for adoption the following:

Resolved, That the Bohemian Typographical Union No. 330 of Chicago be given adequate support and assistance in its struggle to unionize the offices of the daily Svornost, Denni Hlasatel and Narod.

Committee refers this document to the consideration of the executive council.

Delegate Mitchell (Chicago) suggested that the Polish Union amalgamate with Chicago Union No. 16.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 69—By Delegate Connolly (Syracuse):

Whereas, Followers of the art preservative have at all times been supporters and advocates of liberty and freedom, and many of them have written their names on liberty's scroll of martyrs to its cause; and,

Whereas, When the United States of America was struggling for the right of self-government, one of the leaders in the movement who did much to contribute to its success was Benjamin Franklin, a printer; and,

Whereas, Our brothers in Canada have covered themselves with glory on the battle front in France, and more than forty of them have given their lives for their country and its institutions; and,

Whereas, The United States is now engaged in the same war with Canada for liberty and freedom, and in that undertaking many union printers have enlisted, and are still enlisting, in the armies of Canada and the republic; and,

Whereas, These, our brothers, have suffered and will suffer all the sacrifices and privation that follows in the wake of war, many of them making the supreme sacrifice; and,

Whereas, The welfare and comfort of these, our compatriots, should be one of our first considerations, to the end that the fostering and fraternal care of their union may follow them even into the trenches of France or wherever else they may be called upon to defend democracy from the assaults of autocracy; and,

Whereas, The International Typographical Union has, since its foundation in the organization of societies of printers, more than one hundred years ago, ever been a patriotic, country-loving and loyal organization, aiding by voice and vote of its membership in the promotion and perpetuation of free institutions and the uplifting of the masses to a better standard of living and, therefore, a higher citizenship; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the executive council be and hereby is empowered and directed to take such measures as it may devise to raise a war emergency fund of at least $500,000, to be devoted to the comfort and welfare of our members who bear arms, both to those who are fortunate in escaping war's perils, and more especially in caring for those who may be wounded or suffer sickness or other misfortune, and in any other way that in the opinion of the council may be necessary, in promoting the triumph of the common cause now championed by the two great nations comprising the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union.

Committee reports favorably.

President Scott spoke on the question.

Delegate Trump (Boston) said several organizations had taken similar action and the committee thought the organization should do something along this line.

The report of the committee was non-concurred in.

The committee recommends that the executive council be instructed to pay to each of the members of the laws committee the sum of $125 for services rendered to this convention, $100 for the reading clerk, $100 to the assistant secretary, $50 to the sergeant-at-arms, and $35 to each of the messengers.

The committee feels that the conduct of the affairs of the office of secretary-treasurer is deserving of commendation by the convention, and it suggests that such commendation be extended to Secretary-Treasurer Hays.

Respectfully submitted,

W. C. Trump, Chairman;
Martin F. Cox, Secretary;
F. M. Baldauf,
F. A. McCallian,
John K. Steen,
Frank Woods,
Fred Watson,
Jerry R. Connolly,
N. C. Hufham.

Delegate Armstrong (Memphis) moved that the report be recommitted with instructions to incorporate therein an appropriation of not more than $75 for each member of the laws committee.

Delegates Campbell (Norfolk) and Trump (Boston) opposed the motion.

President Scott said:

I want to make one statement, and that is the insinuation that men were brought from a long distance to act as reading clerk and secretary of this convention is entirely untrue.

Neither the secretary nor myself had the faintest idea who these officers would be until the Sunday prior to the convening of this convention. They were selected from men who were here as visitors, and I will submit to the delegates themselves whether they are competent and whether they have faithfully performed their duty.

The previous question was ordered.

The motion was lost by a unanimous vote.

President Scott directed that the minutes be arranged to show that Delegate Armstrong did not vote in favor of his own motion.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ARBITRATION.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Your committee on arbitration respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Proposition No. 123—By Delegate Merritt (Houston):

That the executive council be directed to make diligent effort to procure acceptance by the special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association of the following changes in the arbitration agreement (and exhibits A and B) now existing between that organization and the International Typographical Union:

ARBITRATION AGREEMENT.

Amend section 1, changing first sentence thereof to read:

Section 1. On and after May 1, 1917, and until April 30, 1922, inclusive, all members of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association accepting this agreement shall conduct union departments under the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union and shall have the guarantees hereinafter set forth when the requirements of this arbitration agreement are observed.

Digitized by Google

Change last sentence, same section, to read:

This contract shall embrace all contracts of either form executed after April 30, 1917, and which shall have been approved by the president of the International Typographical Union.

Strike out section 3, renumbering sections 4 to 12, inclusive.

Amend paragraph a, section 3, as renumbered, to read:

(a) He shall be protected against walkouts, strikes, or boycotts by members of the unions under jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union and against any other form of concerted interference by them with the usual and regular operation of any of his departments of labor covered by this agreement.

Change reference to section 5 in old section 6 to section 4 as renumbered.

Amend section 6 as numbered to read:

Section 6. The question whether a department shall be union or non-union shall not be classed as a "difference" to be arbitrated. Union departments shall be understood to mean such as are made up of employes of classes over which the International Typographical Union has jurisdiction, including members of the typographical, mailers' and newswriters' branches, where such unions now exist or may be subsequently instituted.

Amend section 8 as renumbered to read:

Section 8. Local union laws and the laws of the International Typographical Union not directly affecting wages shall not be subject to the provisions of this arbitration agreement.

Strike out remainder of this section.

Strike out last sentence of section 11 as renumbered.

Insert new section 12, to read:

Section 12. Should a local union under jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union violate or fail to observe its contract with any publisher party to this agreement, to the injury of such publisher, the International Typographical Union shall take immediate action to correct and remove such injury; should an employer operating under this agreement violate its terms or default in its fulfilment, to the injury of a member or members of a local union under jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union, the American Newspaper Publishers' Association shall take immediate steps to correct such injury and protect such member or members from further loss or injury throughout the agreed life of the contract.

INDIVIDUAL ARBITRATION AGREEMENT.

Amend section 4, to read:

Section 4. The parties hereto specifically authorize the executive council of the International Typographical Union and the special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association to provide protection for either party injured through any failure to comply with this contract as provided in section 12 of the International arbitration agreement.

CODE OF PROCEDURE.

Amend section 1, to read:

Section 1. If a publisher desires to secure individual arbitration contracts, he shall notify the presidents of the local unions under jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union. If the issuance of such contracts is satisfactory to the said unions, the parties shall execute in quadruplicate individual arbitration contracts as set forth in Exhibit A. Publishers securing such contracts shall have continuous protection for the departments to which said individual arbitration contracts apply until and including April 30, 1922.

Strike out section 2 and renumber remaining sections in order.

Change reference to section 5, in section 3, as renumbered, to section 4.

After the final word "union," at the conclusion of the first sentence of section 5 as renumbered add the words "of the printing trades."

Amend section 7 as renumbered by adding after the final word "award" a new sentence, reading:

When notice of intention to dissent is given the award shall not be promulgated until forty-eight hours shall have elapsed from the time such notice is given.

Change reference to section 12 of the International arbitration agreement in section 13 as renumbered to section 11.

Change reference to section 5 of the International arbitration agreement in section 1 as renumbered to section 4.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Merritt (Houston) explained his proposition, and said the proposed amendments to the arbitration agreement were intended to improve the same.

Chairman Burns (Rochester) of the committee on arbitration said the committee asked all members interested in the proposed changes in the arbitration agreement to appear before it, but Mr. Merritt did not show up. He said the proposed amendments might have been in order at the 1916 convention, but they were one year late. The present agreement had been in effect only a short time.

Delegate Steffen (Cleveland) supported the report of the committee.

President Scott said:

The delegate from Houston was pleased to refer to his own material on the desk as "junk," therefore I assume I have a right to use the same word, and believe me, he selected the proper term for it, because it is junk, as I am going to prove by his statements.

First, he says the proposition which is here under consideration and was presented to this convention has resulted in an amendment to the International arbitration agreement. In the next breath he tells you that Mr. Palmer is a member of the special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. That statement is absolutely unqualified and deliberately untrue. The members of the standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association are H. N. Kellogg, Charles H. Taylor, jr., and W. S. Jones.

Now, here is quick action for you. The International arbitration agreement was considered at a meeting held in Indianapolis on June 16, 1916, and the author of this proposition told you this afternoon that this proposed change which has been made was discussed at that time. He says that Mr. Palmer told him so. It has been discussed a good many times, and as the result of these discussions the agreement has been amended, but it was not amended because of this proposition, you may be sure of that.

Here is the section which is perhaps the most stupid in the proposition, and that is section 8. It could be construed as giving to one party to a contract the right to change its laws at any time it saw fit, the other party to the contract to permit that to be done. If I am not mistaken the union which the delegate represents voted to accept the International arbitration agreement as it stands.

All this is an attempt on the part of a candidate for office to get in the spotlight, and to place the responsibility for the failure to incorporate these absurd propositions in a contract which has been signed in good faith by the executive council.

We entered into this contract in good faith by authority of the Baltimore convention. Some of the delegates at this convention were present there, and that convention told us to go ahead and sign the contract, and the delegate from Houston comes here and seeks to change that contract.

I disagree with the delegate from Houston, and I do not believe there is a delegate in this convention who is justified in asking the International Typographical Union officers to place themselves in such an absurd position.

The report of the committee was adopted, there being one negative vote.

Delegate Merritt (Houston) asked to be recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 124—

SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

The following letter from H. N. Kellogg, chairman of the International Board of Arbitration, indicates the adoption of the amendment to section 6 of the code as presented by the executive council to the board:

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 2, 1917.

MY DEAR MR. SCOTT—I am enclosing a memorandum of agreement covering amendment of section 6 of the code of procedure proposed by the executive council. If you approve of it, please have the members of the council sign it and send it to me for the signatures of our committee.

Mr. Taylor and I agree that it is wise to make the amendment and I have a letter from Mr. Jones signifying a similar view, but as his letter indicated he was not entirely clear as to operations under the code in its present form, I wrote him and requested a reply by wire. This will undoubtedly arrive tomorrow and I am certain that it will be favorable. Yours very truly,

H. N. KELLOGG.

The memorandum referred to in Mr. Kellogg's letter follows:

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 2, 1917.

In accordance with section 14 of the arbitration agreement between the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the International Typographical Union, the International arbitration board considered an amendment to section 6 of the code of procedure proposed by the executive council at the meeting of the board on Monday, July 23, as follows:

"The representatives of the International Union ask the board to give consideration to an amendment to section 6 of the code of procedure, by striking out the words "one such representative of each contending party to be free from personal connection with or direct interest in any newspaper or any labor union."

It is hereby agreed that section 6 of the code of procedure be amended as proposed so that it will hereafter read as follows:

"Section 6. After the questions to be arbitrated have been determined, a local board of arbitration must be formed, composed of residents of the locality in which the controversy arises, two members thereof to be named by each side. The board as thus constituted shall select a secretary from among its members. The four members of the board shall then choose an additional member, who shall be a disinterested party and shall act as chairman of the board. If the chairman of the local board shall not have been selected within thirty (30) days after the questions to be arbitrated have been determined, he shall be named by the chairman of the special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the president of the International Typographical Union, or their proxies, upon the request of either of the interested parties. The two officials named, or their proxies may for this purpose visit the locality if they deem it necessary. Any expense thus incurred shall be defrayed equally by the parties to the controversy. The chairman of the local board shall preside, put motions, etc., and shall be entitled to vote on all propositions which may properly come before the board in open session. He shall declare a motion to be carried only when at least three of the arbitrators shall have voted affirmatively thereon. At the conclusion of the hearing the chairman shall retire and the other members of the board shall go into executive session and immediately take up a consideration of the issues involved. If in executive session a tie vote occurs on any proposition, or if there are any differences, questions or propositions which do not receive the votes of three of the four original members of the board, the chairman shall be called in to cast the deciding votes on all unsettled questions or propositions.

CHARLES H. TAYLOR, JR.,
W. S. JONES,
Special Standing Committee, American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

M. G. SCOTT,
W. W. BARRETT,
HUGO MILLER,
CHARLES N. SMITH,
J. W. HAYS,
Executive Council, International Typographical Union.

Committee recommends approval of the action of the executive council as set forth above.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Your committee on arbitration congratulates the International Typographical Union, and its officers, on the arbitration agreements that have been negotiated and signed since our last convention.

The renewal of the International arbitration agreement, signed October 4, 1916, between the International Typographical Union and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, is an assurance of continued harmonious relations between subordinate unions and employers. Over two hundred arbitration contracts are now in force.

That the members of the International Typographical Union are in favor of a policy of conciliation and arbitration in the adjustment of disputes with employers and in the readjustment of wage scales was again evidenced by the referendum vote of May 23, 1917, when by a majority of 12,475 votes authority was given to enter into contractual relations with the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America.

Your committee calls attention to the following in the report of President Scott:

If our subordinate unions will now grasp the opportunity which is at hand, the members of the organization employed in the book and job branch of the industry can not fail to reap the tangible reward of a system which has brought industrial peace and increased wages to members employed in newspaper offices.

The number of unions securing scale increases shows conclusively that the arbitration agreement while a human document nevertheless has been of untold benefit in securing increased wages without the loss of time or money. It should be a source of gratification to the membership of the organization that the last annual financial report shows that less than $5,000 was expended for strike purposes. The International Typographical Union has answered the strike question by adopting a policy which insures substantial increases in the earnings of the membership along the lines of conciliation, mediation and arbitration.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON OFFICERS' REPORTS.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Your committee on officers' reports respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Your committee would congratulate the executive council on the excellent progress made by the International Typographical Union during the past year, and this being in the face of unusual conditions due to the war is most gratifying.

While in previous years the International Typographical Union has made great advancement, a comparison of the summary included in President Scott's report will show that during the past fiscal year greater results have been achieved than in any other like period in the history of our union, and we believe we can say without fear of contradiction that no other national or international trade union can claim the distinction of such a record.

In a report that is replete with interesting data covering the more important accomplishments of the year, President Scott shows that the earnings of the members were $66,652,431, an increase of $3,940,626 for the year, bringing the average earnings per member for the year to $1,086.43 as against $1,041.18 for the previous year. The average paying membership for the year was 61,350, an increase of 1,119 over the previous year.

Four hundred and sixty-four scales are reported as being increased, the increases varying from 50 cents to $7.50 per week.

Defensive expenses for the year were at a minimum, the total disbursements for strikes, lockouts and special assistance granted being but $12,281, which is a remarkable showing when consideration is given to the amount of earnings of the members and the number of wage scales increased.

In touching upon the arbitration agreement between the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the International Typographical Union, President Scott says:

Up to and including June 13 last, 172 International arbitration agreements for 1917-1922 have been issued, of which 140 cover composing rooms and 32 are for mailing departments. On the corresponding date in 1912, 132 agreements for 1912-1917 had been issued, of which 111 covered composing rooms and 21 were for mailing departments.

In the opinion of your committee these figures are evidence of the position of the local unions working under the agreement and their satisfaction in the results obtained, but if further argument were necessary to prove the value of this agreement it is only necessary to point to the amount of money expended during the year for defensive purposes and the number of wage scales increases. The answer is clearly set forth in those figures.

The president also touches upon the job arbitration agreement recently adopted by the referendum and which is to apply between the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ of America and the International Typographical Union. We concur in the suggestion of the president that subordinate unions co-operate fully with employers in the work of formation of local closed-shop divisions.

The president then sets forth in brief manner matters in connection with the training of apprentices, the old age pension fund, the mortuary fund, the work of our state and district organizations, and other matters of interest. As these various matters will come before the convention under reports of other committees, we have no recommendations to submit.

Under the caption of "Open-Shop Contracts and Special Dispensations," President Scott reproduces an open-shop contract entered into between an ex-president of Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 and the Church Publishing House of that city. This contract was made in violation of section 165 of the general laws which specifically provides that no local union shall sign a contract guaranteeing its members to work for any proprietor, firm or corporation, unless such contract is in accordance with International law and approved by the International president.

The document above referred to was signed March 9, 1916. On April 5, 1917, Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 submitted to the subordinate unions a proposition to prohibit the executive council and subordinate unions from inserting in any agreement any open-shop clause, but provided for the right of subordinate unions to do that very thing in connection with their efforts to unionize non-union offices.

As shown in the president's report on this matter a great number of subordinate unions have inserted in their agreements a provision specifying that in event of the union being unable to furnish mechanics upon demand the employer shall have the right to employ persons not members of the union until such time as the union can supply the demand. The insertion of such provisions in agreements can not be termed as making the agreement of open-shop character.

Subordinate unions certainly recognize that their first obligation to the employer is to furnish the required help, and realize that failing to be able to do so the employer has the right to employ other help until such time as the union can furnish it. Whether such a clause is specifically written into a contract or not, the obligation is there and must be recognized.

Had the provisions of the law as now constituted been fulfilled by the representative of No. 16 responsible for the open-shop contract mentioned, the said contract would never have been made effective, for it could not have been approved by the International president. The laws of the International Typographical Union apply alike to all subordinate unions, large and small, are made for their protection, and must be complied with.

We respectfully call attention to the letters of praise and appreciation received concerning our representatives, their contents showing some of the good work done in conjunction with the officers of locals.

Proposition No. 81—By the Baltimore convention:

[The following propositions, were presented to the Baltimore convention of 1916 and by that convention referred to the Colorado Springs convention of 1917 through the executive council]:

Proposition No. 133—By Delegate McCarthy (Boston):

Whereas, The use of mats by advertisers in the various newspapers throughout the country seems to be on the increase; and,

Whereas, Local unions have no way of determining whether such mats are the product of union labor or otherwise; and,

Whereas, The matter at the present time is handled, to a large extent, in an unsatisfactory manner from a union standpoint; be it

Resolved, That this convention place itself on record as favoring some plan looking toward a solution of the problem by instructing the executive council to thoroughly investigate the matter and report with recommendations to the 1917 convention.

[The executive council has had the matter referred to in the above proposition under consideration at various times during the past year, and while it has not been able to work out a plan that is entirely satisfactory it believes that it will be able to do so in the near future. The Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association has also given this matter considerable attention and has decided that it is not incumbent upon proprietors of printing offices to be able to show that cuts or mats brought to them for publication in advertising or commercial work of any character are made in union offices, but that the officers of the local unions should put forth every effort to see that both advertisers and printing office proprietors are made acquainted with the places in which union mats or cuts can be obtained. The executive council will continue to use its best endeavor to secure the exclusive use of union-made mats and cuts.]

The committee recommends that subordinate unions be asked to work in conjunction with the stereotypers and electrotypers in their jurisdictions in an endeavor to make all mat service union.

The recommendation of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Secretary-Treasurer Hays' report shows a healthy condition of the various funds and proves that he has been active in all the work of our organization and has performed his duties in an efficient and creditable manner.

The report of Vice-President Barrett is most gratifying, especially that part dealing with wage scales and organization to the membership at large.

The report of Second Vice-President Miller is covered in a concise manner, showing progress in new scales signed and an increased treasury. This in the face of the war conditions which has placed some of the German publications in jeopardy is most gratifying.

We note from the report of Third Vice-President Smith with pleasure the work accomplished by his organization during the year, many scales having been signed, conditions improved in spite of the high cost of white paper, which has proved a great handicap, and the committee at this time recommend that the membership do their utmost to defeat the proposed increase to be placed on second-class postage matter, as it will affect the mailers more than any other craft in the printing trades.

In referring to the Bulletin the president says:

From time to time members of subordinate unions ask to be placed on the Bulletin mailing list. There is no authority in law for such action, and if all these requests were granted, in a few years the cost of printing and mailing the Bulletin would be materially increased. It is therefore suggested that the convention fix a nominal yearly subscription price to those who desire to be placed on the Bulletin mailing list.

Your committee concurs in the suggestion that a nominal yearly subscription fee be made for members desiring to be placed on the Bulletin mailing list and recommends that the convention give power to the executive council to fix the price.

The recommendation of the committee was unanimously adopted.

In the report of the executive council is included decisions and interpretations of the old age pension and mortuary benefit laws; a statement of the investment of International Typographical Union funds, giving a list of the bonds with the rate of interest realized thereon; a copy of the job arbitration agreement negotiated with the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ of America; and the minutes and decisions of the International Board of Arbitration.

At the Baltimore convention, section 127 of the general laws was amended to provide that in cases where members enlist for active service in the regular army or navy in time of war, or members of the national guard who may be ordered to war, their situations might be filled by the foreman, provided that upon again reporting for duty the situations formerly held by these members should be restored to them.

Immediately following the declaration of war the executive council submitted this rule to the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the Closed Shop Division of the United Typothetæ of America, requesting that it be made a part of all their agreements. Both these organizations recommended to their members that it be made effective by the attachment of a memorandum to local contracts.

Subordinate unions should not overlook this important matter, but should see that such a memorandum is attached to their contracts, thereby protecting those of our members called to war on their return to the trade.

In the reports of the various scale committees it is readily seen that the plan of collective bargaining is the best protection to the worker and the proprietor. The men who constitute the scale committees of the various local unions have demonstrated the intelligence and integrity of the rank and file of our organization, and much of this is accomplished by the reports that are frequently sent from headquarters, and it is recommended that all local unions procure binders for these reports, as the contents are invaluable when wage scales are being discussed.

Delegate Mitchell (Chicago) called attention to that part of the report of the president regarding the Chicago situation and suggested that it be changed.

Delegate Marshall (Chicago) said the controversy in Chicago arose through a misunderstanding which had been cleared up.

Vice-President Barrett spoke on the subject.

President Scott said:

The president of this International Union has never permitted any political considerations of any sort to interfere with his giving assistance to any subordinate union on a scale matter.

The delegate says my duty was to set the union right. We spend considerable money in printing reports and sending them out to the subordinate unions and to delegates. This scale matter has been in the air in the city of Chicago for two years and seven months. If Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 had delegates in the Baltimore convention, presumably they read the reports of the officers and presumably—I do not know whether this is true or not—that the president of No. 16 read the communications which were sent to him from Indianapolis. If he did not, the president of this union performed his duty in this matter, because here in the proceedings of the Baltimore convention is a copy of a letter dated February 21, 1916, a year ago last February, addressed to the scale committee and signed by the president of the International Union and the chairman of the special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, telling them exactly the procedure they should follow to eliminate any objectionable sections submitted by the publishers of Chicago. I think some members of Chicago's local scale committee will agree with me when I say that they could have done two years ago what they did last month, and that I told them so. I went to Chicago once or twice on this matter. I did everything it was possible for a human being to do to show them the procedure they should follow, and they did not do it. They would not accept any suggestions from me or any one else.

Why was it necessary to send this proposition out to the membership, and why was it done? I believe it was done by some clumsy politician. We want to be helpful to our subordinates, and when it is a question of scale, I do not care whether the president of the union or the whole union is opposed to me politically. That cuts no figure at all. I do not take this, however, as seriously as some of you, perhaps because I have been a member so long and have been through so many political battles. I do not object to fair criticism, but I do not subscribe to the rule that "if thine enemy smite thee on the right cheek, turn the left." If my enemy smites me on the right cheek I will smite him back, and if it hurts he must remember that he provoked the blow.

Delegate Wilson (Leadville) said he thought the president's report on the Chicago situation was too strong.

President Scott said:

I had hoped it would not be necessary to go deeply into this question, but if you insist I am prepared to go as far as you desire.

I have been assailed in a scurrilous sheet published in Cincinnati which accepts the effusion of rats and ex-rats. This has been going on for several years. There are some delegates in this convention who perhaps are not familiar with the tactics of these politicians, who are not at all particular as to their weapons or to the records of the authors of the articles in which they assail the officers of the International Typographical Union. These men hold conferences in every convention. They held one in this city last Wednesday. Here is the call for it:

"NOTICE.

"COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 15, 1917.

"There will be an adjourned meeting from the Baltimore convention of all members of the International Typographical Union interested in the publication of the Typographical Review this Wednesday evening, August 15, 1917, at Robbins' hall, 30 South Tejon street.

"You are invited to be present and bring any other members of the International Typographical Union who may wish to come.

"CHARLES E. MAYERS,
"Secretary."

We have no objections to your holding meetings. Hold all the meetings you want to, but so long as I am president of the International Typographical Union, if there are any members of this union who assail me, or any members of any other union who assail me, they need not get the impression in their heads that I am going to remain silent, because I will be in at the finish.

I serve warning, that if there are any members of Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 who are responsible for the attack made on the executive council in that union, who expect me to withdraw any assertions I have made, they are very much mistaken. They will not be withdrawn.

Delegate Campbell (Norfolk) said the president of the International Typographical Union has been very lenient with the members who are constantly seeking to cast reflection upon him and his associates. He named one man who had attacked the president who had since ratted.

President Scott said:

If the president of the International Typographical Union had descended to the level of some of the members of Typographical Union No. 16 in what they have said about the executive council he might take under consideration the suggestion offered by the delegate from No. 16.

Delegate Anderson (Omaha) said he believed the president had performed a duty in giving them the information contained in his report.

President Scott said he would put the matter squarely before the convention, as follows:

Shall the president withdraw that part of his report relating to Chicago?

The convention decided that he should not, only one delegate, Ray Wilson (Leadville), voting in the affirmative.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN — Your committee on resolutions respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

Proposition No. 35—By Delegate Strange (Winnipeg):

Whereas, At the Cleveland convention a resolution was adopted calling upon the officers to have designed and to adopt a new International seal emblematic of international membership; and,

Whereas, This has been repeatedly brought to the attention of the international executive; and,

Whereas, Canadian unions were last year, prior to the Baltimore convention, definitely assured by the International officers that several designs would be submitted to the Baltimore convention; and,

Whereas, This was not done; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the International executive be hereby instructed by this convention to immediately carry out the instruction in this regard as set forth by the resolution adopted at the Cleveland convention.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was adopted.

Proposition No. 36—By Delegate Strange (Winnipeg):

Whereas, In the annual International convention call it is set forth by the International officers that "amendments to the laws must be presented by a duly accredited delegate or by a subordinate union;" and,

Whereas, The importance of the work undertaken by district organizations of the typographical union warrants the introduction of propositions by said organizations upon the floor of the International convention; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the committee on laws be hereby instructed to bring in a report embodying a recommendation that specific instructions be placed in the convention laws on this point, and that provision be made to grant district organizations the privilege of introducing propositions before the convention, said propositions to be over the signature of the president and secretary of said organizations, and setting forth that said propositions had been endorsed in convention of the organization or by referendum vote of local unions comprising said district body.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 37—By Delegate Strange (Winnipeg):

Resolved, That the committee on laws be instructed to bring in a report recommending an amendment to section 1, article i, constitution, setting forth specific regulations regarding the membership of non-printer proofreaders and setting forth the exact status of a non-printer proofreader cardholder and his sphere of activity in an office, in view of the fact that rulings of the International executive have been at variance with the law as set forth in the constitution.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 38—By Delegate Coyell (Buffalo):

Whereas, The demand of the printers for the shorter workday was unique in the history of industrial disputes in that it was the first strike in the printing trade that was universal in its nature, extending throughout the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union; in that it was undertaken after all efforts at arbitration had failed and after due notice of the intention of both parties had been given—by the one side that the shorter workday would be insisted on at a certain date, by the other that the demand would be resisted to the fullest extent; in the successful conduct of the strike from the executive and financial points of view; in the far-reaching effects of its successful outcome; in the fact that it has proved the rational workday to be beneficial to the employe and profitable to the employer; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the delegates of Typographical Union No. 9 to the sixty-third session of the International Typographical Union be instructed to urge the publication of an authoritative history of the eight-hour strike by the International Typographical Union.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Beilman (Buffalo) said his union thought such a history would be very valuable.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Delegates Coyell and Bielman (Buffalo) asked to be recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 39—By Delegate Trump (Boston):

Whereas, The cost of newspaper stock is excessive, and the business outlook anything but good, the two combined being a serious menace to our craft, tending toward unemployment; and,

Whereas, But two courses seem open to newspaper publishers, the decrease in number of pages published, or increase in selling price of the paper; the first a serious menace, the alternate our only hope; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the International Typographical Union, in its annual session assembled, respectfully suggests to the American Newspaper Publishers' Association that in these times of ever-increasing prices, the present moment would seem an auspicious one for the general introduction of the 5-cent newspaper (daily), or at least the abolition of the 1-cent daily paper.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and also spread upon the minutes of this convention.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegate Trump (Boston) said he introduced the resolution by request.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 40—By Delegate Coplan (Toledo):

In accordance with the action of Toledo Typographical Union No. 63, at its regular meeting, July 8, the following resolution is presented:

Whereas, The United States of America is the only great nation in the world (excepting Russia), that does not provide old age pensions for its worn-out and worthy workers; and,

Whereas, The consequent necessity of American workers to provide their own benefits is a gross injustice, and frequently ends in failure through no fault of the workers; and,

Whereas, The government of the United States of America has demanded that its citizens protect the honor of the nation with their lives in a great war, while this government has not in the past been responsive to the demands of its workers to protect their honor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the International Typographical Union, in convention assembled, endorse and urge the passage of the old age pension bill introduced in congress by Gen. I. R. Sherwood, for the benefit of all American workers; and, be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to General Sherwood and to the editor of THE TYPOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL for publication.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 43—By Delegate Strange (Winnipeg):

Whereas, The Western Canada Conference of Typographical Unions, in annual convention assembled, realizing the great possibilities of assistance to be derived through the formation of woman's auxiliaries, in the social, economic and political field, with much enthusiasm and with unanimity endorsed the woman's auxiliary movement; and,

Whereas, The Woman's International Auxiliary to the International Typographical Union, organized in August, 1902, of which Mrs. C. E. McKee has been president and Mrs. R. J. Lowther, secretary, for the past few years, is the original and therefore generally recognized as official organization; and,

Whereas, Said International auxiliary has, despite the defection in its ranks at the Cleveland convention, rapidly developed in membership and strength, several new locals having been organized during the past year, despite the discouraging action taken by last year's convention of the International Typographical Union; and,

Whereas, The International auxiliary formed by the seceding delegates to the Cleveland convention, receives no general recognition, and has practically ceased to exist; and,

Whereas, The prior right of the McKee organization to recognition has been firmly established through the courts of law, and through which decision the seceding element were ordered to turn over to the McKee organization all books, papers and documents, etc., the property of said McKee organization at the time of the Cleveland convention; and,

Whereas, At last year's International convention of the typographical union, two propositions (175 and 176) dealing with the subject, and presenting directly opposite views, were both reported on unfavorably; and,

Whereas, Said action in practically refusing to treat with the women-folk in their extended assistance was not in the best interests of our organization and principles; and,

Whereas, The international labor movement realizes the importance of the assistance proffered through the work of the auxiliaries; be it

Resolved, That the committee on subordinate unions be hereby instructed to arrange to meet a committee from the woman's auxiliary in convention at this time in the city of Colorado Springs, to the end that an amicable settlement may be made of the controversy; and, be it further

Resolved, That said auxiliary representatives be given the privilege of appearing on the floor of the convention of the International Typographical Union, if they so desire, in order to clearly place before the membership of the typographical union the entire situation; and, be it further

Resolved, That said committee on subordinate unions present to the convention a full report of their findings, together with any essential recommendations.

The author of this proposition requests permission to withdraw same, and the committee recommends that the request be complied with.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 50—By the New York delegation:

Whereas, Local Union No. 6, at a referendum election held on July 11, 1917, passed the following resolution by a vote of 3,996 to 251:

Resolved, That Typographical Union No. 6 goes on record as endorsing the forty-four-hour week, and hereby instructs its delegates to the International Typographical Union convention at Colorado Springs, August 13, 1917, to introduce and support the necessary legislation for the enactment of same not later than January 1, 1920; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the officers of the International Typographical Union are hereby instructed to negotiate for the establishment of the forty-four-hour week, the same to take effect not later than January 1, 1920; and, it is further

Resolved, That subordinate unions having agreements beyond January 1, 1920, shall continue their contracts until the expiration of same, after which time the forty-four-hour clause shall be inserted.

Committee reports unfavorably.

Delegates Cavanagh (New York) and Keller (New York) favored the proposition and gave the reasons of the union for offering the resolution.

Chairman Campbell (Norfolk) of the committee on resolutions said the committee believed the forty-four-hour week could be eventually brought about by local unions and that the time was not opportune for such an advanced step by the International Typographical Union.

The report of the committee was adopted.

The New York delegation asked to be recorded as voting in the negative.

Proposition No. 51—By Delegate Trump (Boston):

Whereas, It is generally conceded that the "Official Convention Souvenir," so-called, is not a legitimate advertising proposition, and the revenue derived therefrom is a small part, comparatively speaking, of the financing by entertaining cities of International Typographical Union conventions; and,

Whereas, The interests of the International Typographical Union and subordinate locals would be best conserved by its abolition; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this sixty-third annual session of the International Typographical Union go on record as favoring the discontinuance of the official souvenir as an advertising proposition; and, be it further

Resolved, That on and after January 1, 1919, no advertising souvenir be issued by any local union entertaining a session of the International Typographical Union.

Committee reports unfavorably as the matter is covered by a previous action of the convention.

Delegate Trump (Boston) contended the law adopted does not cover the point raised in his proposition. He urged the adoption of the resolution.

Delegate Murphy (Providence) maintained the law enacted by the convention fully covered the subject.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 52—By the Louisville delegation:

Whereas, The delegates from Louisville Typographical Union No. 10 to the sixty-third session of the International Typographical Union and to the silver jubilee of the Union Printers Home at Colorado Springs spent one day as the guests of the delegates of St. Louis Union No. 8; and,

Whereas, In appreciation of the excellent entertainment furnished, and for the untiring efforts in entertaining those delegates, ex-delegates and visitors, who had the good fortune to include St. Louis in their itinerary; be it

Resolved, That the thanks of the delegates of Louisville Typographical Union No. 10 be extended to St. Louis Typographical Union No. 8 for the prolific manner of their entertainment; and, be it further

Resolved, That these resolutions be made a part of the proceedings of the sixty-third session of the International Typographical Union and celebration of the silver anniversary of the Union Printers Home.

Committee offers the following substitute in lieu of this proposition:

Whereas, Various local unions throughout the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union provided entertainment for the delegates and visitors en route to the sixty-third annual convention of the International Typographical Union and silver jubilee of the Union Printers Home in a manner befitting the dignity of the organization; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the delegates to the convention do hereby extend our appreciation and thanks to the various locals providing these entertainments.

The substitute of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 65—By Delegate Spatny (Chicago Bohemian):

Whereas, This great republic is founded upon the principle that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed; and,

Whereas, We have entered into the world war not for our own aggrandizement or for any material benefit, but in order to secure a just and lasting peace by establishing throughout the world the rule of democracy and by safeguarding the rights of all nations, great and small; and,

Whereas, President Wilson announced as the fundamental principle upon which this country will insist in the coming reconstruction of Europe that no nation shall be forced to live under that sovereignty which it does not like; and,

Whereas, The Bohemians, together with their nearest kindred, the Slovaks, have ever since the beginning of the war manifested their aversion to Austria and their deep detestation of the Hapsburg rule, and recently through their representatives in the Vienna parliament demanded the establishment of a free and democratic Bohemia; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the International Typographical Union, in convention assembled, That Bohemia ought to be outright free and independent; and, be it further

Resolved, That we appeal to the president of the United States and to our representatives in congress that the entire weight of the United States in the future peace congress shall be exerted in favor of Bohemian independence; and, be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the president of the United States, to the vice-president as presiding officer of the senate, to the speaker of the house of representatives, and to the chairmen of the committees on foreign affairs of the two houses of congress.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 80—By Delegates McArdle and Fullam (New York Mailers):

Whereas, There is now before the United States senate the war revenue bill which proposes to levy a discriminatory tax upon the printing industry by raising the rates on second-class postage twenty-five (25) per cent, which tax, if adopted, will curtail to a serious extent the public press and especially the labor press; and,

Whereas, The newspaper industry is one that does not profit by war conditions, but, on the contrary, is subjected to an enormously additional financial expenditure in order to continue in business, which if interfered with by the adoption of the proposed tax of 25 per cent will ultimately deprive a large percentage of our membership of employment; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this convention of the International Typographical Union go on record as being opposed to the proposed second-class postage increase and war revenue bill; and that the secretary telegraph to every United States senator and write to every congressman our opposition to this unfair tax upon our industry.

The committee reports favorably, with exception of the third paragraph, and offers the following as a substitute for said paragraph:

Resolved, That this convention of the International Typographical Union go on record as being opposed to the proposed second-class postage increase as contained in the war revenue bill; and that the secretary-treasurer notify each United States senator and congressman of our opposition to this unfair tax upon our industry.

The amendment offered by the committee was adopted.

The amended proposition was adopted.

Proposition No. 89—By Delegates McArdle and Fullam (New York Mailers):

Whereas, The congress of the United States, in considering war taxes, has had several proposals before it relating to the taxing of newspapers, both on the volume of advertising and profits, and by means of increased postage rates; and,

Whereas, The public press, and more especially the labor press, is the bulwark of our liberty and our freedom and a great educational factor, and should be free and untrammeled in its right to express opinions and its opportunity to circulate among the people; and,

Whereas, The newspaper industry is one that does not profit because of war conditions, but, on the contrary, is burdened with unusual financial obligations to the end that it may function at the maximum of efficiency; therefore, be it

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this convention, the congress should not, without thorough investigation and the fullest knowledge of all of the facts, levy taxes so burdensome to the press as to result in decreased publicity, nor to impose a tax that will materially and unwisely curtail newspaper circulation; and, be it further

Resolved, That we tender our aid and assistance to the press of the United States in any way that may be effective in securing for it justice and fair dealing as to direct taxation and indirect taxation.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 95—By Delegate Keller (New York):

Whereas, The enormous and unreasonable advance in the selling price of paper supplies of all sorts remains an unabated and serious menace to the general printing industry; and,

Whereas, Investigation by the federal trade commission in the United States and the parliamentary commission in Canada has established that the exorbitant prices fixed by the paper makers on their wares are unsupported by the factors that enter into the cost of production and distribution, but are arbitrary and unfair and entirely without warrant, and an unjustifiable burden on the printing industry, and an indefensible curb on the business of printing and publishing in all its branches; and,

Whereas, Efforts by the federal trade commission to secure such readjustment of prices as might bring about more favorable conditions have been without avail, and even the indictment of certain paper manufacturers on a charge of conspiracy in restraint of trade has so far had no effect in the way of altering the onerous conditions or relieving the printing industry from the burden placed upon it by reason of the actions of the paper makers; and,

Whereas, The publishers of the country are threatened with additional burdens through the proposed increase in postage rates on newspapers, magazines, catalogues and books, which increased rates of postage would not produce any appreciable addition to the revenues of the United States, but would have the effect of further curtailing the means of disseminating knowledge and information among the citizens of the country, cutting them off from information they are entitled to receive, and restricting the full and free consideration of all public issues and limiting means and methods of education; and,

Whereas, The purpose of the postoffice is not to produce a profit on its operation, but to give efficient service to the people at all times; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we demand of the department of justice of the United States that it proceed expeditiously with the prosecution of the paper makers who have been indicted because of their conspiracy to limit trade and to extort unreasonable profits from the purchasers of their wares; and that we call upon the president of the United States to take cognizance of this situation and to exercise his great power under the food and trade control laws to fix reasonable selling prices on all forms of paper supplies; and, be it further

Resolved, That we respectfully urge upon the congress of the United States that it do not impose any additional burden upon the printing industry of the United States or the general public through the increase of postage on publications of any kind.

The committee recommends that the beginning of the sixth paragraph be changed to read as follows: "Resolved, That we urge upon the department of justice." etc., and that the resolution be concurred in.

The recommendation of the committee was unanimously adopted.

The amended proposition was adopted.

Proposition No. 92—By Delegate Merritt (Houston):

Resolved, That the executive council be authorized to fix a subscription price for the Monthly Bulletin to members who desire to obtain it personally.

Committee reports unfavorably as the matter is covered by a previous action of the convention.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 111—

Delegate Mitchell (Chicago) moved that proposition No. 111 be stricken from the minutes and that only the number be published.

The motion was adopted.

Proposition No. 112—By Delegates Cox and Rifenberick (Albany):

Resolved, That the committee on resolutions be directed to draft a letter expressing the loyalty of the International Typographical Union to the government of the United States of America; and its approval of the course of the president thus far in the world war. Said letter to be forwarded to President Wilson by telegraph.

Committee reports unfavorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 113—By Delegate Fullam (New York Mailers):

Whereas, The mailing trade is undergoing a change that, while at present gradual, will undoubtedly mean the revolutionizing of that branch of the printing industry through the introduction of machinery to perform the work now done by human labor; and,

Whereas, The members of the Mailers' Trade District Union have for years been recognized by the International Typographical Union as having sole jurisdiction over mailing; and,

Whereas, Decided opposition is being encountered by us in our effort to assume jurisdiction over mailing machines, particularly stencil and plate making machines and like attendant devices; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the International Typographical Union, in convention assembled at Colorado Springs, August, 1917, records itself as recognizing the jurisdiction of its mailer members over mailing machines now in use or that may be hereafter introduced, including plate and stencil making machines and like devices.

Committee reports favorably.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 114—By Delegate Naden (Chicago Mailers):

Whereas, The mailers' union in the city of Chicago has been organized since July, 1897; and,

Whereas, Said Chicago Mailers' Union No. 2 has repeatedly attempted to secure recognition for their union in that city without effect; and,

Whereas, We are of the belief that the executive council of the International Typographical Union can greatly assist in bringing about recognition of our union in that city by a visit of that committee; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the executive council of the International Typographical Union be instructed by the convention to proceed to Chicago to bring about the desired recognition of Chicago Mailers' Union No. 2 in that city.

Committee recommends that this matter be referred to the executive council.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 136—By Delegate Keller (New York):

Resolved, That the executive council of the International Typographical Union take such steps as may be deemed advisable to secure an increase in the salaries of printers engaged in the government service in postoffice printing departments.

Committee reports favorably.

Delegate Keller (New York) explained the object of the proposition.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted.

Proposition No. 138—By the committee on resolutions:

Whereas, Delegate P. R. Pampusch, of Minneapolis Union No. 42, was suddenly called to his last reward while in attendance at the sessions of this, the sixty-third annual convention of the International Typographical Union; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the delegates in attendance at this convention express their deep regret at his untimely death, and extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy; and, be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the family of the deceased delegate.

Respectfully submitted,

D. I. Campbell, Chairman;
William H. White, Secretary;
William S. Black,
Carl B. Hesford,

The proposition offered by the committee was unanimously adopted.

The report of the committee as a whole was unanimously adopted.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FEDERATION OF LABOR DELEGATES.

Colorado Springs, Colo., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

Ladies and Gentlemen—Your committee on federation of labor delegates respectfully presents the following for your consideration:

In reviewing the reports of the delegates to the American Federation of Labor and the relations between the International Typographical Union and the American Federation of Labor, we find two matters of paramount importance. We desire to call attention to that part of the report of the president of the International Typographical Union bearing on our contractual relations with the employing printers of the country, and the efforts that have been made in some sections of the country by organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to induce and in some instances to coerce our members into violation of existing contracts and wage scales because of difficulties or controversies in which the offending organizations found themselves involved. The most notable case of this kind was the so-called New York case. The prompt and effective manner in which President Scott exposed and defeated the brazen attempt of Organizer Hugh Frayne, of the American Federation of Labor, to involve the members of New York Typographical Union No. 6 in a sympathetic strike at the cost of violating existing contracts, brought the matter fairly into issue, and the action of your executive in maintaining the integrity of the International Typographical Union in this event has the approval of your committee and is commended to the convention for its endorsement. The steady progress, slow, perhaps, at times, but nevertheless sure, made by the members of our craft through the International Typographical Union policy of conciliation and arbitration should be a source of gratification to our members.

Digitized by Google

One question of importance that was before the last American Federation of Labor convention, of direct interest to our members, was the proposition, which, however, was defeated, for the creation of a legal department and an increase in the per capita tax for the purpose of defraying the expenses of maintaining the same. Your committee can see no reason for adding further to the financial burdens already borne by the members of our organization in order to pay a fancy salary to legal talent whose services we will not require, as the legal affairs of the International Typographical Union as at present conducted are an insignificant expense. Experience has taught some of our subordinate unions that the farther away they stay from courts and lawyers in the conduct of their affairs, the better off they are. Therefore your committee presents the following resolution, with the recommendation that it be adopted:

Whereas, Efforts have been made by representatives of the American Federation of Labor and of international trades unions affiliated therewith to persuade members of the International Typographical Union to disregard their contractual obligations and to enter upon sympathetic strikes or similar demonstrations, and this without properly presenting the matter at issue to the consideration of the subordinate unions involved or to the International Typographical Union or its executive council; and,

Whereas, In pursuance of such designs statements have been made and given wide public circulation which if left unchallenged would seriously reflect on the integrity of the International Typographical Union and its fidelity to its contracts and agreements, written or verbal; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the sixty-third annual convention of the International Typographical Union renews its pledge faithfully to perform in letter and spirit all the terms and conditions of each and every contract it has entered into on behalf of and governing the employment of its members wherever they may be; thus maintaining its unsullied record of absolute responsibility and regard for its pledged word, realizing that only through the honorable discharge of all its undertakings can it hope or expect to command and receive the respect and confidence so absolutely essential to the accomplishment of the best results aimed at by its membership; and, be it further

Resolved, That while we heartily enter into the spirit of true co-operation between the several national and international trades unions and other representative bodies of organized labor, as exemplified in the proper aspect of the American Federation of Labor, we resent any interference or attempt to interfere on the part of any outsider with the internal affairs of the International Typographical Union or any of its subordinate unions, feeling that such attempts are an unwarranted intrusion on the private rights of our members, who have shown by their splendid record of past growth and achievement full competence and ability to successfully manage their own affairs; and, be it further

Resolved, That we commend the action of our delegates to the American Federation of Labor in their stand and vote in opposition to increase the per capita tax for the purpose of defraying the cost of establishing a legal department and the employment on salary of a general attorney for the American Federation of Labor. We feel that the tax already is high enough and that the revenue is sufficient amply to cover all the legitimate expenses of the federation, and that its operations should not be so extended as to make its maintenance unduly burdensome on the members of organized labor throughout America.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Ever watchful of the interests and welfare of our members, your delegates to the American Federation of Labor, together with the delegates of affiliated unions in the printing trade, introduced a resolution which was adopted by the convention, protesting against the exorbitant increase in the price of print paper, which increase was having the effect of curtailment of production among the employers in the printing trade, thereby depriving members of these affiliated organizations of employment. This resolution also requested an investigation by the department of justice to determine the influences which have controlled the price of print paper.

We congratulate our delegates to the American Federation of Labor on the fidelity with which they represented this organization and its interests at the Baltimore convention.

Delegate Hadden presents a comprehensive report of the proceedings of the sessions of the Trades and Labor Congress of the Dominion of Canada, to which we direct the earnest consideration of the delegates to this convention. Your committee desires to congratulate the organized labor movement of Canada on the vigilance with which its representatives are watching the interests of the toilers through these troublous times, and the zealous efforts made at all times through proper channels to safeguard the welfare and secure the progress of the working classes of Canada.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON THANKS.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO., August 17, 1917.

To the Officers and Members of the International Typographical Union:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—Your committee on thanks respectfully submits the following for your consideration:

Delegates, ex-delegates and visitors to the sixty-third convention of the International Typographical Union, held in Colorado Springs, Colo., August 13-17, 1917, express their sincerest thanks and appreciation to the gentlemen comprising the various committees and members of Colorado Springs Typographical Union No. 82 for the grand and royal hospitality and entertainment accorded to all of those in attendance at this convention.

The convention committee and others whose labors and efforts are responsible for the working out successfully of the many details necessary for such an undertaking were:

Arrangements Committee—W. I. Reilly, chairman; E. D. Woodworth, secretary; Stephen O'Donnell, treasurer; W. J. Snider, souvenir manager; J. E. Cheely, president of Colorado Springs Typographical Union No. 82; John C. Daley, vice-chairman; Thomas McCaffery, C. J. Hinkley, J. J. McCarty, Louis W. Albrecht, R. H. Suttle, H. A. Scholton, E. W. Stewart and P. S. Soneson.

The special thanks of the delegates and visitors are due Mrs. L. M. Davis, member of Colorado Springs Typographical Union No. 82; Mrs. John C. Daley, matron of the Union Printers Home, and the ladies' committee for their successful efforts to entertain the visiting ladies.

We desire to thank the following gentlemen for their masterful addresses and good wishes:

Mayor C. E. Thomas, Colorado Springs, Colo.; Judge Samuel Kinsley, George Hemus, of Colorado Springs Union; President Cheely, of Colorado Springs Union; D. S. Gilmore, of Colorado Springs Union; Charles A. Sumner, secretary-treasurer of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union; Doctor Rutledge, of the Woodmen's Home; B. F. Scribner, of the United Typothetæ and Franklin Clubs of America; H. N. Kellogg, chairman special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association; John M. Brophy, vice-president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, and others.

We also desire especially to thank the Rev. Frank Staff for his fervent invocation at the opening session of the convention.

We also desire to thank the press of the city of Colorado Springs for the manner in which the proceedings were given to the public.

We desire to thank Delegate Hunt, of Fresno, Cal., for his bountiful supply of raisins.

We also wish to thank the Most Noble Order of Turkeys for their contribution of $50 to the thanks committee.

We also wish to express our thanks to the Chamber of Commerce of Colorado Springs for the manner in which its members assisted the local committee in the entertainment of the delegates and visitors.

We also wish to thank his excellency, Julius C. Gunter, governor of the state of Colorado; Hon. Mayor Charles E. Thomas, Lamb's quartet, Hon. Horace G. Lunt and Theodore McCullough for their able assistance and masterful addresses at the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Union Printers Home.

Other members of Colorado Springs Union No. 82 whom we wish to thank for their able assistance in entertainment are: T. P. Maitland, Frank Foster, D. S. Gilmore, C. E. (Dummy) Smith, John M. James, J. Harry Ingledue, Frank Ross, Samuel Hoon, Leslie Boynton and James Patton. And to all others who in any way contributed to the success of the convention we extend our hearty and sincere thanks. Respectfully submitted,

CHARLES B. WADDELL, Chairman;
E. D. UZZELL, Secretary;
CLARENCE M. DUNKLE,
DORA E. RUNSHE,
HELEN DEIMEL ROGLITZ,
THOMAS O'SHAUGHNESSY,
E. G. KOERPS,
W. H. WINN,
JOHN MCARDLE.

The report of the committee as a whole was unanimously adopted.

Delegate Waddell (Grand Rapids) stated ex-Delegate Robert E. Darnaby, of Indianapolis Typographical Union No. 1, would conclude the work of the committee on thanks.

Mr. Darnaby spoke as follows:

Since being called on to do honor to those to whom honors are due, in my feeble way I will perform that duty, even though you may wonder why the committee didn't select some one who could do justice to the occasion. I have had the pleasure of sojourning in your most beautiful city for the last two weeks and I must confess that as far as boosting is concerned you have the best lot of boosters that it has been my pleasure to come in contact. You have told us that you had the finest people on earth, the only Home built for union printers in the world (this we knew), the largest mountains ever grown, the finest air ever breathed, that your city is so high above the sea level that while lying in bed in your town your feet are higher than the courthouse tower in Grand Rapids, that you have the only Garden of the Gods, that you have the City of Sunshine (sometimes), your mayor claims that your city has jurisdiction over the state, and in fact if your governor had kept still long enough he would have agreed with him.

You have lauded almost everything. There are only two things left me to praise, and that is the good work of your committee, and that which is the best thing the Almighty ever made, and that is water. I have seen it glisten in a tiny teardrop on the sleeping lid of infancy; I have seen it trickle down the blushing cheek of youth, and I have seen it gush in torrents down the wrinkled cheek of age. I have seen it glisten in the dewdrops on the myriad blades of grass and leaves of trees, flashing like diamonds in the effulgent rays of the sunrise, bursting in glorious splendor over the eastern hilltops. I have seen it trickle down the mountain side, falling with music of molten silver, splashing on beds of polished diamonds; I have seen it in the rushing rivers, rippling over pebbly bottoms, purling round jutting rocks, roaring over mighty cataracts in their mad rush to join the mighty Father of Waters, sweeping in majesty to the sea. And I have seen it in the mighty ocean, on whose bosom floats the navies of the nations and the commerce of the world. I have seen it belching forth from your most magnificent Manitou, one of nature's greatest creations, but I want to say to you in all sincerity, ladies and gentlemen, that as a beverage it's a darn poor substitute.

We want to inform the committee that while your duties have been arduous, we have enjoyed your efforts to the fullest extent, and when we

JOHN McVICAR

John McVicar, a former president of the International Typographical Union, died on December 11, 1916, at his home in Detroit. He was 72 years of age. The highest honor of the International Typographical Union, that of being called upon to act as its president, came to Mr. McVicar in 1876, during a time when the International Typographical Union was undergoing its severest trial. Mr. McVicar brought to the office ripe judgment as well as ardent devotion, and his term of office was marked by such wisdom as to maintain the organization against the great opposition of circumstances and conditions that threatened the destruction of the union, and by his efforts and example contributed to the subsequent growth and solidity that has since brought the International Typographical Union to its great success. Mr. McVicar was active in the affairs of the organization for many years, and his counsel was of great assistance to the members fortunate enough to have his advice. That his interest did not flag is shown by his presence at recent conventions of the International Typographical Union, where he was an interested spectator. Mr. McVicar's fidelity to the union, his devotion to its principles, and his activity in promoting its welfare have been acknowledged by those who knew him best, and are commended as an inspiring example to all.

leave you, and each of us returns to his respective home, we will always have a warm spot in our hearts for Colorado Springs and your people. In short, your efforts have been so successful and our enjoyments have been so great that we must acknowledge that we have had ample sufficiency.

Mr. Darnaby, calling the various committeemen and others to the front, continued as follows:

"Bill" Reilly, Chairman of Committee—

Two of the greatest points of interest in Colorado Springs are the Union Printers Home and Pikes Peak. One of the most famous and hardest workers in Colorado Springs is "Big Bill" Reilly, chairman of the entertainment committee. Through Bill's efforts, assisted by the balance of the committee, those of us present have been kept busy enjoying ourselves since our arrival. Bill is a regular convention fiend, having traveled to conventions from coast to coast, and I must compliment him by saying that under the watchful eye of his home folks his behavior here has been quite an improvement over that of other conventions; in fact, a regular convention attendant would hardly know that it was the same old "Bill." The high altitude seems to have an entirely different effect on Big Bill than does the high-ball. I present you with this sparkling diamond scarf pin.

Should it have been left to me, "Bill," to select a present for you, I would have selected a rain coat and umbrella, as you insist on living in the City of Sunshine.

John C. Daley, Assistant Chairman—

Say, John, old boy, I presume that you are now standing in the position in which you have placed many of the boys at the Home when you called them on the green carpet—head drooping, nerves racked, wondering what is coming next. But my language to you, John, will be void of those "kind words" so often used by you to them behind closed doors. I don't want to be a kicker, but I would like to know why you can't raise five crops of alfalfa on one field instead of only three crops. This beautiful watch will enable you to get in on time at night.

Steve O'Donnell, Treasurer of the Committee—

This gentleman has the honor of being treasurer of the committee. Webster, in defining the word "treasurer" says that a treasurer is one who keeps all of the funds—did I say all—well, all but "some." While this scout is small of stature, he has a heart as big as that of a giant. Please accept these gold coins as a token of our appreciation of your work.

E. D. Woodworth, Secretary of the Committee—

For you, Mr. Woodworth, I must say that to record the doings of the many members of this hustling committee, your duties must have not only kept you at work day and night, but caused you many trips through parks, streets and alleys—mostly alleys. With that long, graceful stride of yours, one would think that you were always close to the leader. For you we have this beautiful silver tea set.

J. Eugene Cheeley, President of No. 82—

An expert on rapping to order and ditto for adjourning. A faithful servant whose work is never done—one whose shoulders are broad; at all times ready to either carry the burdens of others or be condemned himself. This, you know, Gene, is expected of presidents. I take pleasure in presenting you with this beautiful watch.

Harry Scholton—

Vice-president of No. 82, member arrangements committee, chairman of the board of county commissioners (by virtue of No. 82) and anything else you want to call him; as good a politician as a printer, but a hard worker on the committee. If my memory serves me right, Harry, and I think she do, I have seen you in action at other conventions. May this diamond stickpin remind you of this occasion.

"Old Town Bill" Snider—

Manager of the Souvenir, a book which is a credit to any one. I must refrain from telling you what I know about this fellow, for I have not got my trusty six and am a poor shot besides. Bill, you don't look natural without your buckskin suit. Still you are the same old Bill. This silver coffee set shows how much we think of you.

Thomas McCaffery—

Why should I say anything about dear old father Tom. He was a trustee of this Home when I was a boy, works single and double on all committees and does his work probably a little better than it could be done by others. Please accept this Knights of Columbus ring with our best wishes.

E. W. Stewart—

Your duties as chairman of the committee on hotels in finding places for those to sleep, who happened to want to sleep, have been well performed. Your work as messenger, when awake, has been entirely satisfactory to those whom you have so faithfully served during this convention. For you we have a stickpin.

Louis W. Albrecht—

To this gentleman credit is due for the artistic style in which the souvenir is gotten up. Mr. Albrecht is a delegate and his good work speaks for itself. I take pleasure in presenting you with this stickpin.

Cleveland Hinkley—

You, like the balance of the committee, have performed your work well. The "get-together" meet was a success, and your efforts are appreciated by all of us. May this stickpin remind you of this day.

R. H. Suttle—

This gentleman was originally from Missouri, but instead of having to be shown, he is one of those good fellows who has assisted in showing. I, myself, spent a week in Missouri one day and I did not own a beautiful set of cuff buttons like those I now present you.

P. S. Soneson—

Another hard worker on the committee. This gentleman is one of the graduates of the Home, and thank God that his life has been spared to again take up the reins after they had been relinquished for a time.

While you were able, no doubt, to dodge the superintendent by leaving the Home after hours, you have not dodged your work on this committee. These useful cuff buttons are for you.

J. J. McCarty, Sergeant-at-Arms—

I want to extend to you the many thanks of those present for the way in which you have conducted your office. We trust that even though you are the only living charter member of No. 82, and that you have been foreman of the Gazette for sixty years, while that paper is only forty-four years old, you may live long enough to serve in this same capacity when we meet here again. I want also to thank you personally for not even looking my way this morning when President Scott ordered me to take my seat. He could, at least, on account of my gray hairs, said "Please take your seat." I know that you will agree with me that the using of the word "please" would have been more appropriate on his part. For your kindness to us we present this stickpin.

M. R. H. WITTER

God's finger touched him; he sleeps the sleep from which there is no earthly awakening.

Martin R. H. Witter, ex-president and for fifty years continuous active member of the International Typographical Union, on August 2, 1917, responded to the summons of his Maker after a short illness, at the age of 71 years. There is no language that expresses what is deepest in our hearts. What tribute can we then pay to him? What need we say of one whose life speaks for itself, whose career is eloquent, who has written his own eulogy deep in the hearts of his fellow men? A soldier in the cause of his country for the preservation of the union, a tireless toiler for half a century in the great battle for human rights so that those who toil might receive a just return for the fruits of their labor, our departed brother has erected his own monument that will endure for all time. So that our appreciation of his splendid character may be recorded by this convention; be it

Resolved, That the proceedings of the convention be suspended for a period of one minute, during which time the delegates stand in silence; and, be it further

Resolved, That a page of the minutes be set aside in memory of our departed brother, and an engrossed copy of these resolutions be forwarded to his widow.

Mrs. John C. Daley—

And last, but not least, is this princess of entertainers, Mrs. Daley. To you, Mrs. Daley, each of us are thankful for the way in which you have performed your duties as matron of our Home. We are particularly pleased with your cooking. The perfect and satisfactory conditions existing at the Home, which are evident to all who have inspected it, and the many words of commendation and appreciation which we have heard expressed by the residents for the good work and kind disposition of the matron fully convince me that I am unable to add anything thereto. May you always have money enough to fill this beautiful handbag.

The recipients of the gifts in turn made appropriate remarks of appreciation.

Secretary Hays was authorized to make the necessary corrections in the minutes.

President Scott at 7:30 P. M. then declared the sixty-third convention of the International Typographical Union adjourned sine die.

J. W. HAYS, Secretary-Treasurer.

A. W. THOMSON

Whereas, In the death of A. W. ("Booth") Thomson the International Typographical Union lost one of its most noble and conscientious members; one who through an unselfish career devoted his efforts to the upbuilding and elevation of our grand organization; and who, in the closing years of a busy and active life, dedicated his labors to the education and proper training of the boys apprenticed to the printing trade; and,

Whereas, The fruits of his work in the interest of the apprentice will serve as an everlasting monument to the memory of "Booth" Thomson, and will also bring its full measure of benefit to every local union affiliated with the International Typographical Union; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the International Typographical Union at its sixty-third session in convention assembled at the city of Colorado Springs, Colo., hereby expresses its heartfelt sympathy at the death of our esteemed and beloved fellow member by assuming a standing position for a period of one minute; and, be it further

Resolved, That an engrossed copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the widow of the deceased, and the same spread upon the minutes and printed in the proceedings of this the sixty-third convention of the International Typographical Union.

A Beautiful

WATCH FOB

Which really must be seen to be fully appreciated.

The pendant is of iridescent pearl in its marvelously rich scintillating effect.

Imposed on the front of the pendant is our Button in colors, hard enameled and altogether making an unusually dressy watch fob.

In order that our entire membership may be able to obtain one of these fobs the price has been placed at FIFTY CENTS each, a most reasonable sum for this splendid piece of emblematic jewelry.

A Good Compositor Is Not a Tradesman

In the Ordinary Sense of that term

HIS is a trade that is more progressive than most professions. To advance or even hold his own, a compositor must keep posted on what other compositors are doing.

To maintain a place in a progressive industry, one must be progressive. Are You?

Will You Be Prepared to Fill the Vacancies in Your Ranks?

Compositors: Many of your fellow workers at the keyboard are soon going to "do their bit" at their country's call. Are you prepared to take their places and keep "business as usual," "till the boys come home"? You can help by learning the Monotype keyboard, and at the same time better your finances so that you can help those who go.

THE MONOTYPE SCHOOLS

offer you this opportunity to learn the nicest part of the business. The work is easy, it is clean, it is healthful and remunerative; no gas fumes, no poor ventilation mars its pleasantness. It is not at all difficult to learn, and your future is assured.

You will find no better way to help your country than by learning yourself and helping those who cannot go to the front or who have returned to become operators. The Monotype School will help without charge for tuition.
